Old Winter Coughs Now Easily Cured

A New Remedy Now Cures Without the Use of Cough Syrups or Drugs

Just think of it—you can clear away that hard, racking cough, drive it completely out of the system, make yourself perfectly well by the new breathing cure that employs no medicine at all.

You wonder how; very simple, indeed; you simply breathe in through a Catarrhozone Inhaler rich balsamic essences that heal and soothe away the cough in a few hours' time.

In using Catarrhozone you bathe the lining of the nose and throat with that powerful antiseptic of the Blue Gum Tree of Australia, which is probably the surest cold and cough cure in the world to-day.

Clarence B. Cresswell, writing from Medicine Hat, says: "To cure a [illegible] cold in about ten minutes the one thing I know of to do it is Catarrhozone. To relieve an irritated throat quickly, nothing can excel Catarrhozone. It clears up a cough or cold of any kind. I know of colds that have hung on for months that Catarrhozone cured quickly. Nearly every man I know carries a Catarrhozone Inhaler with him day and night, and in this country it makes a wonderful protection against all winter ills."

Get the dollar outfit, including the hard rubber inhaler, and medication to last two months; medium size 50c, sample size 25c, at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A Correction.

In our issue of Dec. 31st, appeared an error. We noted that the caretaker of the public lavatory was Mr. Mark Curtis instead of Mark Spencer. Our reporter having the name "Mark" in his mind had memories of the genial and prosperous Mr. Curtis [illegible] in the back part of his gray matter. Thinking of Mr. Curtis [illegible] his pencil was that name instead of Spencer. Both are most estimable citizens, but Mr. Curtis is certainly not in charge of any lavatory.

Ticket of Leave Man Pinched.

On Saturday afternoon Detective [illegible] arrested John Lashaw, who is said to be a "ticket of leave" [illegible] of Elmira, N.Y. reformatory who was not supposed to leave the State of New York. Chief [illegible] received a telegram from the New York authorities asking him to look out for Lashaw. The result was that P.C. Newhall saw the looked-for man on George street and pinched him. Lashaw has three years to serve.

Train Time Changes.

Owing to a re-arrangement of the Grand Trunk Railway system, now in force, the numbers of all the trains here will be changed. This affects the trains running through this city on the Belleville-Lakefield subdivision. Train No. 21, from Port Hope to Toronto, will be No. [illegible]. No. 22, between Toronto and Port Hope, will be changed to No. [illegible]. Train No. 24 (the 9 o'clock from Toronto), will be No. 14. The train due to arrive here at 8.20 from Belleville, formerly No. 16, will now be No. 46 and the 1.50 train to Belleville will be No. 160, instead of No. 49.

Sir—Why do you say in your election pamphlet that the people who brought me out are in active opposition to Hydro-Electric, when you know the statement to be untrue. And when you know further that I have been one of its strongest supporters in this city, which is vouched for by all the members of your city council?

Do you make this statement to support it after election day?

In your answer explain why, if you were so [illegible], you said this [illegible] high water power for $2,[illegible] once offered to the city at $150,000.00. Is this not also better explained after election day?

Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

SIR WILFRID'S MISTAKES

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am pleased to see that interest is being awakened in political matters, now that parliament is about to assemble. Here are a few of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's mistakes:

In 1867 he opposed Confederation, and he was wrong.

In 1878 he opposed the National Policy, and he was wrong.

In 1880-81-82 he opposed the construction of the C.P.R. and the development of the West, and he was wrong.

In 1891 he favored Commercial Union, as against moderate protection for Canadian industries, and he was wrong.

In 1911 he entered into an agreement with President Taft which would have made Canada "an adjunct of the United States," and he was wrong.

In 1912 he opposed giving immediate and effective assistance to the Naval forces of the Empire, and he was wrong.

In 1913 he claims that "free food" will solve the high cost of living, and again he is absolutely wrong.

"Cost of high living" by the Laurier party when in power was a greater burden on the people than the "high cost of living" is now.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has about run the gamut of trade policies. Commercial union, free trade as they have it in England, protection while in power, reciprocity, and now comes the latest nostrum,—free food. Next!

To The Electors of The North Ward

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

In making an appeal to you for your support in the coming municipal elections, I fully realize the handicap I am under in being a stranger to quite a number of you, even though I have been practising my profession here for seven years. My policy briefly is this:

An honest endeavor to show a dollar's value for every dollar expended, and the most economical and efficient government of the city's affairs. To attain this I have acceded to the wishes of a large number of the ratepayers in offering myself as a candidate for Alderman in the North Ward. Should I find it impossible to see you all personally before election day, I wish to make a most earnest appeal for your vote and influence, and can assure you that I will deem it my duty to fully merit your confidence.

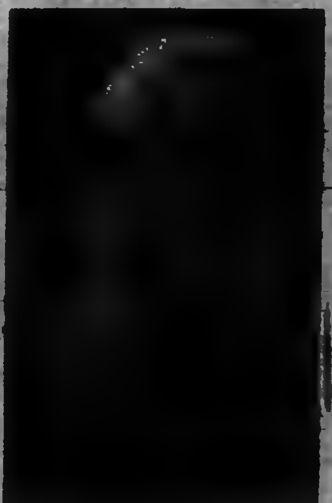
To The Electors of Ward One

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

A number of ratepayers request me to offer myself as a candidate for the representation of the above Ward in the coming Aldermanic election. I have consented to stand, and ask for your vote and influence.

If elected, I will seek to the utmost of my power, to promote the highest interests of the city.

Yours respectfully,
JOSEPH SAUNDERS.



TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Last year a large number of ratepayers requested me to be a candidate for Water Commissioner in opposition to Mr. Moore. I not only declined to be a candidate but did what I could to prevent opposition. The Commissioners at that time had law suits on with the contractors where about thirty thousand dollars of the people's money was at stake. Mr. Moore being a lawyer I considered he should be the best posted man on the Commission to fight the contractors and in the interest of the City it would be a mistake to remove him.

This year I have again been waited upon by a large representation of the ratepayers who believe that with my thorough knowledge of all the waters in this district and my nine years experience as alderman I should be a capable man for the position. I have consented to be a candidate and my past record in the Council I think is proof that if elected will give you faithful and honest service.

The taking over of the Hydro-Electric system will require a great deal of time—more than any man who has a large business to attend to can spare. Not being in business I can give all the time required, and if necessary will make a personal inspection of every house in the city so that rich and poor are treated alike.

I can see no reason, with the large body of ready made reservoirs of the Otonabee River there should be any shortage of water for either house, hall or lawn service, or why there should not be a reduction in the water rates. A good supply of good water is a necessity in every house and should be available for the people at a low rate.

To the ratepayers who are new residents of the City and not personally acquainted with me, would say that for a number of years I occupied the position of alderman, and always stood at the head of the poll both as a representative of No. [illegible] Ward and also after the Ward system was abolished.

General street railway extension and cheap transportation, like cheap light and water, should be the goal of our municipal government. [illegible]

Trusting that the ratepayers will [illegible]

Unanimously Endorsed by the Trades & Labor Council

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—At the earnest request of a large number of the ratepayers I have consented to be a candidate for the position of Mayor for the year 1914.

Being born and having lived all my life in Peterborough, and my whole life's savings being invested in Peterborough, I naturally have a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the City.

Should I be elected I promise you that I will guard to the very best of my ability, the interests of the ratepayers and will oppose all unnecessary expenditure. I will do my utmost to keep down the ever increasing rate of taxation consistent with needs of a growing City.

I may say that I am in favor of Municipal Ownership, and am in favor of having all city work done by our own people instead of bringing in outsiders to do it.

I will endeavour to see that the ratepayers get value for every dollar that is expended.

I have had considerable experience in municipal matters, having served ten years in the Council and fourteen years on the Board of Education, being Chairman of that Board for two years, I was also Chairman of the Board of Health for several years, so that you will see that I am not without a fair share of experience.

Should you do me the honor to elect me as Mayor of our City I will do my best to serve you to the extent of my ability.

Yours respectfully,

VOL. XLI. NO. 4 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, JAN. 6, 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

Peterborough Elects Buller As Mayor For Year 1914

Gillespie And Hartley Go Down to Defeat After Polling Big Vote

Hicks Elected Water Commissioner by a Good Majority Over Mr. McWilliams

Stratton and Saunders the New Members of the Council

Wm. H. Buller was yesterday elected Mayor of Peterborough City for the year 1914 by a majority of 350 votes, which handsomely demonstrates the fact that he has not lost any of his old-time popularity as The People's Candidate in municipal affairs. Messrs. Gillespie and Hartley, second and third in the race, respectively, each polled a large vote. Three-cornered election contests are usually very uncertain, and this one proved no exception to the rule. Mr. Hartley did not enter the field until the contest was well under way, which unquestionably lost him votes, as many citizens had then pledged their support, and could not honorably withdraw. There was no issue to be contested, the contest being purely one of personal choice. Many no doubt felt that Ald. Buller was entitled to promotion as a reward for long, faithful and efficient service on the Council Board. Both of his opponents have also served in the Council, and [illegible] to Mayor-Elect Buller falls the honor of the largest [illegible].

The election of Mr. [illegible] Hicks as Public Utilities Commissioner (majority 351) cannot be said to be a surprise, as he is an old resident of the city, an ex-alderman, and has the reputation of being a [illegible] and election campaigner. Mr. McWilliams has no reason to feel downcast over the result, as the large vote polled on his behalf shows that he is favorably regarded by a large section of the community.

A phenomenally big vote was polled yesterday as a result of the Mayoralty campaign.

Ald. Duffus polled the biggest Ward vote in the city, his majority is [illegible] total vote [illegible].

Hydro-Johnston won the biggest majority Ward vote—412; his total Ward vote was [illegible] of the day, being [illegible].

After getting all his votes in Ald. Buller had [illegible] minutes in which to reach May's school house, North Monaghan, and cast his vote there. And he made it in six minutes in a "Ford" auto.

People Acclaimed.

When the result of the polling for Mayor was known, Mayor-Elect Buller was driven around Centre City in a hack, the [illegible] Band in attendance, and thousands of citizens enthusiastically acclaiming Peterborough's new Chief Magistrate in a [illegible] manner.

In the Mayor-Elect carriage were seated Mayor [illegible], Ald. Duffus and Johnston. Also John [illegible] and Wm. Lytle, Ald. Buller's nominator and seconder for Mayor.

Speeches.

On returning to Ald. Buller's Committee rooms on George street, the road was blocked by a cheering host of admirers of the successful trio—Mayor-Elect Buller and Ald.-Elect Duffus and Johnston.

In response to [illegible] calls, his newly elected [illegible] appeared at a committee room window and in a brief and appropriate speech thanked the citizens for the honor conferred upon him. He appreciated that results had shown he is still The People's Candidate, and felt that he had been elected, not only by the [illegible] whom [illegible] and worked all his life, but also by all classes. He pledged himself to use his high office for the fostering of perfect community harmony, with the [illegible] and in view of promoting the [illegible] of all citizens alike and [illegible] a greater Peterborough. ALD.-ELECT A. H. STRATTON

FIVE TRUSTEES WERE ELECTED

Result in Board of Education Contests Offered Few Surprises

The election of Trustees for the Board of Education this year created comparatively little interest, as compared with the Aldermanic contest. There were five vacancies on the Board, all of whom sought re-election, as follows:

- John Crane.
- W. H. Hill.
- Dr. George Burnham.
- Dr. [illegible].
- J. W. Miller.

THE VOTE

The following is the result of yesterday's poll. The names capitalized are the winners:

DR. BURNHAM	[illegible]

ALD. RE-ELECT JOHNSTON

BOTH BY-LAWS WERE BEATEN

Ratepayers Are Adverse to Further Large Expenditures

The ratepayers yesterday by a substantial majority, put their veto on incurring further liability in the shape of debentures, by voting down the two money by-laws by overwhelming majorities. The total vote on the by-laws last night were not available.

ALD. RE-ELECT ANDERSON

The City Elections

Yesterday settled the question of who shall control the city's municipal destiny for 1914. The weather, although sharp, was bright, thus bringing out a big vote. The various candidates seemed to be almost universally "autos' men," as rigs and auto flew in every direction, bringing to the polls the [illegible] voters, who turned out in good numbers. As each candidate has already had his views quoted on local public affairs, including hydro, power, Dalhousie Street bridge, etc., a rehash after the battle has been fought is unnecessary. There were 22 polling divisions throughout the five wards, at each of which the returning officers were kept busy.

HYDRO-JOHNSTON'S THANKS

To the Electors of North Ward,—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

Permit me to tender you my warmest appreciation of your loyal support in yesterday's Aldermanic contest, the result of which is most gratifying to me, not only from a personal standpoint, but in that the North Ward appreciate our Hydro-Electric Policy, the chairmanship of which committee I was honored with last year.

I also thank my supporters who worked so hard and faithfully in my interests during the campaign.

With assurance that I shall do my utmost during the coming two years to serve you faithfully, and with best wishes for your happiness and prosperity.

Believe me,
Faithfully yours,
WM. J. JOHNSTON.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY MAKING BRAVE FIGHT AGAINST DEATH

If He Recovers the Premier Will Never Again be Able to Engage in Politics

New York, Jan. 5.—The condition of Sir James Whitney, confined to an apartment in the Hotel Manhattan, was grave to-day, according to the statement of Hon. Dr. Pyne who was in constant attendance. Dr. Pyne said this morning:

"I am sorry to have to state that Sir James Whitney is not improved to-day. He has passed a good night for one so ill, but we can note no improvement over yesterday. What appeared to be a nervous and overwrought condition is now gravely complicated by heart affection, which is difficult indeed to cope with. I do not want to be [illegible], so I will say exactly that Sir James' condition is serious, but that is all."

Specialists Assist Dr. Pyne

Dr. Pyne absolutely refused to go further into details concerning the condition of the distinguished patient. Sir James is attended by relays of professional nurses, and Dr. Pyne has surrounded himself by well known New York consultants. Every effort is made at the hotel to keep the apartment on the fourth floor as quiet as possible, and visitors are met in the lobby down stairs by Dr. Pyne, who does not leave the hotel even for a moment.

Keep Out Street Noises

The Manhattan Hotel is located at 42nd Street and Madison avenue where traffic is enormous, and but a short block from the Grand Central Depot. Bettered windows, however, keep the street noises from the apartment. Dr. Pyne was asked this morning if he had any idea of removing the patient to a hospital, and he declined to be quoted further.

MAYOR-ELECT BULLER'S THANKS

To the Electors of Peterboro City

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

Permit me to thank you heartily for the substantial majority with which you endorsed my candidature for Mayor of this city at the polls yesterday, coupled with the assurance that my best efforts in the interests of the community as a whole are at your service during nineteen hundred and fourteen.

To my working supporters also my warmest thanks are due for the loyal manner in which they rallied around The People's Candidate during the mayoralty campaign, to whose hard work in my behalf I am indebted in no small measure for my election.

Believe me, I shall endeavor to serve you faithfully and well in the position of Chief Magistrate of Peterborough, and strain every nerve to justify the confidence placed in me.

Yours faithfully,
WM. H. BULLER.

ALD. DUFFUS' THANKS

To the Electors of the West Ward,—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

I desire to convey to each and everyone my very sincere thanks for the marked expression of confidence you have shown me by electing me again to the honorable position of Alderman, by the handsome majority of 362.

I am at your service and I will be only too happy at any time to do all that lies in my power to carry out your wishes, consistent with the [illegible] of the City, and to receive from you any requests or suggestions pertaining to civic matters.

Again I thank you and those who [illegible] candidature, and my earnest wish to ALL citizens is that Health and Prosperity and a bounteous share of good things be theirs in the years that are to be.

Yours faithfully,
JOS. J. DUFFUS.

LADIES VOTED WELL

Ladies and Spinsters Turned Out in large Numbers

The women of Peterborough turned out in considerable numbers to record their votes for the candidates of their choice, thus showing their keen interest in municipal affairs.

It is said that Mr. Gillespie and Mr. McWilliams had the largest number of active supporters among the ladies, the former no doubt on account of his temperance sentiments and the latter also because he has always been a teetotaler.

ALD. RE-ELECT DUFFUS

THOUSANDS AWAIT ELECTION RETURNS

Never in the City's History Have Citizens Taken More Interest in Civic Elections.

Probably never in the history of the city has there been deeper interest taken in the civic elections than in the contest which terminated yesterday. The fact that there were sharp contests in every ward was largely responsible for this. The three-cornered fight for the Mayor's chair and the contest over the vacancy on the Board of Water Commissioners, gave additional spirit to the election.

Along about seven o'clock the streets became filled with people anxious to learn the result, which was supplied by bulletin and otherwise.

In another column will be found figures in detail.

INDICTMENT OF TWO NEGROES EXPECTED

Chestertown Excitement Cools as Grand Jury Pushes Investigation.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 5.—Excitement which marked proceedings of the grand jury at work on the James R. Coleman murder case yesterday had [illegible] disappeared this morning. It was expected that before the day was over indictments would be returned against Norman Mabb and James Pennamy, negroes who have confessed to the killing and robbing of the aged farmer, and that the trial would be under way.

The authorities maintained a vigilant guard in and about the jail all night, but there was no outbreak, and [illegible] of the grand jury to [illegible].

Judge Constable directed the grand jury to investigate the attack on the jail last Saturday night. He said every man who engaged in the attack should be indicted.

Presentments against Mabb and Pennamy, charging them with the murder of Coleman were prepared, and it was expected that indictments would be reported quickly.

DECAY AND DIRT.

These Seem to Be the Prevailing Conditions in China.

"Along the road—and this is characteristic—nothing is being repaired," writes the Peking correspondent of the London Times. "It is the national failing to spend nothing on repairs, to build and then leave the building to fall gradually into decay and ruin. Nor is anything cleaned, and the squalor that is a feature even of the imperial palace in Peking is most extraordinary. A few miles out of Honanfu there is a fine stone bridge of five arches, but the piers are falling away, the parapet has disappeared, and the flagstones with which it is paved have great gaps and hollows, so that the cart rumbles and crashes and bumps across it in a way that would break any but a Chinese springless cart. To repair is no one's business."

At another stage in his journey he remarks: "Perhaps to some extent the anticipated coming of a railway, which will kill the present cart traffic, may account for the shocking condition of the native inns. With railway extension in the air there is no inducement for the innkeeper to spend money on the upkeep of his hovel. Nothing is repaired. Their filth and squalor are amazing. In the inn yard the well has its mouth below the level of the soil, so that water which is spilled only flows back into the well and carry with it the surface drainage.

"A doctor must notice the prevalence of consumption. To the universal habit of expectoration on the floor, the exclusion of air and the absence of drainage this prevalence must be due."

OILING THE ATLANTIC.

Proposed Plan to Smooth the Passage to Europe.

Pouring oil on the troubled waters will be much more than a metaphor if a plan offered by the United States hydrographic office is carried out. Its serious proposal is to keep the path between New York and the northern European ports well oiled so that the waves may be kept down and passengers may cross in perfect comfort.

The hydrographic office knows a lot about waves and claims that nothing is so bad for 'em as oil. Moreover, oil spreads quickly and thinly over the water, and hence the calming can be done at small expense. A quart of cheap petroleum an hour for each ship would, they say, do the work in decent weather, and $25 per trip ought to cover it easily. With the big liners constantly passing the part carried away by the ocean currents would be restored without delay.

Maybe some day we shall have a working crew to repair midocean washouts in the oil track. Meanwhile the hydrographic office will need more than crude oil to calm the storm of ridicule which this plan of theirs has awakened. Veteran sea captains claim that they have never yet seen an ocean that would hold still long enough to be oiled.—Success Magazine.

TALES OF RAZORBACKS.

How Hogs of This Breed Got Down a Steep Hill.

The group on the porch was talking about razorback hogs, and the storekeeper was telling a story.

"There was a feller travelin' through here," he said. "He was a stranger in these parts. One day he come across a bunch o' hawgs that had big slits in their ears. He figgered at them slits. They was too big for brands. 'What else could they be? After a bit a native come down the trail. 'Jess lookin' at them hawgs,' said the stranger. 'You was,' says the native. 'D'ye mind tellin' me what them big slits in their ears is for?' said the stranger. 'Not at all,' says the native. 'Have you noticed these hills?' 'What d'ye mean?' 'Noticed how steep they is?' 'Yes, I have.' 'Waal,' says the native, 'that's it. We have to put them slits in the hawgs' ears so they kin stick their hind legs through 'em an' rough lock themselves down these hills to keep from killin' themselves.'"

There was a salvo of very hearty outdoor laughter at this, and Mr. Andrews stirred behind his newspaper.

"That remin's me of one they use to tell down on the Arkansas line," he said. "There was a feller goin' through there too. He saw a drove o' razorbacks carryin' on mighty queer. There was about twenty o' 'em, an' they acted like they was crazy. They would run fust to one tree an' then to another, tryin' to climb it. Then they would spin aroun' on their noses, crack their tails an' squeal in the most plaintive way you ever heard. The traveler watched them hawgs for fifteen minutes, an' the more he saw o' 'em the more they puzzled him. Finally he went on through the woods till he come to a house. There was a man out in front. He was baskin' in the sun. 'Is them your hawgs up there in the hills?' the stranger asked. 'Yep,' says the native. At that the traveler stepped up an' looked his man in the eye. 'Say,' he said, 'what in the [illegible] [illegible]'s the matter with them hawgs?' The native kin' o' half smiled. 'They does act queer, don't they?' he says. 'I should say they does.' 'Waal, it's this a-way,' said the native. 'We had a hard winter in here this time, an' there was no feed in the hills for them hawgs. I had to let 'em have corn. Along late in the winter I tuk such a bad cof' I couldn't holler pig-ooey any more. I had to call 'em up by [illegible] the corncrib with a ax handle, an' now,' he says, lookin' back up the hill, 'them darn woodpeckers is [illegible] 'em crazy.'"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Arctic Magnetism.

The campaign for the extension of our knowledge of the magnetism of the earth is to be extended into the arctic regions during Captain Amundsen's north polar expedition, which is to start from Norway this summer in Nansen's former ship, the Fram. An American observer, Dr. Harry Edmonds, has been selected to accompany the expedition for this special purpose. Amundsen's plan is to enter the [illegible] [illegible] by way of Bering strait and then drift with the ice. While [illegible] not the special object to attain the pole, he hopes that the course of the [illegible] may take him across or close to it. The increase of geographical knowledge is his aim, and he expects to be absent about four years.—Youth's Companion.

THE PLAIN FROCK OF VELVETEEN IS OFTEN RELIEVED WITH A TOUCH OF BROCADE

Wide waists, shoulders and hips continue modish. The drop-shoulder, the girdle and the peg-top skirt are the means employed to bring about this effect, with often a cover to add a bit of extra breadth. This figure is far more graceful than the pinched waists and wide foot-lines of some seasons ago. Velour de laine, old blue, is used for the first costume illustrated here (8864). The sash, cuffs, collar and revers are of a [illegible] tinted brocaded silk in which there are touches of old rose and gold. The [illegible] that peeps forth is of a softly toned cream colored batiste. The wide shoulders and revers add to its effectiveness.

This design may be copied in size 36 with 6¼ yards of 36 inch material.

Black velveteen is here touched to brightness by the bandings of brocade showing several rich shades. This frock gains distinction through simplicity. It closes straight down the back and has at least [illegible] of the [illegible] not. A wide girdle of black [illegible] passes through [illegible] the gown and adds a smart touch. This frock may be made in size 36 with [illegible] yards of 36 inch material [illegible] yards of brocade for trimming. No. 8846—sizes 34 to 42. No. 8864—sizes 36 to 42. Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World
Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator
Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of [illegible] shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The attending physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were sifting their lives away.
Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. [illegible] his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot [illegible] how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The bottles and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.
Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always clears a [illegible]. Information free. [illegible]

Our Point of View

In these days of high meat prices no one, if he could, would make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. He would eat it.

—o—

Music in a modern hotel serves one very useful purpose. It drowns the noise that the newly rich make when they eat.

—o—

It seems that just as soon as some man succeed in gaining a residence on Easy street some other fellow comes along and attempts to shove him in the gutter. Such is life.

—o—

This great family journal is enduring some gloomy, chilly, and dreary days, and the only thing that is comforting is the thought that nature has made them the shortest of the year.

TWO YEARS' RECORD

Now that Parliament is about to meet, important questions will come up for consideration and action. It will not, therefore, be out of place to produce the record of the Borden government in the two years of its existence:

1. The annual grain blockades of the late administration have ceased.
2. A new outlet—the Hudson Bay Railway—is being rapidly completed.
3. A system of government-owned and operated terminal elevators is being constructed at Moose Jaw and Saskatoon, and another will be built at Calgary.
4. [illegible] rates have been reduced and freight rates investigated and a reduction expected.
5. The live stock industry has received a great impetus through the government's policy of aid to agriculture.
6. Conditions surrounding the ranching industry have been investigated and an aggressive policy has been formulated.
7. Water-powers of Western Canada have been investigated and a policy adopted which will conserve these for the people.
8. The appointment of the grain commission has placed the grain trade on a better basis.
9. Homestead regulations have been changed in the interests of the settlers.
10. The Bank Act has been revised to give greater [illegible]ism in borrowing to the settler.
11. A parcels post system will be inaugurated next month.
12. There has been a marked improvement in the customs and post office facilities.
13. A good roads' policy introduced but for the time blockaded by the Liberal Senate.

THE RECORD—Two years of Conservative administration has removed the grievances of the western farmers and improved the conditions of all classes on the prairie.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You?

IF YOUR COLOR IS BAD, IF YOU SUFFER FROM PIMPLES, HERE IS GOOD ADVICE

Fine Results in Two Weeks

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash, and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new —looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt as if I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box, five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

INSURANCE ON SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Editor Morning Times,

Dear Sir,—I am informed that Mr. W. H. Hill and the Davis-Thompson Co. hold practically all the insurance on the Public Schools of this city. Will The Times be good enough to give the electors the facts concerning this matter and oblige.

Yours truly,

Insurance Agent.

Reply—In answer to the above, it might be said that The Times asked Mr. Thompson, Secretary of the Board of Education, in reference to this enquiry. We are told by him that the school insurance is divided among at least six or eight local insurance agents. He further said that anyone seeking information on this subject can get full particulars by applying to him.—Ed. Times.

FREE TRADE AND PROTECTION.

Editor Morning Times,

Sir,—The letter of "Free Trader," in Thursday's edition of The Times, is very interesting. To me it shows that the writer is not only a[illegible], but also a thinker, and a student. With a great deal of his letter, I fully agree. Every man who studies economic conditions will agree with his remarks concerning the need for clear thinking, and a proper knowledge and recognition of basic principles. As he says, what is wrong in principle cannot be right under any circumstances. He agrees that the British farmer is being driven from the soil, but he does not believe that Free Trade has done the driving. He cannot deny, though, that the driving process has been done under Free Trade. There was no sign of it under Protection.

I have noticed, in speaking with free traders on this question, that they argue [illegible]. I mean by this, that they deny that the same is free trade and then they lay the blame on [illegible] conditions directly by free trade. One free trade friend tells us that he knows farmers in the North of Ireland who are more prosperous on a 25 acre, rented farm, than farmers on a 100 acre free land farm under protection in Canada. This, he apparently seeks to maintain, proves that free trade has not driven farmers in England off the land. Now, if this prosperity of the farmer in the North of Ireland, is true, why does not free trader explain why this is so? Stick to basic principles, free trader, and tell us is this prosperity due to free trade or to local conditions of farming. If free trade alone is responsible, why do the farmers in Ireland south of Ulster get less profits than your friends in the North of Ireland? Why the North of Ireland? How about the rest of Ireland and England? They are under free trade—just the same brand—as the North of Ireland farmer, and yet the farmer in the north gets such prosperity. Why is this?

The answer, my friend, would show that free trade has nothing to do whatever with the profits of the North of Ireland and Protection has nothing to do with the lesser profits of the Canadian farmer. Strike an average between the average Canadian farmer under Protection, and the average farmer in Ireland and Great Britain, under Free Trade, and see who is best off. Extend this experiment over a period of ten years and then see who is best off—the free trade British and Irish farmer, or the protected Canadian farmer.

Now, let us see why the farmer friend of free trader in the North of Ireland is getting such a profit from this farm: I will take one consequence forbids me takings others. Take the average yield per acre of the chief cereals and potatoes in Ireland and in Canada. I take the following from Government returns for Dec., 1912: Average yield per acre in Ireland, 1911-12—Wheat in 1911, 36.7 bushels; in 1912, 34.6. Oats in 1911 58.7 bus.; in 1912, 60.3. Barley in 1911, 44.8 bus.; in 1912, 43.8. Potatoes in 1911, 231.5 bus.; in 1912, 169.5.

Average yield per acre in Canada, 1911-12: Wheat in 1911, 21-41 bus.; in 1912, 20-42. Oats in 1911, 37.76 bus.; in 1912, 39.25. Barley in 1911, 28.94 bus.; in 1912, 31.10. potatoes, 143.82 bus.; in 1912, 172.19.

In spite of this difference in the average yield per acre, I disagree with free trader and maintain the opposite that the average farmer in [illegible] Canada is far better off than the average farmer under free trade in the British Isles. I hope my free trade friend will believe me when I say that I am like him, an earnest seeker after the truth in these, and all matters that affect us as fellow workers, and that I am just as sympathetic as he is, at the disabilities and the injustice that we of the working class labour under, with the present system of protection and distribution. Space forbids me to say more now, but I thank free trader for his letter, and I should like very much to become acquainted with him.

ADVISES WOMEN TO RESIST TAX

New York, Jan. 5.—Militancy is not involved in the appeal issued by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw's Woman's Suffrage Association to suffragists who refuse to pay income taxes until they are given the right to vote. Dr. Shaw asserted last night that she advocated only a passive resistance to the government's [illegible].

Dr. Shaw said she would refuse to make returns to her tax assessor and if fined by a court would refuse to pay the fine. If sent to jail she will not start a hunger strike, she said adding: "I should not thus destroy my health. I'm of more worth to the suffrage cause while I'm in good health than I would be if I was starved."

In explanation of her letter to the suffragists, Dr. Shaw said:

"I hold it is unfair to the women of this country to have taxation without representation, and I have urged them to adopt a course of passive resistance like the Quakers, instead of aggressive resistance."

Washington, Jan. 5.—Resistance on the part of the women of the country to the federal income tax law, despite the government's announced intention of imposing a fine of $1,000 for each failure to report income, will receive the encouragement of the Suffragists' Congressional Union, it is announced in a statement issued by the organization headquarters here.

PLAY GIVEN IN PRISON CHAPEL

Auburn, N.Y., Jan. 5.—For the first time in the history of Auburn prison a professional theatrical company presented a complete play for the sole entertainment of convicts. "MAMMY" OF WILSON HOSTS BANGS DOOR

Miss Smith Can't Understand Why Reporters "Harass" Them So.

New Orleans, Jan. 3.—With a bang that rattled the glass a negro maid at the Smith home, on [illegible] avenue, where Miss Eleanor Wilson is stopping, slammed the door in the face of a reporter of The Item Monday morning.

In high dudgeon because she had been familiarly referred to by the good old-fashioned term of "black mammy," the woman stuck her head out of the door while the reporter was speaking to a gentleman of the house about the plans of Miss Wilson. Without waiting for them to finish speaking, she jammed the door to between their faces.

The negress had presumably been sent down by the ladies, from the tenor of her message.

"Day say dey aint gwine see you," she bawled. "I ain't black, neither!"

The circumstance was only one of the several insults that the newspapers of New Orleans have received at the hands of the president's daughter and the Misses Smith since Miss Wilson has been in New Orleans.

Although the old town figuratively took off its hat to Miss Wilson, she has not throughout sent any small message of good will to New Orleans.

According to Miss Mary Smith they do not understand why they should be so "harassed with a crowd of newspaper reporters."

For that reason the Smith doorbell is said to have been detached from the ringer and Miss Smith declared that they were going to have the telephone disconnected also—as they did not wish to "be disturbed in that manner."

What Miss Wilson's plans were for Monday, the gentleman in the house said, were unknown to him.

"They have not decided, I think," he declared. "They are upstairs dressing now, and I cannot say."

He was very courteous.

DRUNKENNESS IS CAUSE OF 46 PER CENT. CASES DOMESTIC INFELICITY

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Drunkenness is responsible for 46 per cent. of the cases of domestic unhappiness that have been tried in the court of domestic relations during the last year, according to the annual report to-day. The interfering mother-in-law caused trouble in only six per cent. of the cases, and the father-in-law in only one. Other causes of the family quarrels here, enough to reach the court were:

Immorality of husband, 12 per cent.
Immorality of wife, two per cent.
Ill-temper of husband, three per cent.
Ill-temper of wife, three per cent.
[illegible], four per cent.
[illegible], three per cent.
[illegible], one per cent.
Other causes, 21 per cent.

The court advocated the passage of laws compelling wardens of penitentiaries and workhouses to pay a portion of prisoners' earnings to the support of their dependent relatives.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE IS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

They love to take it and it doesn't harm the tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When you child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mother keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

PENALTY OF $80,000 COLLECTED FOR STATE

Albany, Jan. 3.—A penalty of $80,000, the largest ever received by the State for a violation of the game law has just been collected by the Conservation Commission through the Attorney-General from the Franco-American Poultry Company of Little Falls, N. J., and A. Site of New York, a big game dealer.

The Franco-American Company is a New Jersey Corporation operating farms for breeding wild black and mallard ducks for market purposes at Little Falls, N.J., and at Goshen, N. Y.

Wild ducks which had been captured in Virginia were sold in the City of New York on the representation that the ducks had been raised at the Goshen farm.

The commission was informed of this and successfully prosecuted the case.

DO YOU KNOW

That when you put a salve onto your child's skin, it passes through the pores and enters the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal essences provided in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal oil or fat, and no poisonous mineral coloring matter. From start to finish it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, various sores, boils, burns and bruises more quickly than any other known preparation. DIGGING THE BIG DITCH

How the Steam Shovels Make the Dirt Fly at Panama

The steam shovels stand on terraced levels and in fifty minutes load a train of eighteen flat cars, which are unloaded in fifteen minutes more amid a shower of dust. The line of cars is followed by "spreaders." All through the cut puffs of steam here and there indicate where the shovels are burrowing their way and pushing the work forward. Watching shovel 221, I stood on engine No. 266 when she was at work. Engineer Harrison, his hand on the lever, was pushing the cars up in due course as the steam shovels filled them, while the conductor, raising and lowering a flag, directed a "shove-up," so that even while loading it is sometimes necessary for an engineer to keep his hand on the throttle. One shovel accomplished probably as much work in a day as could be done by 600 men, and there is a great deal of rivalry among the operators to make the best record.

The record of steam shovel 223 for one hot day shows how the dirt flies on the isthmus. Three hundred and thirteen cars were loaded in 470 minutes. In the language of Larry O'Grady, this was "going some," almost an average of a car a minute, with eleven seconds grace, or a rate of a cubic yard of earth every seven seconds. A remark was made by a red eyed man of unknown nationality, "It looks as though the dirt had wings, doesn't it?" Over 50,000 cubic yards of rock have been taken out in twenty-five working days by one shovel, and a completed tunnel through the cut is excavated within every month.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

German Aloofness.

The egg cups imported into India at one time all came from Great Britain. The Indian eggs are, however, very small, and the egg cups did not fit. A German traveler noticed this small flaw and got his firm to make smaller egg cups and export them there. All the trade is now in German hands. In Africa the scissors imported from Sheffield were found to be rather dangerous weapons to place in the hands of the natives, owing to their sharp points. The Solingen Steel works sent a lot of round pointed scissors out, which found favor, and now Germany has captured the whole market.—From "Germany of the Germans."

Saving the Edelweiss.

The edelweiss, responsible for so many deaths, is becoming rare. The plant when it is culled is not of particular beauty, but the fascination of picking it is in an inverse ratio. Natives of the poorer class gather the flower, and tourists buy it for the same reason as certain anglers buy trout. The Bavarian government is so alarmed at the threatened destruction of the [illegible] "world" that a law has been passed to penalize the gathering without a permit. The measure is somewhat drastic, for even a proprietor who wishes to gather the flower must first obtain a permit.—London Globe.

A FOREST GIANT

Monster Tree Trunk That Rivals the Famous Fallen Monarch

A rival of the giant tree, the Fallen Monarch, familiar in pictures with a stagecoach on top of its trunk, has been found on the slopes of Bald mountain, in northern Tulare county.

It is in a region little visited and was first noted by S. H. Gallagher, an old mountain stage driver, two years ago. When Gallagher tried to return to it he lost the trail and did not find the giant tree again for months.

The great trunk lies in the forest, the lower two or three feet of it buried in the soil which has been accumulating for ages. It is believed that hundreds of years have passed since the giant tree fell, and the fires of ages have rolled over it through the forest. Much of the bark has been burned away, yet originally it was from twenty to forty inches thick. The trunk now is more than 100 feet in circumference, and it is a hard climb to get on top of it.

Bald peak is midway between the Sequoia National park and the General Grant National park. Near by is Redwood mountain, on which there are said to be 10,000 giant trees. The region, which is northeast of Visalia, is reached by stage to Badger valley, twenty-one miles, where Gallagher has a camp called Mountain camp.—Los Angeles Express.

DAILY SHORT STORY

MISS HALLOWAY OF CHICAGO

And the Way She Became Mrs. Parker of New York.

By MARY WOOD.

She was so decidedly petite that even when she drew her figure to its greatest height the assumption of dignity was laughable. But her eyes sparkled dangerously as she faced the bellboy.

The bellboy was impressed. He eyed the door as if meditating escape before she proceeded to stronger methods.

"Now, see here," she exclaimed belligerently, "this is the third note I have written to the office, and I want a reply this time."

"If you would go down to the desk," the bellboy insinuated apologetically, "Mr. Parker"—

"No; I will not go down to the desk," Miss Halloway interrupted decidedly. "That head clerk Parker, or whatever name he answers to, shall come up here or I will know the reason why."

The bellboy departed promptly. "And, by the way," she called after him, "just hustle along some telegraph blanks on your way back. I have a few things to say to my father and some of his friends concerning the lack of accommodations at the Great Eastern."

"Oh, Belle, Belle," wailed Mrs. Halloway, whose ample form had collapsed in one corner of a red plush sofa, "how can you make such a disturbance? Now, if your father was only here. But the two of us alone, without a protector!" And she rolled her eyes distractedly.

"Protector fiddlesticks!" said the energetic Miss Halloway. "Have you no spirit, mother?" She began to pace the floor excitedly. "Would you be treated as a nobody—you, the wife of Thomas P. Halloway? Consider your position."

Mrs. Halloway doubtless considered her position. She was absolutely at the mercy of her daughter's scathing tongue; therefore she maintained a discreet silence.

"They must be taught the deference due to us, the Halloways of Chicago," said the girl. She was very young and possessed of the follies as well as the graces of youth.

The bellboy now reappeared, holding out a handful of telegraph blanks like a yellow flag of truce. "Mr. Parker," he averred, "he says—he's coming."

Miss Halloway seized upon the blanks and flung herself into a chair beside the writing table. "There will probably be ample time to get off the telegrams before he comes. Things don't quickstep at the Great Eastern."

"But, Belle," Mrs. Halloway protested after the bellboy had closed the door in reverential fashion, "had you not better slip on another waist, Mr. Parker"—

"Mr. Parker," her daughter interrupted superciliously, "is a hotel clerk, a servant. This dressing sack is good enough for him."

She dashed off a telegram and read it aloud reflectively:

Dear Dad—We are being shamefully treated at the Great Eastern. If things are not remedied we will change to the Grand tonight. But don't worry. I am running this affair, and you can bet on me. ARABELLA HALLOWAY.

"I think that will make things hot for the Great Eastern," she said triumphantly. She did not hear the knock at the door nor its selonique opening. Her mother's voice startled her. "Belle, here is Mr. Parker, but remember"—

Mrs. Halloway's voice trailed off into a deprecating silence. Miss Halloway straightened up in her chair with the laudable pride of a judge about to confer sentence.

"Mr. Parker," she said impressively, "I have called you here to complain of the treatment to which we have been subjected by this hotel." She began deliberately enough, but the words soon tumbled over each other in her vehemence. "How dare you," she cried—"how dare you put us into this stuffy back room, an eight dollar a day room, when we have always been accustomed to an eighteen dollar suit? Do you know who we are—the Halloways of Chicago? Is not our money as good as or better than other people's?"

The clerk remained silent. And now for the first time Miss Halloway looked up—looked up and encountered the serene gaze of his brown eyes.

Mr. Parker, the clerk, was tall—unusually tall. But it was not merely his inches which gave authority of bearing; it was his self confidence, his mental poise. Intuitively Miss Halloway of Chicago realized that here was a man who would always be the master of circumstances, no matter how adverse the contrivings of fate. Her judicial complacency vanished, and shame, but pleased and defiant, stood as a culprit at the bar, for a twinkle lurked in the cool depths of the brown eyes as he said coolly:

"I can agree with you, Miss Halloway of Chicago, but only in part. Your money is as good as that of other people, but no better. At the Great Eastern first come must be first served, and that," with a half bow, "is why we have been forced to give this room to Miss Halloway of Chicago."

His tone was courteous, but the girl felt the sting of underlying reproof. It was a new experience for her. All her twenty years had not disciplined a person who would dare to oppose her. The great T. P. Halloway himself looked the necessary courage, or, rather, he openly encouraged her wilfulness as a reproduction of his own indomitable spirit. As for Mrs. Halloway, she was always a minus quantity on such occasions as domestic dissension. She preferred to be comfortably seated and using her tongue gently. Tears came easily and in bowing [illegible] to her heart's wishes or [illegible] outbreaks.

Now she looked appealingly at her daughter and whimpered, "Oh, Belle, don't, don't!"

Miss Halloway did not hear. Her [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] lips trembled piteously, and two large tears ran down her cheeks.

This was a new method of warfare. The redoubtable Mr. Parker stood aghast, then, as became a prudent general, threw out scout lines.

"Really, Miss Halloway," he said soothingly, "the whole thing is a trifle which we have foolishly exaggerated. In the morning you will laugh at your fancied grievances."

But still the girl's head was hidden in her folded arms, and her shoulders heaved. Mrs. Halloway sobbed, swaying comfortably back and forth. "If your father were only here!" she wailed.

Mr. Parker looked from one to the other despairingly. He was a young man. A woman's tears are sacred—to the chivalry of youth. He cast discretion to the winds and capitulated.

"Don't cry, Miss Halloway," he implored; "please don't. I think that perhaps I can arrange the matter. A personal friend of mine has one of the suits. Perhaps for you—yes, I am sure I can arrange it."

"On your word and honor?" asked Miss Halloway of Chicago.

"On my word of honor," he promised recklessly.

The girl lifted her head and laughed. She had not been crying at all. "You can stop your crying, mother," she said cheerfully; "it is all over with." She turned to the astonished Mr. Parker and extended her hand frankly. "And since you have acceded to my request," she said sweetly, "let me apologize for having asked in—well, a rather peremptory fashion. It is a way I have, unfortunately. Of course your promise holds good?"

"Of course," replied Mr. Parker a trifle stiffly. He could not avoid taking her outstretched hand. "Of course," he repeated more heartily as some mesmeric influence radiated from her finger tips to his. There was added respect as well as admiration in the brown eyes. He recognized her powers as a strategist.

Miss Halloway laughed. "I won, but I would not have if you had not been a gentleman. Mamma and I are very pleased to meet you, even in this informal fashion."

Mrs. Halloway beamed upon them. Peace and harmony were essential in her scheme of things.

And peace and harmony—and Mr. Parker—attended her and her daughter for the next few weeks. Mrs. Halloway beamed, Miss Halloway was radiant, Mr. Parker was confident—so confident, in fact, that Thomas P. Halloway on his advent on the scene felt called upon to interfere.

He did not hesitate, but Mr. Parker spoke first. It is a way youth has. And he did not mince matters. He struck straight from the shoulder.

"Mr. Halloway, I love your daughter; she loves me. We are going to be married. Have we your approval?"

"The mischief!" ejaculated the astounded T. P. Halloway. "Why, you're nothing but a hotel clerk. My daughter"— Words failed him.

Mr. Parker was quite unmoved. "She does not object," he said easily. "Some day I shall own this hotel; then you will not object."

T. P. Halloway glared at him. "I will," he snorted. "And the sooner you take yourself off the better."

"There is Belle to be considered," Mr. Parker insinuated gently. "She usually has her own way."

T. P. Halloway weakened visibly. "Yes, she usually does," he repeated more calmly.

And the matter of her marriage Mr. Parker insinuated gently. She did. And that is how Miss Halloway of Chicago became Mrs. Parker of New York.

SCIENCE WINS GIRL

How Mental Suggestion Works When Two People Think Alike

Scene—A drawing room. He and she.

He (a shy youth)—Are you interested in mental suggestion, Miss Arethusa?

She (demure and desirable)—Tell me about it, Mr. Summers.

He—It's rather odd, you know, but I'm afraid you—you are not interested.

She—Oh, yes, I am, Mr. Summers, so much.

He (encouraged)—Well, you think of something that you want another person to know, and you look at that person a long time. Seems foolish, doesn't it?

She—Not at all, Mr. Summers.

He—You look at the person until your thought passes into the other person's mind, and then the other person says something that shows she understands your thought.

(He draws his chair a little nearer.)

She—Isn't that lovely? Let's try it.

(He looks at her appealingly. She endures the scrutiny with remarkable patience. Nothing happens.)

She (after a long pause)—Yes.

He (amazed)—Why, that's wonderful! I—I was asking you mentally if you would marry me, and you answered "Yes." Oh, Arethusa!

She—Oh, William!

(A pause.)

She (presently)—Isn't science grand?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

KING OF MISSABOTTI

Toby, an old and decrepit aboriginal, said to be 125 years of age, recently died in the blacks' camp at Bowraville, N.S.W. The deceased was a very old man. To the oldest inhabitants of the Nambucca River he has always been regarded as exceptionally ancient. When the sixties were young, Mr. W. F. Sullivan, who claims to be the first white settler in the district, selected an area of land in Bowraville. Toby was then worn with age, and was fully 70 or 80 years old. A quarter of a century ago the gentleman mentioned presented Toby with a brass plate, on which was engraved, "Toby, King of Missabotti," and he wore that plate continuously until the day of his death. At the time of the presentation the deceased was the head man amongst the local blacks, and henceforth he was known as the "King of Missabotti." Local rumor weaves quite a tale of romance about the old man.

A STRENUOUS LIFE

A remarkable career has been that of Captain Pentecost, commander of the Cunard liner Saxonia, who has retired from the company's service. He was born in Sydney, N.S.W., joined the Cunard in 1880, being appointed commander in 1894. While in Burma he was attached to the Irrawaddy flotilla. He holds the Brazilian captain's certificate, also a first master's certificate for the inland waters of Burmah. Captain Pentecost's escapes from death have been as varied as his nautical career. On three occasions he fell from aloft while at sea, was washed overboard twice during gales, and once, off the Cape of Good Hope, he had a narrow escape from drowning. The damage to his body in these accidents included the breaking of all the lower ribs on his left side and the fracture of one of his arms three times. Notwithstanding these experiences, the captain, who is now in the prime of life, looks robust and fit for many more strenuous years.

FREAK NOTES

The Face of the Bill, Not the Back, Indicates Its Value.

Despite the careful scrutiny given every bill that leaves the bureau of engraving and printing, a number of "freak" notes find their way into circulation from time to time. Such a one was a note that once came to the subtreasury at New York. It had the imprint of a twenty dollar note on one side and of a ten on the other. But, inasmuch as the face showed the figures 20, $20 was the legal value of the bill.

In most cases the "freak" bills that have escaped the vigilance of the bureau's officers are national banknotes, which, like the regular treasury notes, are printed there. As intimated already, the face value is always recognized when the "freaks" come to be cashed at any branch of the treasury. The imprint on the back has no lawful status whatsoever.

The notes are printed in sheets. Usually there will be one twenty and two tens on a sheet. They are printed one side at a time, so it can readily be seen that the printer in turning over the sheet might get it upside down and then put a ten dollar back on the twenty dollar note or a twenty on the back of one of the tens.

When errors are discovered the misprinted sheet is laid aside to be destroyed. It cannot be torn up at once, for every sheet has to be accounted for. After some formalities it is ground into pulp.

Almost all the "freak" bills that have been issued in the past have found their way back to the treasury, there to be destroyed. It is thought that very few of them are now scattered about, and these are for the most part in the hands of curio hunters.—Harper's Weekly.

The Talipot Palm of Ceylon.

The talipot palm of Ceylon has gigantic fanlike leaves, which when fully expanded form a nearly complete circle thirteen feet in diameter. Large fans made of them are carried before people of rank among the Cingalese. They are also commonly used as umbrellas, and tents are made by neatly joining them together. They are used as a substitute for paper, being written upon with a stylus. Some of the sacred books of the Cingalese are composed of strips of them.

In going straight to the weak spot in treating disease? If so, you will never use anything but Papes for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and throat and lung troubles. Listen why!

Papes are tiny tablets, which contain rich medicinal ingredients, so prepared that they turn into vapour in the mouth, and are breathed down to the throat, the breathing tubes and lungs direct.

Cough mixtures go—not to the lungs and chest at all, but to the stomach. There is absolutely no direct connection between stomach and lungs.

"CATCH MY PAL" UNION

A Temperance Movement That Is Sweeping Great Britain.

Great Britain and Ireland are now being swept by a strong temperance movement which is being directed by the Irish Protestant Total Abstinence Union, or, as it is better known, the Catch My Pal Society. Its origin was singular.

July 13, 1909, Rev. R. J. Patterson, LL.B., a Presbyterian clergyman in the city of Armagh, happened to pass a lamp post around which stood six men, some of whom were recovering from the effects of a drinking bout the day before. One of the men suggested half in jest to Mr. Patterson that he should try and induce his companions to take the pledge. A conversation followed, and the six men promised to go the manse three days later as the curfew rang and take the pledge. The six carried out their undertaking, signed the pledge, and the union became an accomplished fact and grew rapidly.

From Ulster the organization spread to other parts of Ireland, and now branches are to be found south, east and west. Then the channel was crossed, and several of the large industrial centres in Scotland came under the influence of the movement, branches being formed in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Paisley and other towns.

The churches have taken a very laudable part in this organization and have worked tirelessly in promoting the cause.

The wonderful effect of the movement has surprised even those who hoped most from it. In many cases confirmed drunkards have become the best pledge keepers and the anxiety of the quondam inebriate to reform his boon companion has stirred the emotion of the most phlegmatic onlooker. The result is that in every town there are at least a score of members who, in the past deemed to be hopeless slaves of drink, are now living as respectable citizens. Moreover, trade has revived. Men are now paying their debts. Children are being better fed and clothed and a higher standard of living prevails among the people.

John Was Stung!

Some time ago John Burns, M.P., who is nothing if not precise in his methods, had an amusing experience with a policeman whom he suspected of breaking the law. While out walking one day "Honest John" observed a constable in deep conversation with a man in civilian dress. Just as Mr. Burns was nearing the two the civilian suddenly drew something out of his pocket and handed it to the policeman. Scenting a disregard of the law against tipping in the force, Mr. Burns was quickly at the policeman's side. "Open your hand!" he demanded in stentorian accent. For a moment the constable hesitated and looked very confused. "Open your hand!" repeated the now furious Mr. Burns. Slowly the policeman obeyed and extended his open palm, revealing to the M.P.'s puzzled gaze neither a piece of silver nor even a penny, but—a large cough drop! The next moment "Honest John" had disappeared.—London Ideas.

Origin of Kilts.

It will doubtless surprise many Scotchmen to learn that the kilt as at present worn is only a modern fancy costume and is not of Scottish origin at all. The honor of its invention is due to two Englishmen—an army tailor who accompanied Gen. Wade's troops to Scotland in 1720 and Thomas Rawlinson, overseer of some iron works in Glengarry's country. For more than a century previously, indeed, the tartan plaid had been the common garb of the highlanders, but it was all in one piece, wound in folds around the body, leaving the knees bare. Prior to the adoption of the tartan, which probably took place about the close of the fifteenth century, the long, loose saffron colored shirt, the real "garb of old Gaul," was the highland dress.—London Mail.

Shrewd Traders in the World.

There is a colony of merchants in Kingston, the capital of Jamaica, who can give cards and spades even to the bland Chinaman "for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." They take one match out of every box they sell until they have enough [illegible] to fill another box and so make an extra cent. They shave thin flakes off cakes of soap and boil these down to make other cakes. They put a thin layer of molasses on the bottom of the scoop with which they serve rice so that a few grains will stick to the bottom. These are but a few of their thousand tricks to turn a dishonest penny. Without doubt they are the sharpest traders in the world.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Blacks Oppose Change.

Lord Gladstone held his first native Indaba at Gaberones recently when he received several native chiefs. The chiefs said they wished to remain as they were, and did not desire the change that would be involved by the inclusion of Bechuanaland in the Union. The Governor-General intimated that it was his keen desire to safeguard the rights granted by Queen Victoria. Should change come, they would have no reason to fear for the continuance of just administration, and he, therefore, counselled them to enjoy their rights without agitation.

THE PRESENT INSTANT.

Science Defines It as the Hundredth Part of a Second.

A congress of European astronomers decided that the present time—that is, the present moment at any particular instant—consists of the hundredth part of a second. This has been settled on because these men of science have thought that it represented the tiniest fraction of time which could be appreciated by the human brain. Yet the thousandth part of a second is actually used in physical science, especially in certain important uses of electricity.

For scientific purposes, however, the official present moment flashes from the future to the past in the hundredth part of a second. This cannot seem so remarkable when it is recalled that speed records for both horses and men runners are officially calculated in fractions as small as one-fifth of a second.

But in astronomy it is needed to have the hundredth part of a second, for in that moment light can travel 2,000 miles. So time, which is, after all, only a figure of speech and is a mystery that no human brain can understand or fathom, must be considered relatively to one's sensations. The time to pull an aching tooth is really much longer to the sufferer than a whole night spent in sound sleep. It is more of the person's actual life. It demands more food to stand the nervous strain and the pain than hours of quiet rest.

Time, then, for all men is relative to their personal sensations. Yet time is real enough. It takes actual time for starlight to travel, in some cases thousands of years. It takes time for sound to travel and time for the electric wave to work actual results over long distances.

So that time is not only theoretical; it is as real as coal and wood. Yet this reality stretches over a human lifetime back to ages before the existence of the sun and the stars. For purposes of ordinary human work the second is small enough to use as a standard of value, but scientific men have progressed so far in knowledge that the second is too long a period for them to consider as the scientific instant. Therefore they have chosen the hundredth of a second as the standard for the length of time that they will consider as the actual moment at any one instant.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Spoiled His Act.

A musical artist announced to his friends that he had a feature for his act that was calculated to make the whole profession sit up and take notice. Several days later he was asked to divulge his plans.

"Oh, that's all off," was the answer.

"Well, if it was such a wonderful thing what was it?" was the general inquiry.

"I had planned to have a real skeleton," the musical man replied, "with its ribs tuned up so that I could play music on it like a xylophone."

"Great! Why aren't you going to do it?"

The musician heaved a sigh of disappointment.

"I tried it," he answered, "but somebody sold me the skeleton of a ticklish man and I couldn't hit the ribs."—Youngstown Telegram.

A Closed Discussion.

They had argued long and furiously over the question, "Can a man marry his widow's sister?" and the highly educated lawyer in the corner had waxed eloquent over the marriage laws of every state in the Union, every country in the world, civilized and uncivilized, and had cited the affinity tables of every church and even the legislation of Lycurgus down to that of Brigham Young, when a young man quietly announced his intense desire to be informed where the deuce a man was when his wife was a widow? Then the discussion closed down and fourteen exalted controversialists ordered iced water.—New York Times.

A Deep Pennsylvania Shaft.

The deepest shaft in the bituminous coal field in Pennsylvania, according to the report of Colonel Henry C. Demming, consulting geologist, mineralogist and chemist, is operated by the Maryland Coal company at St. Michael, about two and one-half miles south of South Fork, on the Dunlo branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. At the Maryland company's operation the hoist shaft is 607 feet deep and the air shaft is 671 feet. Within ten miles east of this point is the highest mountain peak in the state, Blue Knob.—Philadelphia Record.

Subway Travel.

American Medicine thinks that "the reported effect of subway travel is another instance of hasty and ignorant assumption." It says that it "is extremely doubtful, moreover, if the difference between the subway air pressure and that of the surface atmosphere is ever sufficient to affect the ear drum to any appreciable extent. The fear that there is to be any increase of deafness as a result of the development of subways in our large cities may be dismissed as quite groundless."

BASEBALL PITCHING.

Mordecai Brown's Hook Curve and How It Is Delivered.

Hugh S. Fullerton, writing in the American Magazine about the "Wonders of Pitching," says of "Three Fingered" Brown, the star twirler of the Cubs:

"Beyond doubt Mordecai Brown's hook curve is the highest development of the fast overhand ball which curves down and out, as all good curves do. Brown has but two entire fingers on his right hand and only fractions of the others. His first finger is cut off short, and the middle finger is crooked so that the first joint turns almost at right angles toward his thumb. Perhaps this mutilated hand is the secret of his marvelous curves. Brown pitches the hook overhand, releasing the ball at graduated points after the hand passes the line of the center of the body in swinging. Upon the point at which the ball is released by the fingers the place of the 'break' depends, and Brown can by regulating the point of release make it either describe a wide, fast arc or, after traveling fifty feet, break suddenly at a sharp angle from its original course. If the batter retires to the back of the batter's box Brown, by releasing the ball a flash sooner, can make it break in front of the batter, almost over the plate. If the batter moves to the front of the box to meet the curve before it breaks a sudden jerk of the pitcher's wrist makes the ball break several feet in front of the plate. He controls the point of the break or curve at will, except when the ball slips, as it sometimes will do even with the greatest of pitchers. Most players who faced him in duels between batter and pitcher concede Brown's curve to be the greatest of all, but the member of the Detroit team who batted against Overall in the world's championship series of 1908 will acknowledge that Brown is better. In the game that Overall pitched, the final one of the series, his curve broke in such an astonishing manner as to surprise even himself. Overall pitches his curve with a wide, sweeping, overhand swing, releasing the ball over the side of his index finger just as his hand turns downward."

Cradles Unfashionable.

Cradles are going out; children are not wearing them any more. People tell us that rocking is unhygienic. Babies, according to modern idea, should go to sleep naturally in a stationary germ proof bed with antiseptic pillows and a sanitized rattle. Sentiment may save the cradle for a little while, but sooner or later it will go to the dusty attic along with the haircloth sofa. Maybe the infant of tomorrow will bear up somehow under these accumulated misfortunes, will struggle along somehow to maturity, but what about the artists, the poets, the song writers? What a world of sentiment and melody has been woven around the theme of the mother and the gently rocking cradle! What kind of song will the poet of the future be able to make about an enameled iron crib with brass trimmings?—Success Magazine.

Telephoning With Light.

Photophony has reached a commercial basis in Germany. Ernst Ruhmer of Berlin has contrived an apparatus by which intelligible speech can be transmitted over a distance of nine miles with the aid of a beam of light. The principle of the machine is based upon the sensitiveness of an arc light to sound, combined with the property of selenium, of varying its electrical resistance with the slightest variations in the intensity of a ray of light falling upon it. A searchlight projector at the transmitting end and a selenium cell in a telephonic circuit at the receiving end are the essential features of the apparatus. For use in misty weather, when speech would be inaudible, the inventor has contrived a method of transmitting Morse sound signals by periodic pulsations of the light.—St. Louis Republic.

Good Time to Turn Farmer.

In theory there never was a better time than right now for a capable man to move from city to country. The movement has been away from the farm until prices of all kinds of food and fiber are high. There is nothing in sight to indicate that prices will be greatly reduced by increased production. A crop well grown and handled with good business judgment will be reasonably sure of sale at a fair price. There never was a time when it was so easy to learn new methods and the principles of scientific farming. A man starting now may receive at once the benefit of thirty years of the experience and study of good farmers and scientific experts.—H. W. Collingwood in [illegible] Magazine.

RIDING THE AIR.

The First Sensation That Comes In an Aeroplane Trip.

"All who have had the glad [illegible] to ride in an aeroplane," said one of 'em the other day, "unite in their description of their first sensation. There is no jerk in the starting, though the machine may leap forward with a powerful sweep. Then comes—with some—a brief sense of nausea, a feeling as if the ground were dropping away from beneath.

"A slight thrust of the lever lifts the flying machine's head; the ground drops away still faster. Then, as the aeroplane mounts higher, its occupant's eyes adjust themselves to the proper focus, and the surface of the earth below seems to be slipping past at halfway speed.

"By this time you have forgotten the clack of the noisy motor, the flap and whir of the propellers, the grinding of the chain and sprocket gear that drives them. All vibration has practically ceased, and you float along with a sense of springy ease and buoyancy such as you can gain from no other means of locomotion. That you are flying fast you know only from the roar of the wind in your ears and the slight difficulty you have in filling your lungs with air—the same sensation one gets in racing against the wind in an automobile on a good highway.

"Then comes the first turn. The machine rises to it, taking its own angle sideways, just as an automobile leans on the banked curve of a racing track. You have no sense of leaning sideways, though—no feeling that you must tilt yourself as you do when an automobile turns a corner, for you sit upright, the aeroplane slanting of its own volition to the necessary angle and slanting you with it.

"A glass of water set on the floor of the flier could be carried round curve after curve and still not lose a drop."—New York Telegraph.

COTTONSEED FLOUR.

The Wonderful Qualities Claimed For the New Product.

A Texas writer says cottonseed flour is to be added to the nation's dietary. It has been tried, and it is said to be an excellent food. It contains 54 per cent protein, 7.17 per cent starch and practically no fat. It is alleged it has a nutritive value more than five times that of wheat flour, nearly three times that of lean round of beef and from three to thirty times that of many of the best known and most commonly used articles of food.

By the addition of cottonseed flour to the national dietary millions of dollars will be added to the income of southern cotton growers and the tendency of some of the wheat operators to interfere with the price of bread will be checked. To the discovery of the nutritive values in cotton the country is indebted to Patten, whose attempt to monopolize "the staff of life" led many scientists to make inquiries and conduct experiments with a view to obtaining a food that might be a substitute for wheat or an auxiliary of the wheat supply. That it should have been found in cotton is somewhat surprising to those who thought the possibilities of this wonderful plant had been exhausted when cottonseed oil had been introduced. Great is King Cotton, that can both clothe and feed mankind.—Los Angeles Herald.

Her Baby Boy.

"If you have any doubt as to the healthfulness of Bulgaria and the sturdiness of its people, look at this picture." This passage was inscribed on a picture postcard received a few days ago from Pavelsko, a little village in that country. The picture shows a peasant woman standing at a rustic hedge, spinning flax by the most ancient method, with the fiber held over her shoulder by a forked branch. Behind the woman stands a stout man of more than the average height, wearing a full gray beard. Under this picture is the legend: "Baba Vasilka, 126 years old, and her baby boy, Todor, who is now 101 years old. They have always lived in Pavelsko."—New York Tribune.

Forbidden Tinder Boxes.

Six large factories and three smaller workshops in Austria are working at high pressure, writes our Vienna correspondent, to meet the orders for the tiny pocket tinder box which many smokers are now using instead of matches. The production is between 8,000 and 10,000 daily. In Spain, Portugal, France and Roumania the import of the tinder boxes is forbidden. Italy puts a tax of 1s. 3d. on each box in order to make the price of the tinder box equal to that of the number of matches, estimated at 3,000, that would be needed to replace the new apparatus. The minister of finance in Austria is considering the question of taxing the boxes.—London Mail.

The Right Way to Water a Lawn.

Lawns are frequently damaged by the droughts of summer, and they are also badly injured by the persistent watering they too frequently receive. There is only one way to water a lawn. That is to soak it so that the soil will be moistened for a foot or more deep and watering will not be needed for a week. Most people water a lawn every day whether the grass needs it or not, but they give only enough water to wet the surface. This practice results in the plants producing their working roots near the surface, and when the family goes away for the customary two weeks' vacation in the summer the lawn burns up [illegible].—Suburban Life.

Couldn't Breathe Through His Nose Stuffed With Catarrh

Catarrhozone Inhaler the One Means of Relief and it Cured Quickly.

The extraordinary efficacy of Catarrhozone is without a parallel. A sneezing cold is cured in ten minutes, a harsh cough is cured in an hour, the most offensive catarrh is thoroughly drawn from the system. In case of asthma and bronchitis the relief and certain cure that comes from the healing balsamic extracts in Catarrhozone is simply wonderful.

"For more than twenty years I suffered with a cough, bronchitis, asthma, and nasal catarrh," writes J. F. Fenwick, of Stanstead P.O. "Every attack I had seemed to grow worse and I could hardly breathe on account of an accumulation of phlegm in the nose and throat. One day I tried Catarrhozone and in ten minutes was wonderfully relieved. I could breathe freely and naturally through the nose, and blood spitting was stopped—the phlegm was cleared away and my regular breathing restored. No remedy can do more than Catarrhozone."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone lasts two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 25c and 50c. At all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

His two goats are named respectively "Filly" and "Yanny." It is understood that a shepherd is soon to be advertised for."

Lindsay Post: Mr. Edward Sanderson, one of the best known threshers in Ops, nearly lost two fingers in a pulper he was feeding on the farm of Mr. Blackwell, east of Lindsay. New York, Jan. 6.—Sir James Whitney much the same as yesterday. Passed a comfortable night.—Dr. A. R. Pyne, Dr. Herman Biggs.

New York, Jan. 6.—"Holding his own," described the condition of Sir James Whitney to-day. The issue still wavers in the balance. No [illegible] is expected before to-morrow morning.

NEW COMMISSIONER THANKS THE ELECTORS

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I would be insensible of my obligation if I did not express to you my sincere thanks for electing me to the position of City Water Commissioner by so substantial a majority.

In this testimony of my appreciation of your support I desire to include the ladies, business and professional men, the employed and unemployed, and particularly the valuable aid I received from so large a number of voluntary hard workers, who gave of their time and energy to accomplish my election.

To all of these and not to myself, do I attribute my [illegible]—for I know I am a poor [illegible], while my opponent is a past master at the art.

It is true that my majority is a very substantial one, but many of my friends claim [illegible] would have been elected by two to one. Perhaps this may be true, considering the misrepresentations made from one end of the city to the other. I have been astonished at the cunning and ingenious stories that have been circulated during the campaign, and it was laughable at times to hear the [illegible] that had been made by my opponent of what he would do if only he was elected.

In the North Ward I was represented as a bigoted Roman Catholic; in the South Ward as a rabid Orangeman; in the West Ward as a [illegible] and in the East Ward, as a poor [illegible] by my own [illegible] to [illegible] to the city's [illegible].

[illegible] the natural and [illegible] of these [illegible] I feel that the result is an [illegible] proof of the [illegible] for which I [illegible] and [illegible] that it will be my aim to serve them faithfully, and to prove to them that their confidence in me has not been misplaced.

Yours gratefully,

[illegible]

HOCKEY NEWS

Roman Catholic Toleration in Spain

Just now there is much ill feeling being aroused over the sentencing of a Protestant to prison for six months because he refused to attend Mass. The victim is a colonel in the naval artillery, and he declared that it was repellent to his conscience and his dignity as a man to attend the Roman Catholic service. For this offence, in the year 1912, he is to go to jail. We do not care particularly whether the colonel is a Protestant, a Jew, or a Mohammedan, but to send any man to prison for refusal to attend mass is nothing less than an outrage. If in Canada a Roman Catholic were to be sent to jail for refusal to attend Protestant worship, we would hear a good deal about Protestant intolerance; yet we venture to say that not one Roman Catholic paper in Canada will dare to say the thing is an outrage.

BOARD OF EDUCATION MET IN REGULAR SESSION LAST NIGHT

Last Meeting of 1913's Term--$8,200 Increase in Estimates for This Year--Deputation Will Explain to City Council Reason Therefore

The Board of Education met in statutory session last night, chairman Dr. Morrison presiding. There were also in attendance Trustees John Crane, Col. Miller, B. F. Ackerman, L. M. Hayes, V. Eastwood, W. H. Hill, J. J. Turner, Jr., Dr. Burnham.

Principal Kenner once more drew Board's attention to the fact that the ventilation of the Collegiate Institute is very bad.—Referred to the Property Committee.

Mr. V. Eastwood reported that the requirements of the Industrial classes will necessitate a call upon the Board for $1100 this year.

Mr. W. H. Hill moved, seconded by Mr. J. J. Turner, that Mr. Hesse Ritchie be re-appointed the Board's member on the Public Library Board for the ensuing three years.—Carried.

The Nicholls Scholarship debentures of $2000 having matured, this sum has been invested in city debentures at 5 per cent. This will net a revenue of $100 a year for scholarships, $10 more than heretofore.

Increase in Estimates.

The estimates call for an increased expenditure this year of $8,200. $[illegible] odd of this increase is occasioned by reason of the addition of several new teachers and a health supervisor, together with increases in teachers' salaries according to schedule. Then there is $400 increased expenditure in coal required for the new schools and the appropriation of $[illegible] for Industrial classes [illegible].

On motion of Mr. Turner, a deputation will wait upon City Council and explain the reason for this increase in the estimates for 1914 over those for 1913.

Bouquets.

Before retiring Chairman Dr. Morrison thanked the members of the Board for their support the past year, and the Chairmen of the several committees for their effective work. He congratulated the members re-elected, and regretted the retirement of Dr. [illegible], but felt sure his colleagues would always welcome new blood on the Board, when the people's choice is thus evidenced at the polls.

This was the last meeting of 1913's Board.

Little Freddie's Answer.

As little Freddie had reached the mature age of three, and was about to discard petticoats for manly raiment in the form of knickerbockers, his mother determined to make the occasion a memorable one. The fledgling was in ecstasies as he appeared at the dinner-table. Displaying his garments to full advantage, he edged close to his mother and whispered: "Mamma, can I call pa Bill now?"

MADE SERVE IN GREEK ARMY AGAINST HIS WILL

Hamilton, Ont. Jan. 5.—Friends of Alexander Christopher, who conducts a fine grocery store in Hamilton on James street north, maintain that he was born under an unlucky star in the presence of a cross-eyed doctor. Alexander is willing to admit anything that is said about his ill-luck.

Fifteen years ago he came to Hamilton with several brothers, and when they entered the restaurant business he started a grocery store. Fortune smiled on Alexander until two months ago, when word was received that his father died in Greece. He was chosen by his brothers to go back home to attend to the funeral arrangements, and it was his intention to come back to Hamilton in a month's time.

Fate stepped in and upset these calculations, however, for this morning Peter Christopher, another brother, received a letter from Alexander to the effect that he had been forced to enlist in the Greek army for three years service.

He pleaded he was now a Canadian and a British subject, but the Greek military officials refused to listen to his arguments and forced him to enlist under penalty of imprisonment.

Alexander is now making a special effort to secure leave of absence to come back to Hamilton to settle up his business affairs and dispose of his grocery store.

CARDS OF THANKS

TO THE ELECTORS:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I wish to express my gratitude to the electors for the very large vote polled in my favor, and for the expression of confidence in my candidature and policy.

Yours very truly,
J. B. McWILLIAMS.

TO THE ELECTORS:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I wish to heartily thank all electors (outside the "Ring") who supported and helped me to a seat on the Board of Education. Although at the foot of the list of those elected, you can depend on me giving you as effective service as is in my power to give.

Wishing you a happy New Year.

I am, yours truly
J. H. SMITH.

TO THE ELECTORS OF SMITH TOWNSHIP:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I desire to express my gratitude to the electors of the Township of Smith for the splendid vote recorded in my favor, which made me a member of the Council for 1914. I will endeavor to still further merit the confidence of the electors in giving the duties pertaining to the office my best attention during the ensuing year.

Yours very truly,
J. A. JOBB.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST WARD:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I wish to return my sincere thanks to all those who without solicitation gave me their support at the polls on Monday, which resulted in my re-election to Council.

I will in the future as I have in the past, use my best efforts to advance the interests of the East Ward and the city in general. Thanking you again, I am,

Yours,
J. C. ANDERSON.

TO THE ELECTORS:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I wish to hereby cordially extend my thanks to those whose support elected me as Alderman of Centre Ward. While I am grateful for the confidence so expressed, I shall try to do better than be merely grateful, I shall give my best efforts to deserving the confidence reposed in me, by giving the best possible service in my power, in the work of good, business-like management of the affairs of the city.

Your obedient servant,
A. H. STRATTON.
Peterborough, Jan. 6, 1914.

TO THE ELECTORS:

I wish to extend my most hearty thanks to the ratepayers of the city, both ladies and gentlemen, for the handsome support they gave me on Monday in the Mayoralty contest. I feel that considering the strong opposition I had against me, I made a good showing, and have no reason to be ashamed. I wish particularly to thank the working men and (members) of the Trades and Labor Council for their support. Wishing one and all a happy and prosperous year.

Yours very truly,
J. J. HARTLEY.

TO THE ELECTORS

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I wish to thank all the ratepayers who supported me on Monday for the position of Mayor. I accept cheerfully the voice of the people, and I wish Mayor-elect Buller and the Council of 1914 a prosperous year.

When Mr. Hartley entered the field it was evident to all what the result would be. The object intended has been accomplished.

The campaign has been free from any personal ill feeling between myself and the other candidates, and I trust our former friendship will continue in the future, and we will all unite in working for the interest of our growing city. Believing:

"There's victory yonder awaiting the chap
Who greets with a laugh every drowning mishap;
Who loses the game with a glint in his eye;
Who fights as he loses and dies full of try."

With best wishes for one and all.

I remain,
Yours truly
GEO. A. GILLESPIE

POULTRY SHOW BEST EVER HELD IN CITY

Yesterday the Peterborough Poultry Show was thrown open to the public in the Market Building. The exhibits, both roosting and aquatic birds were in number and quality the best ever shown here. There were nearly fifteen hundred birds on exhibition.

An interesting feature of yesterday's show was a practical lecture by Miss Yates of Guelph.

Last night the big hall was not as well filled as it should have been with so splendid an aggregation of exhibits. The whole trouble with the small attendance seems to be that the local management seemed to have failed to run a big show with [illegible] [illegible]. In this statement we do not refer to the newspaper and of the [illegible].

With such a magnificent educational and interesting exhibit, it seems poor policy on the part of the organizers [illegible].

A FUNNY FRENCHMAN.

The Brand of Humor With Which He Made Paris Laugh.

M. Sacha Guitry, who is the son of France's foremost actor, M. Lucien Guitry, is one of the funniest men in Paris.

He lives from morning till night in an atmosphere of constant joking. If his watch has stopped he rings up a number chosen at haphazard in the telephone directory. "What time is it?" he quietly asks. The person at the other end is so taken aback that he gives him the time. "Thanks," says Sacha Guitry; "that's all I wanted to know," and rings off again. The other day he shocked some stiff and starch friends who were taking him for a motor drive in the Bois by gravely saluting all the people he passed like a sovereign. "Why do you do that?" asked his friends. "I want to increase my circle of acquaintances," he answered.

There was a time when on the staircase of the flathouse he occupied at a pretty good height one saw a board just a few steps from his own landing showing the encouraging announcement, "M. Sacha Guitry—five stories more." The trick having become public property, he replaced the notice by another: "Don't hurry. I don't like people out of breath. I would rather wait for you another five minutes." When on his wedding day the maire asked him whether he would take Mlle. Lysès for wife he assumed a discomfited air, put his finger in his mouth and only some long seconds afterward deigned to reply to the official, who was growing impatient, "After all, if it will oblige you, I will say yes."—London Tatler.

REALITY OF THE AMAZONS.

Relics of Women Fighters of High Rank in Olden Times.

The tradition of the Amazons, a valiant race of women warriors, was a favorite one with the writers and artists of ancient Greece, but it has been generally treated in modern times as a poetic myth. Now comes an interesting archaeological discovery which makes it appear certain that there were indeed women fighters of high rank in the old days.

There was recently unearthed a sepulchre in the part of Italy once known as Etruria in which was found a war chariot of bronze and iron and crouching in it the skeleton of a woman. There were about her not only the remains of rich robes and beautiful ornaments of gold and ivory, attesting truly feminine vanity, but also the same weapons which the ancient traditions say the Amazons used in battle. The bronze work and the terra cotta vases definitely fixed the date of the tomb at about 800 B. C.

The earliest accounts of the Amazons located them in the northeast part of Asia Minor, but Etruria was peopled from Asia Minor and had attained a high degree of skill in certain of the arts long before Rome was founded. Such evidence as this tomb affords is more convincing than the pictures of Amazons on the old vases or such legends as that of Queen Penthesilea, who is said to have led 4,000 female soldiers to the aid of Priam in the Trojan war.

WITH THE SOOTHSAYERS.

Quaint Horoscopes of King George and Queen Mary.

The stars are favorable to a glorious reign by King George and Queen Mary. At least, that is the conclusion come to by the editor of "Modern Astrology," who has been casting the horoscopes of their Majesties. Apparently King George has one defect, however. This is his lack of diplomacy.

"He loves the straight and direct road," says the astrological expert, "and can rely sufficiently upon his own judgment, but this necessary quality of diplomacy will need to be supplied by his admirable wife, whose gift in this direction is shown by the moon in conjunction with Jupiter at her birth. He will suffer from severe headaches at times, also stomachic troubles, but have no real organic disease. He loves temperance, is passionately fond of his children, and firmly believes in spiritual things."

Queen Mary will make an ideal queen. Here is her character and future as indicated by the stars: "The Queen has a strong will and decided opinions, with a quiet, firm, and determined nature. In disposition she is open, frank, truthful, and self-contained. She is very faithful in all her friendships, constant in her attachments, a shrewd judge of human nature, and rarely deceived in her estimate of the character of others. The poor and all who suffer will be glad to know that Queen Mary's chief concern will be the welfare of her people. A good organizer and an excellent manager, she is sympathetic towards the sorrows of others.

"Queen Mary will in many respects be a remarkable Queen, and the nation is fortunate in having one so capable and competent to help the King through his great responsibilities."

Regarding the young Prince of Wales, it is prophesied that his marriage will take place in his twenty-third year. "He will then marry under the most favorable auspices," says the same authority, "and will be blessed with a beautiful and good wife. The horoscope denotes exceptional ability, and the mind being very intuitive and receptive he will absorb knowledge quickly, turning his attention to original and unconventional thought, and cultivating a love of music and the fine arts, also metaphysics and mysticism."

A recent traveler in the Amur River country of eastern Siberia speaks of wonderful possibilities of development there. The whole country appeared fine and promising. There are wide plains, wholly uncultivated, on which grows excellent grass, about three feet high, of fine texture. These plains, it is estimated, would support millions of sheep or cattle. The soil is of good quality and of a deep black.

In the gardens and plantations where settlements have arisen beautiful crops of all descriptions were to be seen—wheat, barley, oats and potatoes in abundance. Through the last 600 miles to the sea the country is one expanse of splendid forest, both on Russian and Chinese territory. In every mountain gully there were Chinese prospectors seeking gold. A hundred million people could be settled in this white man's country.

Easily navigable, the Amur provides a great natural highway for traffic from end to end. It is strange that neither the Chinese on the south nor the Russians on the north appear to develop the resources of the country. There are signs of progress, however. The chief of these is that wheat and barley are being harvested by reapers and binders—probably for the first time in Asia.

It is estimated that 100,000 workers enter the country every year from Europe. Farming, mining, lumbering and fishing are the chief industries.

A country which should be exporting millions of bushels of wheat and might in course of time become the chief source of the European supply is now importing bags of flour. The principal minerals are gold, copper and coal. Blagovestchensk is the centre of an increasing gold mining industry, and so plentiful is gold that it was humorously said to be reckoned not by the ounce but by the pood, a Russian weight equal to 36 pounds.

As to the antiquity of Chinese industry in this part of Siberia there are evidences that the gold mines were worked by them centuries ago. Growing out of some of the old workings are trees of great size and age.

Definition Is Required.

What philosophical and scientific instruments are within the meaning of the Customs Act, is at present a subject of consideration by the Customs Board. Under the act, such equipment is entitled to come in free when used in schools and colleges. There are attempts to widen its application, and upon this the board will give a ruling. There will need to be a specific definition as to what are or are not to be classified as scientific apparatus.

Fewer Get Married.

While the population of London, Ont., has been steadily increasing, a marked drop in the number of marriages registered in November is a feature of the month's vital statistics. The high cost of living is, apparently, having a deterrent effect on matrimony.

Lindsay Warder: Mr. Ernie Perry, an employe of the Horn Bros. Woollen Mills, was crossing the Wellington street bridge about 11 o'clock and was lucky enough to pick up a large wild duck which had been shot by some hunter and had dropped on the bridge from the fatal wound. The bird was warm when picked up.

—o—

People derided Jules Verne when he wrote his book telling how he girdled the earth in eighty days and another describing a voyage under the sea. Frank Wright also told of travelling in electric machines over the earth and through the air twenty-five years ago, and people jeered. And yet all these things have been accomplished. Mr. Verne's trip around the world has been beaten by nearly half the time he consumed.

THE "FREE FOOD" MYTH

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has evolved a new policy. To his already large collection he has added one more political hobby-horse upon which he hopes to ride to victory once again.

"Free Food" is his latest slogan, and the Liberal press eagerly acclaim it a winner.

The balloon has gone up, but, filled with hot air it must come down — sooner or later.

In a characteristic speech delivered before a gathering of Liberals in Hamilton the other evening, Sir Wilfrid expounded his new policy of "Free Food" as the only and absolute remedy for the present high-cost-of-living situation. He said it was the remedy, and the audience of enthusiastic Liberals evidently believed him, for they say the cheering was great. But, by this time, many of his hearers will have experienced grave doubts that the remedy is genuine.

Sir Wilfrid's speech on this occasion was, as has been said, characteristic. It was flowery, picturesque and full of glittering generalities. But not one fact, figure or argument as a solid basis for his new policy.

He accomplished his purpose. He dazzled his admirers — he hypnotized them with his platitudes and his figures of speech. But that was all.

Once again Sir Wilfrid has proved himself supreme as a political opportunist. But his hardest task is ahead. He must prove his new doctrine to be true. He would do in Canada as the Democrats have done in the United States—remove the duties on food products entering the country. Has the price of food products been lowered in the States? Sir Wilfrid knows they have not. Why is Canada's surplus produce rushing across the line? Is it because prices are lower there? Yet Sir Wilfrid's argument is that if the duty was removed the Americans would buy up the Canadian produce, ship it home, and then send it back again to us at a lower price than for what it can be purchased here.

Is that logical?

Is it even sensible?

Do You Feel Moody, Irritable, Depressed?

WHEN THAT LANGUID, LAGGY, EASILY-TIRED FEELING COMES, YOUR LIVER IS SLOW.

Tells How to Cure Quickly.

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and those fall feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, languor and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's. They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in cleaning up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erismer, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all others, men and women, can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE VIEWS OF A FARMER

They Touch Prices, Railways, Agitators and Friends of People

(Letter in Winnipeg Saturday Post.)

Sir,—I have finished my ploughing and have sold as much of my grain crop as I intend to this fall, at the prices going, and having a little time to spare am writing you these few lines. I have been in this country a good many years, and taking one year with another cannot complain; but at the same time us farmers it seems to me, are not getting our fair share of the profits, which have been made in this country. There is something wrong between the prices paid by us and the prices paid by city people for the same articles and the newspapers having, or pretending to have, the welfare of the farmers, who are the backbone of the country, at heart, should try to find out what the trouble is. During the twenty-one years I have lived here the newspapers have been full of about only three things, raising Cain with any government that happens to be in power; defending the actions of the government that happens to be in power, and raising the devil with the railroads. Now, I guess the railroads deserve all perhaps that has been said about them, and maybe a lot more, but at the same time what some of us farmers can't get through our heads, is why the papers are always slamming the railroads, and never take a crack at some other interests, because to a man of even ordinary intelligence there must be other sinners in the country besides the railroads, and it looks to me that some of the other said sinners have been urging the slambanging of the railroads to keep attention away from themselves.

The railroad foreman in charge of the track near my farm tells me that twenty-five years ago he got $2 a day and now he gets $3 a day, and the engineer on the way freight gets nearly $6.50 a day now, and he used to get then $3.75 a day, and the way freight conductor was paid $3.00 a day then, and now he gets $4.00 a day. This foreman says that all the men in the railroad have been raised about the same because they had strong organization behind them.

When I first started shipping grain to Port Arthur the rate figured up to about 14 cents a bushel for wheat, while today it is a shade less than eight cents a bushel, and there is about the same difference in other grains. On the farm machinery, hardware and drygoods, that I bring in I pay the railroad now twenty-five to forty cents less per hundred pounds than I did twenty-one years ago. I had some grievance against the railroads, because some years ago when they killed some of my neighbor's stock, and their engines burn up some of our grain, it took them a long time to get paid, the railroad trying to put them off with polite letters; but I can't get out of my head that in slambanging the railroads all the time, the idea is to take away the farmer's attention from other people who are making more from them than they should. If the railroads can almost double the wages, reduce the rates and make a profit, it seems to me that those in other businesses ought to be able to do the same thing. The section foreman says the reason the railroads can do this is because they haul bigger trains, bigger cars, and have cut down the hills, etc. Not long ago when I was in Winnipeg a friend of mine from the Grain Exchange took me for a trip in his automobile, and I saw a great many beautiful houses, some of them like castles. These houses, I was told, were nearly all owned by people who came to the west with practically nothing, made their money out of hardware, drygoods, real estate and handling the farmer's grain, the butcher business, etc. I asked him to show me the castles of the railroad kings I heard so much about but he said those fellows lived in Montreal, Toronto and England, and everywhere else. Now if a man came West with nothing and made a fortune, why we cannot blame him, but it seems to me that us farmers have not had our share, and that [illegible] in hammering the railroads and the governments it was to take the minds of the people away from the conditions that allowed the people in these other lines of business to make such fortunes. It seems to me that us farmers are paying more all the time for everything we have to buy, but are not getting anything more for what we have to sell, and I often wonder why we should have to pay more for the goods we buy and get less for what we have to sell, when the railroads are able to raise wages and haul our stuff for less money.

I see all the time reading in the papers advice handed out to farmers, by bankers, railroad men, meat packers, ministers and editors. They are telling us how we should plow, what we should raise, how we should work, what a sin it is for us to [illegible] take a trip from the farm in the winter, how wasteful we are to leave our machinery out in the sun and rain, what kind of chickens to raise, and so forth; and therefore it seems to me that us farmers should give the men in business that they should take means to cheapen the cost of distributing and do with less profits, and charge us less interest, and not [illegible] us to pay our bills in the fall so that the majority of farmers are compelled to sell their grain at any old price.

I suppose that the dullest man [illegible] that if this country is to be permanently successful the farmer must be happy, and he cannot be happy unless he is prosperous. The only way he can be prosperous is to get more for what he raises, and pay less interest and get more for his goods. We have [illegible] by any [illegible] that the [illegible] [illegible] by their advertising for [illegible] [illegible] many of the advertisers would object to this letter, and therefore it would not be published; but I told them that I intended to send this to each of the papers in Winnipeg to see if they would be fair enough to allow a bona fide farmer, of good standing, who has been a long time in this country to have his view published in the press.—Yours very truly,

J. H. IRWIN,

Neepawa, Man.,

CAR CONDUCTOR BLINDED BY BLOW

Haverhill, Jan. 3.—As the result of a blow in the face received while attempting to quell a fight between three passengers on his car, Walter Burdick, a Bay State street railway conductor, is blind in one eye.

Burdick's car runs between Haverhill and Newburyport. While passing through West Newbury tonight three Newburyport young men boarded the car. At Byfield they got into a fight, and Burdick received a blow in the face that broke his nose and paralyzed the optic nerve in his left eye.

Word was telephoned ahead to Groveland and Chief of Police Murphy boarded the car and rode to Haverhill, where the police arrested Charles [illegible], aged 19, Clinton L. [illegible], 22, and Edward G. [illegible], 19, on a charge of drunkenness. Burdick [illegible] [illegible] as his assailant.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair Gets Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant At Once — No More Falling Hair.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

FORD CO. TO SHARE PROFITS OF $10,000,000

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 5.—Announcement was made to-day by the Ford Motor Co. of Detroit, of a profit sharing scheme by which $10,000,000—approximately half the earnings of the giant concern—will be distributed annually to its employes.

At the same time it was announced that the working day for the men would be cut one hour, with no decrease in pay, and that four thousand new employes would be added to the company's working force immediately, making a total of 22,000 men affected. The cutting of one hour from the workday means that the men will work only eight hours a day. Three shifts will be employed.

"THE GIRL OF EAGLE RANCH."

An ever popular story is told in "The Girl of Eagle Ranch," which will be presented on Saturday, Jan. 10th, at the Grand Opera House, Matinee and night. It has all the thrills that go to make up a Western drama, is built up of real flesh and blood people, and not of the impossible [illegible] and [illegible] a [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] and instead a story of heart interest is unfolded. A woman seeking love for a man unworthy of her, forms the actual plot of the play, with the result that the past is redeemed and true happiness restored. Special scenic and electrical effects are carried for the production and clever specialties are introduced during the play. Bargain matinee, Saturday at 2 p.m. Prices 15c and 25c. Doors open at 2 p.m. Night prices—15c, 25c, 35c, 50c. Night door open at 7.30. Seats on sale at Box office.

Catarrh or Colds Never Quickly Cured By Swallowing Drugs

Cough Syrups, Tablets, etc., go to the Stomach, Perhaps Relieve It, But Don't Kill the Germs of Catarrh

The Direct Breathing Cure is the Best

To cure an ailment in the throat or chest, to root out Catarrh or Asthma, it is essential that the medicine be conveyed direct to the affected parts. This is why no other remedy has achieved such world-wide success as Catarrhozone, which alone can be breathed in one second to every air cell in the breathing organs. The healing vapors of Catarrhozone mix with the breath and descend through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, to the deepest air cells in the lungs—all parts are saturated with the rich piney essence that ease, heal and cure.

"No one ever contracted a more obstinate attack of nasal catarrh than I suffered a month ago," writes Mr. G. F. Root, a well-known resident of Bridgetown, W.I. "My head ached terrifically, I sneezed about every three minutes, but still my nostrils were entirely closed and I couldn't breathe through them. Ten minutes inhaling Catarrhozone gave me a little relief, so I continued to use Catarrhozone every hour, and before the day was out I had improved. Catarrhozone quickly cured me. I am well ever since."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone lasts two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 50c. and 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

New Brunswick reports receipts of $1,4[illegible] and expenditures of $1,446,968.14.

A LESSON THAT FAILED

Don't Go Too Far When Asking a Father For His Girl.

"I don't suppose," the timid young man said as he tremblingly approached her father, "that you will be inclined to grant the request I have to make, Mr. Goodlease, but"—

"Stop!" the millionaire commanded. "I know what you're here for. My daughter told me this morning that you would call on me today. She made a strong plea for you, and I promised her that I'd listen to you patiently, but you have just about convinced me that you're not the kind of chap I want for a son-in-law."

"Wh-why, what have I done—what have I said to c-cause you to fe-feel that way?"

"I'll tell you. You came in here saying you didn't expect me to consent to let you have my daughter. That's no way to begin. If you expect to get along in the world you'll have to get over that way of approaching people. You should have come to me with a feeling of confidence in your breast and with words on your lips that would have indicated that you didn't doubt for a moment that you'd carry your point. Why, when I asked my wife's father for her I went up to him with all the confidence in the world, slapped him on the back and let him understand that I hadn't a doubt of my ability to win his consent."

"All right, old man. Seeing that there's no reason why Genevieve and I shouldn't get married, you'll of course give your consent, and remember that I expect you to do something handsome in the way of handing out a check as a wedding present. No bluff, you understand—no $10,000 check that is to be torn up after the guests have gone"—

Five minutes later the young man woke up on the sidewalk and began wondering how one was to be able to tell how to go far enough without going too far.—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN

Less Inclined to Grog and Nicotine Than Ever Before

The traditional man-of-war's man who made it a practice to roll his quid to the other side of his cheek and spit on his hands before taking to the guns is decidedly a thing of the past, according to the reports of the navy department.

The quid of chewing tobacco is no longer an essential characteristic of the man behind the guns. He is coming to the conclusion that he doesn't care for chewing tobacco or that it is not a nice habit or that he hasn't time to chew and be about his business too.

Last year the navy department contracted for 220,000 pounds of chewing tobacco for the use of the men of the fleet. This year the contracts will call for about 70,000, less than one-third of that amount.

There was a time when chewing tobacco was as important a feature of the ship's commissary as the allowances of grog was to Captain Kidd's crew and Captain Marryat's sailors. But the modern sailor has changed his habits.

He is a daintier sort of person by far, a cleaner cut, more orderly being who has not lost altogether his social perspective. Nowadays the sailor is less inclined to both nicotine and grog than he has ever been before.—Bluejacket.

The Only Way.

He—I hear that you won your breach of promise suit. Did you get all of the $10,000?

She—Of course. I married my lawyer.—Baltimore American.

DAILY SHORT STORY

GRIDIRON HEROES.

Ones Who Never Win Places in the Football Hall of Fame.

AND THEY WEAR NO "LETTER"

These Practically Unknown Men Are the "Scrubs" Who Help to Keep the Varsity Team on Edge—They Play the Game For the Game's Sake.

There is no royal road to a thorough knowledge of American college football. The preparation of the varsity eleven is long and hard. The mills of the coaches grind slowly, and they grind exceedingly fine. There is nothing in store for much of the good material that in the end must be relegated to the side line. These men, wrapped in gray blankets, who line the low fence surrounding the field on the day of the big game, are the scrubs, or second team men.

There is a paradox in their situation—their only chance for personal glory lies in the defeat of the varsity eleven. There comes a time in many a big game when a coach, realizing that the day is lost, that his varsity men have done their utmost to no purpose and are being swept steadily down the field, will throw into the game scrub after scrub, hoping against hope that these men will play better than they really have a right to and so turn the tide. And even ten seconds in the big game give the scrub his letter.

So it is in after years that one may point out many a wearer of the letter who was not nearly so good a football player as many scrubs. It has happened, too, that a man has fought for years in the hope of making the eleven, has improved slowly, if surely, has been sent into the big game as a forlorn hope and has played a game the like of which has not been seen on the field that season.

Even scrubs take their triumphs and their disappointments differently. There are not a few who are proud to have been on the second team in the year that the first eleven swept all before it. They have no varsity letter, but the discriminating know that they were better players than some of the varsity men of other years. There are other scrubs who bemoan the fact that they were not in college when the general average of the players was low and they would have been almost certain to make the first team. Be it said, however, for the honor of the second team that instances of the latter type are rare. A scrub player learns the lesson of self sacrifice. It is his lot to be walked over daily by the varsity, while most of the instruction and encouragement are lavished on said varsity.

As a rule, however, there comes at least one week in the season when the scrubs are pampered and petted and made much of. The varsity is in the throes of a "slump," is lagging, dispirited and sullen. It is then that the scrub team suddenly finds that it is being taught to play the game just as if it were to take the field as the first choice against the foe. There is a coach for almost every man, there are words of encouragement, much valuable instruction and a new esprit de corps. Under the new inspiration the second team sweeps the flagging varsity off its feet, humiliates the first string players to the uttermost, while the coaches cheer the scrub and jeer the varsity. At least once a season it is very good to be a scrub, for at least once a season the scrub defeats and humiliates the team that has proved perhaps a terror to all its outside rivals. Nothing has such a salutary effect on the varsity as the eating of humble pie once in a while.

In late years the scrub is getting more consideration than in the old days. Yet the men play principally for the love of the game and in order to make the going as hard as possible for the varsity. Sheer loyalty and the thrill of battle keep them at it year after year. They learn football from the ground up. They see the big games from the side lines and, knowing the signals, have a peculiar advantage over any other spectator. With a knowledge of the signals one may criticize the handling of the big team in the big game—may more readily understand the strategy of coach and quarterback.

It is this opportunity to analyze the big games, coupled with the chance to get practically as good coaching as the varsity, that makes excellent coaches out of many scrub players. Some of these scrubs have gone back to college and turned out freshman teams that have been able to fight the varsity to a standstill and so have astonished the very coaches who taught them. There have been instances of this at nearly every big institution in the east. Sometimes the services of these ex-scrubs have been eagerly sought by the veteran varsity coaches, and many a man, without a field reputation has proved to be no mean strategist.

It is really these ex-scrub men who keep up the high average of interest in the game. They are turned out yearly at the rate of five or more to every varsity player. The varsity men may lose interest in the game in after years, but the scrub practically never. It is they who are the backbone of the pilgrimages to West Point, and it is they who talk football far into the night in the club and chop house.

The scrubs, in a word, all unhonored and unsung as they are, are the backbone of the game in the colleges and out of them. They play the game and they watch it for the game's sake.—New York Post.

Vegetarian Boots and Shoes.

An enterprising manufacturer has discovered a process whereby a passable imitation of leather may be manufactured from a vegetable product. The novelty owes its introduction to London vegetarians, who protest at the slaughter of animals [illegible] to keep humanity in boots. The imitation leather is being used for the manufacture of boots, shoes, belts, purses and a hundred other articles usually found in the cut leather department.—Jewish Chronicle.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

Written by
DR. DAVID H. REEDER,
Chicago, Ill.

NERVES: (Continuation of articles written for Home Health Club, by H. Lindlahr, M. D.). How to prepare Vegetables. After the vegetables are thoroughly washed place them in the cooking vessel, adding only enough water to keep them from burning, cover the vessel closely with a lid and let them steam slowly in their own juices. The leafy vegetables (cabbage, spinach, kale, etc.) usually contain enough water for their own steaming.

Cook all vegetables only as long as is required to make them soft enough for easy mastication. Do not throw away a drop of the water in which vegetables have been cooked. Use whatever is left for the making of soups and sauces.

The organic mineral salts contained in vegetables readily boil out of the water. If the vegetables, as is the usual custom, are boiled in a large quantity of water, then drained or, what is still worse, pressed out, they have lost their nutritive and medicinal value. The mineral salts have vanished in the sink, the remains are insipid and indigestible, and have to be soaked in soup stock and seasoned with strong condiments and spices to make them at all palatable. The natural flavors of the vegetables are the most delicate.

The starchy foods should be thoroughly masticated and mixed with saliva. The drinking water must be of natural temperature, as it comes from well or hydrant. Food and drink should never be taken hot or icy cold. This foolish habit will, in time, ruin the best of stomachs. Do not eat when over-tired, or emotionally excited. Do not eat the heavy meal of the day between working hours. These are just a few of the most important rules which, if strictly followed will soon improve the digestion and insure better elimination and freer movements of the bowels.

In many instances, however, even the best combination of food and drink will not overcome indigestion and mal-nutrition, because through long continued abuse the digestive organs have become so diseased and atrophied that they cannot properly digest and assimilate even the best of food materials. In such cases the digestive organs must be made more active and alive by the natural methods of sanitarium treatment, such as hydrotherapy, massage, osteopathy, deep breathing, curative exercises, Swedish movements, air and sun baths, homoeopathic and bio-chemical remedies, and, last but not least, by the right mental and emotional attitude.

CLUB NOTES

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5030 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor:—I have an attack once or twice a year usually in early winter or spring. The pains begin two or three hours after eating, and seem to be over the whole stomach and are so sickening that I have no ambition whatever, and I lose from ten to twenty pounds, in weight sometimes. The stomach does not burn or feel sore, but I cannot describe the pain anyway. I have tried starvation, dieting and drugs, but the attack generally continues for from two to three weeks in spite of all. Between times I can digest and enjoy food as well as I need and feel strong and ambitious. My appetite is keen at all times. I am not yet thirty years of age, five feet, eleven inches tall, and weigh, in normal health, from 160 to 170 pounds. I would like to have more flesh as I am rather lanky. Can you suggest a means? Please give such information as you think wise.—L.B.S.

I could tell you in three words the cause of your suffering, but if I should stop there neither you nor others would be benefited. These words would be "overeating and constipation." You have, evidently, a strong constitution and naturally good digestion, but you either eat too much at a time, or too often, possibly both. Probably you drink a cup of tea or coffee at each meal. I would suggest that if you drink tea or coffee that you cut it out entirely, also, any other liquids that you may be in the habit of drinking with your meals. You should also confine yourself to two meals a day for a month or longer. Take more time for eating and chew your food more thoroughly. Eat about two ounces of almond nuts for dessert after the principal meal and at night before retiring drink two tumblerfuls of sweet milk to which has been added one large cupful of water, and a pinch of salt. Take the juice of one orange or one lemon each morning.

The best hours for the two meals are at 9.30 a.m. and at 4.30 p.m. You will gain in flesh and strength and avoid indigestion and constipation. The Club books will tell you much about constipation and how to overcome it, also how to take flesh and take it off.

Thorough mastication is one of the most successful essentials toward overcoming indigestion, and all food should be chewed until it is a liquid in the mouth nothing drunk while eating. By doing so the food will be thoroughly mixed with the saliva, a very valuable digestant, and the food will be partly digested before reaching the stomach, thus relieving that long-suffering organ of much unnecessary work.

Dear Doctor:—A friend of mine told me that you have been very successful in cases of enlarged tonsils, without calling upon a surgeon. My little daughter, 9 years old, has had enlarged tonsils for a long time, probably also adenoids. Our doctor wants to operate, but both her mother and myself are much against it. Will you be so kind as to tell me of your methods, I want to try them.—C.L.

The Home Health Club method of treatment in cases of enlarged tonsils and adenoids has been explained in these columns frequently. Space does not allow me to give a detailed explanation now. This the more, as each individual case as a rule requires individual attention. I have to know of the case, its history and development, in order to be of the best service. Any one so afflicted is at liberty to write for full information which will be cheerfully furnished. I am happy to state that this method has been the means by which a large number of such cases have been saved from the surgeon's knife, which my records fully prove.

HADES COLD OR HOT

One Pastor Locates It in the Moon, Another in the Sun.

Two Washington pastors hold widely differing opinions as to the location of hades. The Rev. Zed Copp, pastor of Bethany chapel, has boosted the sphere of eternal torment from the bottom of creation all the way up to the sun. The Rev. Dr. Baker of the Theosophical society puts it in the moon.

Dr. Baker's discovery is brand new. He let it out to his parishioners the other night. He told them that after a thorough and painstaking investigation he had become firmly convinced that all other theories concerning the real location of the future address of transgressors were false and that in reality the man in the moon is his satanic majesty.

There are many little dogs in the moon, according to Dr. Baker. They are there to torment vivisectors. As the breath leaves the body of the vivisected animal his soul is rushed through space until he finds himself in the moon, where he patiently awaits the coming of his murderer, and thereafter through all eternity he amuses himself by tormenting the late learned M. D.

Dr. Baker did not say whether the presence of dogs in the moon had anything to do with the aversion cats have to the beautiful orb.—New York World.

LOGAN GROVE NOW DOOMED

Old Camping Ground of Cansas Indians to Become a Cornfield

Logan grove, for years the camping ground of tribes of Kansas Indians and a place of historical interest, will soon be a cornfield. This grove is ninety-nine acres in extent and is a mile and a half south of Junction City.

The grove is on the bank of the Smoky Hill river and was a favorite camping ground for Indians from the north and south parts of the state. They would come for powwows and would often leave their families in camp there while they went out on buffalo hunts. Many Indian relics are still to be found there.

In 1855 a soldier from Captain Henderson's company, then stationed at Fort Riley, went out to the site of the grove and built a small cabin. The next year Captain Henderson bought the ground and cabin, later homesteading the entire grove. For many years he had a sawmill there, and many of the houses in Junction City are constructed of lumber from Logan grove.

The cabin, which is still standing, was the first schoolhouse in Geary county. The place was then named Logan grove by Captain Henderson, who was a great admirer of General Logan, who was then stationed at Fort Riley. Mrs. Logan presented to Captain Henderson a large flag, which still flies on legal holidays from a flagstaff near the grove.

A few years before he died Captain Henderson erected a granite monument to the explorer Coronado, who followed the Smoky Hill river and camped at the grove, which was then the site of an Indian village, Quivera. It was the original intention to keep the grove in its present beautiful condition, but the high values of bottom land have made it too expensive to maintain in that condition. Robert Henderson, a son of the captain and the present owner of the land, will have it cleared.—Junction City Cor. Kansas City Star.

OLDEST CANADIAN MORMON.

Is Henry Lyman Hinman—He Lived in This Country For 26 Years.

Henry Lyman Hinman, patriarch of the Mormon Church in Canada, is the oldest Mormon of the Canadian church. He came to Canada in 1877, and has resided in Cardston continuously for twenty-six years.

The aged patriarch was born at West Stockbridge, Mass., in 1827, but left when a boy and settled with his father at Nauvoo, Illinois. He was seven years of age when the Prophet Smith was assassinated, but he remembers many things about him. He had often been in his father's house, he told the writer, and as lieutenant-general of the Hancock County militia the boy often saw him drilling his men. "I well remember," said the old man, "what a fine-looked soldier he made. He rode a big sorrel horse with a white foot, and as a boy I always wanted a horse just like that one of the prophet's." Mr. Hinman here reminded the writer that it was at Nauvoo that Smith had been 46 times tried for different crimes, but was never once convicted. The old man prided himself as a member of the Mormon Church to think that his prophet could so defend himself that the charges made against him were disproven.

Patriarch Hinman was one of the first to leave Nauvoo after the killing of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. In 1844 the family started for Iowa, then a territory inhabited by Indians. The Government had promised to send officials to these Indians, who would teach them to farm. The Indians thought the party the Government teachers, and for a whole winter held them captive on the Indian territory.

The next year, after working hard, the family were able to purchase an outfit, with which to join the general exodus from Nauvoo in 1847. It was while this trek was in progress that the Mormon battalion was drafted to fight with Mexico. This deterred his father's party, and it was not till 1848 that the boy Hinman finally landed in Salt Lake Valley, where settlement was made.

In the new land, father and son followed mill-wrighting and building, moving once or twice, but spending most of their lives in Davis County. During this time the younger Hinman served on several colonizing missions, and did [illegible] mission work for the Mormon Church in his own state. He was a member of Davis County High Council and of the Seventies.

In Canada he has been a pioneer. Though broken in health as a result of hardships endured in his early life, he has been active in every reform movement for the good of the Mormon people and the country. He was made a patriarch in 1898, and still holds that coveted office.

He was the first Mormon Justice of the Peace in Canada, and the first Mormon Notary Public. Mr. Hinman is the father of fifteen children, and has been married but once, his wife passing away this year. He is now spending the declining years of his life quietly in the Temple City of Canada.

At the recent ceremony of turning the first sod of the temple ground, he offered the prayer in feeble voice.

large garden, from which escape is a matter of impossibility.

Of course, it would be most cruel to turn the poor, defenceless snake adrift into the woods again, for he would be entirely at the mercy of his enemies and soon succumb. So this garden, which contains almost everything Mr. Snake would find in his natural element—trees, shrubs, long thick grass, pools and streams where he may disport himself on warm days—is provided by the institute.

Hundreds of perfectly harmless reptiles of almost every kind may be seen gliding about the gardens, and one can well imagine the horror a traveler with no knowledge of the circumstances would experience in finding himself suddenly surrounded by hordes of these reptiles.

Keeping a Dog.

A dog is a fine thing about the house if you are afraid of burglars and don't care anything about the neighbors. But let a vigorous dog, sleeping on the porch, scratch his neck under his metal collar and the night is disturbed by a sound that is a cross between an old fashioned clock running down and an iron rake brushing up a cement walk. The house vibrates as from a heavy train passing. Then the dog arises, turns twice and drops to the floor with a thud like the girl moving a hundred-weight of sugar about the kitchen. Housebreakers within 100 feet of the noise immediately give up any attempt on the place.

SWEATING COINS.

Gold Pieces Cleverly Robbed of Their Precious Metal.

THE SYSTEM IS A FINE ART.

Nowadays Chemical Baths, Splitting and Abrasion Take the Place of the Older and Cruder Plugging—Breeding the Lightweight Money.

A drilled or "plugged" coin has become something of a curiosity. Every one remembers the inconvenience of these mutilated coins. It was a matter of daily occurrence to find one's self in possession of a silver, gold or even nickel coin defaced in this way. Sometimes the hole was filled with some baser metal; often it was left open. This system of mutilating coins had the advantage, however, of being perfectly obvious, and no careful person need be deceived.

Nowadays the work of defacing coins is reduced to a fine art. The old, crude method of plugging the coins will not suffice, since the general public and the government are far more intolerant of the practice than ever before. If the precious metal is to be robbed from the coins it must be done so cleverly that even the expert will be deceived. It no longer pays to mutilate nickel or even silver coins, so, except in exceptional cases, it is only the gold coins which are mutilated. This practice, commonly known as "sweating," requires considerable skill, and the ingenuity displayed is often amazing.

The "sweating" must be done in such a way that the coin will appear perfect, even to the closest observer. The federal government will not permit any gold coin to circulate the weight of which is below the point of legal tolerance, which is fixed at one-half of 1 per cent. If a coin is found to be lighter than this it is stamped with a large L, to indicate its lightness, and is returned to the bank or the individual who last handled it. The only redress of the owner is to have the coin sent to Washington to be recoined. The owner must stand the loss in weight, which is often considerable. In cases where the coin has been "sweated" an investigation may follow, with [illegible] prosecution.

One of the most insidious methods of "sweating" and perhaps the most difficult of all to detect is the [illegible] method. The gold coins are placed in a chemical bath, and part of the gold is detached by electricity [illegible]. In this way the gold is removed with [illegible] evenness from all parts of the coin. The letters and general design of the milling may be slightly dulled in the process, but only as it might be from general wear and tear. The lightness of the coin will be detected by the scales at the treasury, but in the meantime such a coin may pass from hand to hand for a long time without arousing suspicion. It is obviously exceedingly difficult to trace the offender.

Another [illegible] method is to split the coin and scoop the gold from the inner surface. The hole is then filled up with some baser metal, so that the weight will be the same, and the two sides are then welded together. It is possible to take a dollar's worth of gold or more in this way from a twenty dollar gold piece. If the work be skillfully done it is impossible to detect such a coin by its weight, and the only [illegible] in the milling. Naturally it takes a trained, experienced eye to pick out such a coin. Meanwhile, the gold piece has probably circulated for days or even months, and it is exceedingly difficult to trace the offender.

One of the commonest methods of "sweating" is to shake up a number of gold coins in a chamois bag, and preserve the dust and microscopical particles which have been scraped. The bag is then [illegible] burned and the gold [illegible]. The [illegible] coins will appear to have been [illegible] in the ordinary handling. [illegible]

WAR ON HUDSON BAY

IT WAS ONCE THE SCENE OF A NAVAL BATTLE.

During the Reign of William and Mary Canada's Inland Sea Was the Theatre of a Desperate Struggle for Supremacy Between the English and the French—Britain Lost Three Ships in Conflict.

Since the days of Henry Hudson, three hundred and four years ago, the waters of the Bay and Strait that bear his name have been navigated by white men. The Great Company, founded sixty years after the discovery of the Bay, sent out its ships laden with goods and brought them home laden with furs, using only this route. The adventurous Radisson and his companions laid the foundation of this trade and established the rule of the company throughout much of this northern region.

With trade there mingled the stern condition of war. The Hudson Bay Company was holding this country for England—this was before there was a United Kingdom—and several times the French attempted to drive the English from it, and thereby make Rupert's Land a part of New France, of which the capital was Quebec on its heights overlooking the St. Lawrence.

This war on the waters and along the shores of Hudson Bay took place during the reign of William and Mary.

The leader of the French forces sent to Hudson Bay was Iberville, after whom is named one of the counties of the Province of Quebec. In 1694 he compelled Fort Nelson—Fort Nelson, it was then called—to surrender after a bombardment of three weeks. Two years later an English fleet recaptured the fort, at the same time securing a vast quantity of furs. Then both England and France prepared for a conflict, that, it was expected, would finally settle the question of supremacy in Hudson Bay.

Each country sent out a fleet, that from England consisting of four of the company's ships—the Hampshire, the Hudson Bay, the Dering, and Owner's Love. The English ships entered the Strait only forty hours in advance of the ships of the French, both fleets being much impeded by the ice. The French ships really followed in the wake of the English.

Having entered the Bay, where there was more open water, Iberville, in his ship Pelican, succeeded in slipping by the English ships unknown to them, and reached the mouth of the Nelson River, within sight of the fort. The garrison was greatly surprised, for it had been hoped that the English fleet would prevent the French ships from passing through the Strait. The appearance of the Pelican showed that this had not been done; but the English fleet was hourly expected, and shots were fired as a signal to the approaching vessels.

Iberville also anxiously awaited the coming of his own vessels, and so two days were passed in a state of suspense by both the garrison at Port Nelson and the crew of the Pelican. On the morning of the third day, which was September 5, 1697, three ships were distinctly visible, and so confident was Iberville that they were his that he hoisted anchor and sailed away to join them. As he drew near he learned, to his surprise and, perhaps, somewhat to his dismay, that the ships were the English fleet, now reduced to three ships; for the fourth, the Owner's Love, had become separated from her companions when they were in the ice-field and was never more heard of.

Iberville was not daunted by the discovery. He decided to attack, and made straight for the three ships of the enemy. It was a case of three against one, but Iberville's one was much superior to its opponents, for the Pelican was manned by about two hundred and fifty sailors and marines, and the vessel carried forty-four pieces of cannon.

The battle began at once. Iberville first tried to run down and board the Hampshire. Failing in this, he turned to the Dering and the Hudson Bay, pouring into each a damaging broadside; the English replying with a musket fire into the Pelican's crew and a broadside of grape-shot which wrought havoc with the enemy's sails.

The Hudson Bay then tried to run in front of the Pelican and give her a constant hail fire, besides taking the wind from her sails. Iberville saw the intended movement. He veered around and by a fine piece of seamanship came so near the Hampshire that the crew saw that boarding was intended, but a terrific broadside of grape held the French in check for a time, saving the Hampshire. It was only for a time, for at the end of three and a half hours of fighting the Hampshire began to sink with all sails set.

At this time there were ninety men already wounded on board the Pelican, forty having been struck by a single broadside. Notwithstanding this, Iberville decided to push the fight with the Dering, which was the smallest ship, and had suffered severely. The Dering, seeing that she was singled out for destruction, crowded on sail and managed to avoid an encounter. The Pelican being in no condition to give chase, turned to the Hudson Bay, which soon surrendered.

In the meantime, the Hampshire had been steadily sinking, and shortly after the surrender of the Hudson Bay, the Hampshire went down with nearly all on board; and thus was concluded what was, in the opinion of the best authorities, both French and English, one of the fiercest and bloodiest naval battles of the war.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, Coated Tonted Tongue or Constipated Bowels by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

And the Pants Went "Cum."

A somewhat ludicrous incident occurred on Election day, at 10 p.m., at the corner of Hunter and Water streets. This story, owing to the more important municipal history, was crowded out. Near the Oriental a young man sprang on the rear end of an east bound express cart or sleigh. He sat with lower limbs hanging over the rear of the sleigh. The rider, not the driver, was dressed in a short "[illegible]" coat and tight nether garments. At Water street he jumped off. A nail or a projecting piece of the end board connected with the tightly fitting trousers. "Cum-rip" went the pants from stem to gudgeon. As he alighted three girls he knew bowed to the former rider. With desperate agility he remounted his former seat and kept the tear out of sight. When last seen by our reporter he was clinging desperately to his seat on the rig at Brock street.

Blacklister Discharged

At yesterday's police court a local foreman was charged with having been under the influence of liquor whilst on the blacklist. He pleaded not guilty. His wife, first witness, said on Christmas Day her husband was all right. The information laid the charge for Christmas. Her husband had been "cutting up" pretty badly a few days before but she could not name the day. He put her out and two policemen were sent, she does not know by whom. On their arrival, her husband was upstairs. Liquor was brought to the house by an acquaintance of her husband. Everett, defendant's son, said he could not swear that his father was under the influence of liquor. He did not know of anyone bringing liquor to the house. He did not see his father put his, witness', mother out that night. Defendant's daughter said there is more than liquor that disturbs the harmony at home. There has been no better harmony at home since the father was blacklisted. The defendant, in the box, said he had neither drunk nor had liquor since he was blacklisted. His wife had a bow-legged Scotsman at the house when he was away. The information was laid by Inspector Stewart. Mr. Gordon for defence. Charge dismissed.

A man was fined $2 yesterday for leaving a horse untied on the market square.

The members of St. John's Men's Bible Class will hold their annual supper in the schoolroom this evening.

The polling at Lindsay on Monday was the quietest there in many years. Very little interest was taken at the Scugog Town in the elections.

Thirty years ago Mr. James Kendry was elected, for the first time, a member of the Peterborough Town Council.

A young man in Belleville sprung a hoax on his parents. He was found with hands tied behind his back and $10 gone. It was a joke and a poor one.

Lindsay is going to arrange its street lights. It would seem that a farmer was lost on Kent street a few nights ago, having wandered to the centre of that thoroughfare without a compass.

Thirty years ago a local citizen, since dead, bought forty-three pounds of alleged lard-cakes on the market. The cakes were filled with lumps of salt, covered with tallow and having an outside coating of lard.

SUDDEN TURN FOR WORSE IN PREMIER'S CONDITION

"We are Keeping Him Alive," Said Dr. Pyne To-day After He Left Sir James Whitney's Room

New York, Jan. 7.—After two days of holding his own, and a slight improvement, which gave ground for hope of recovery in a week or two, Sir James Whitney lapsed back into the serious condition in which he was on Monday morning.

After a night of comparative rest his condition suddenly changed shortly before 10 o'clock this morning, and now he is still keeping alive and not much more.

Stimulants are being administered freely to keep the flaggering heart muscles up to their work, but the issue remains in much doubt.

The end may come very soon, or another favorable turn may come. Heart disease is most uncertain in its course.

The abrupt change this morning came without warning, and gave a severe shock to the little group of watchers.

Last night Sir James was in excellent spirits, had made a good meal of broth, toast and eggs, and it seemed that the turn had come. Optimism was increased by an unbroken sleep from 11 p.m. to 4 a.m., which the patient enjoyed last night. Early this morning he was resting quietly. Dr. Pyne and Mr. Wallis were so reassured that they took breakfast together, leaving the patient in the hands of the nurse.

Sudden Call for Dr. Pyne.

After breakfast they were chatting in the rotunda of the hotel with a group of newspaper men, and relying upon non-committal replies to suggestions that it might be possible to move Sir James back to Toronto in a few days. Dr. Pyne had just remarked, "You never can tell what may happen in cases of cardiac trouble like this. No physician can venture on prophecy," when a bellboy approached [illegible] in nasal [illegible], "Call for Dr. Pyne, call for Dr. Pyne," then, seeing the doctor, he came up and said, "You're wanted in 226 at once."

The doctor rushed for the elevator, followed an instant later by Mr. Wallis. For five minutes nothing happened. Then Dr. Pyne re-appeared in an overcoat, hurrying for the door of the hotel. "Getting medicine," was the only answer he vouchsafed to the eager queries of newspaper men. He was back in the hotel in a few minutes and disappeared behind the door of the inner room where the Premier is lying sick. Dr. [illegible] was there already.

HAMILTON HOSPITAL CROWDED

Hamilton, Jan. 7.—The General Hospital here is so crowded that Chairman Pratt, of the Board of Governors, to-day approached Mayor Allan and suggested that the old Library Building be used as an annex. "There are at least 100 more people in the hospital now than we have accommodation for," he said, "and unless something is done immediately we will have to turn scores of people away."

The Ottawa Ministerial Society Protests

The Ottawa Ministerial Association protests against what it calls the undue interference of R. C. priests with people legally married by other ministers. Canadian law has, as the resolution shows, been clearly defined by the courts on the late reference on this subject, but that cannot prevent people trying to evade the law. The only way will be to catch trouble-makers at it and punish them, as in the case of others who defy the law. The law is all right, and a few cases before the courts for damages will materially assist in quieting disturbances of married life.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN RETIRING COMMONS LOSES NOTED FIGURE

Venerable British Statesman Announces Fact to Birmingham—Began a Radical; Joined Gladstone

Birmingham, Eng., Jan. 7.—Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, the venerable British statesman, has decided to retire from Parliament at the next general election, after serving as a member of the House of Commons since 1876, during all of which time he has represented Birmingham. In a letter addressed to-day to the president of the Unionist Association of Birmingham, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"Before leaving for the south of France I think I ought to communicate to you the decision at which I have arrived, to retire from Parliament at the next general election.

Thirty Member 37 Years

"I have not come to this decision without many regrets at the severance of a connection which has already lasted over thirty-seven years and has been marked on the part of my constituents by ever-growing confidence and support, but I cannot hope again to do my work in Parliament and I feel that our city and the constituency of West Birmingham need the services of a younger man who will take an active part in the Parliamentary struggle to maintain the supremacy of the Unionist cause in Birmingham."

His Health Much the Same.

Mr. Chamberlain leaves Highbury, his residence at Birmingham, next week for London and after spending a few days there, will proceed on his usual winter visit to the south of France.

There has been no change for the worse in Mr. Chamberlain's health recently. It is, however, nearly eight years since he spoke in the House of Commons and nearly three years since he appeared there and then only for a few minutes at the opening of the session of 1911, when he was assisted into the House in order that he might take oath.

PROTESTANTS SEND GREETINGS TO CARSON

Resolution Against Home Rule for Ireland Forwarded.

The resolution which was recently passed by the Protestant Federation and carried unanimously, expressing sympathy for the Protestants of Ireland in their great fight against Home Rule, was signed and forwarded to Sir Edward Carson on Saturday last. The document was beautifully engrossed, and set forth the fact that the Federation, "twelve hundred strong," were unanimous in their expressions of sympathy and support to the people of Ulster in their heroic attitude.

STEAMER WENT DOWN OVER FORTY DROWNED

New York, Jan. 7.—The tank steamer in trouble off the Sandy Hook was the Oklahoma, and twenty-four of her crew apparently perished. Eight were saved. This was the substance of wireless messages received here today.

New York, Jan. 5.—Tossed by the fierce storm sweeping the Jersey coast, and fighting their way through a blinding snow, three vessels were searching early to-day for some trace of a steamer believed to be an oil ship, which was found sinking late yesterday, and may possibly have gone down. The vessel is supposed to have carried a crew of at least 35 men.

SHOWS HOW RADIUM WILL DRIVE BIG STEAMSHIPS

Interesting Experiment Shown Audience at London Cancer Hospital

London, Jan. 8.—Scientists speak jokingly of the day when Atlantic liners will use radium instead of coal or oil as motive power, but the possibility seems a little nearer than the unscientific may think.

An audience in a theatre of the Cancer Hospital recently saw an engine driven by radium power on the internal combustion principle.

The flywheel consisted of a small paper windmill, with the axle going round horizontally instead of upright. Close to this stood a glass tube shaped like a Y, with a bit of electric wire inserted in each of the two top ends. This was the combustion chamber.

Fastened to the lower end of the Y was a tube running to a glass bottle containing oxygen and hydrogen, supposed to have been produced by the action of radium on water.

"Radium in solution," said Mr. C. E. S. Phillips, the wizard who gave the lecture, "always decomposes water in which it is placed, giving rise to an explosive mixture of gases—oxygen and hydrogen."

Owing to the scarcity of radium Mr. Phillips on this occasion used other means of producing his explosive mixture, but the audience accepted his assurance that the mixture might be produced by radium in solution.

The lecturer turned a tap which let the explosive gas mixture pass thru the tube into the glass tube and turned on an electric current, producing sparks in the branches of the Y. The sparks caused a continuous series of tiny explosions of the gas, and the puffs of wind coming off blew round the paper wheel.

This was the driving power of radium demonstrated.

Mr. Phillips apologized for speaking of a ton of radium—which has never yet been seen—but he added that as the year produced about 20,000 tons we may some day secure a ton. One ton of radium, he said would be equal to 1,000,000 tons of coal in energy. A single gramme of radium, which is only a fraction of an ounce, would give off in its lifetime about 3000 horse power.

FORMER LINDSAY BANK CLERK IS SENT TO JAIL

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Only 30 days in jail was given Forbes Sheen, the ledgerkeeper of the Bank of Montreal in Lindsay, who stamped checks and presented them in Toronto, one for $25 to the Walker House, and the others totalling $150.

The bank wanted the young man held over for a couple of days.

"What for?" asked Magistrate Denison. "To squeeze money out of his relatives?" added his worship.

Considering his youth and the fact that it was his first offence, the sentence was made short.

SIR ISAAC CLARKE, NEGRO IS MARRIED AT AGE OF 90

Fashionable Shades Flutter at Ponchatoula When Aunt Sarah Is Bride.

Ponchatoula, La., Jan. 9.—There was a stir in fashionable negro circles to-day when Sir Isaac Clarke, aged 90 years, and Aunt Sarah Scott aged 75 years were married. The Very Rev. J. Tucker, of the African Methodist church, performed the ceremony.

"Do you speaks to love and obey dis ole nigger, Aunt Sarey?" began the reverend.

"No, sah," she replied. "I ain't gwine ter 'bey nottin' but de Bible."

"Well, will ye honah him?"

"Yes, as long as he honahs me."

Then turning to the bridegroom he asked:

"Do you, Ike Clarke, promise ter love an' cherish Aunt Sarey?"

"Ya sho' 'nuf will, parson," he exclaimed, fervently.

The reverend eyed the pair for a moment.

"Youse niggers got er ring?" he asked.

"Lordy, no. We done furget dat."

"Well, den, jine hands. Ah now pernounces you man and wife. May de Lord bless you wif a set of fine chilun, and—hold on, ah git ole foot kiss from de bride."

An elaborate feast followed the ceremony, in which nearly the entire negro population participated.

Uncle Ike, as he is familiarly called is a typical "before the war" darky. He remembers when the stars fell and many incidents of Southern social life long before the civil conflict, he having been a slave in several distinguished Southern families.

This is not his first matrimonial venture.

STILL PLENTY OF TIME FOR COMPROMISE ON HOME RULE

London, Jan. 7.—The Morning Post which has hitherto been well informed on Irish matters, announces today that negotiations between Premier Asquith and Bonar Law have broken down, and that any hope, understanding, or compromise between the two parties must be abandoned. The Unionists demanded the temporary exclusion of Ulster. This Mr. Asquith definitely refused.

This announcement is supported by the statement of the Duke of Devonshire, who, speaking at Manchester last night, said that so far as he could form an opinion, there was a deadlock in Irish affairs of the very worst description, and we were faced with civil war.

The general opinion here is that despite the failure of the conversations of the leaders, there is still abundant time to arrange a compromise. Parliament meets very late this year, the date being February 10th, and the Welsh bill and finances must be dealt with before the final passage of Home Rule, thus allowing three months for further negotiations.

London Doctor Dead.

London, Ont, Jan. 7.—Dr. James [illegible] Balfour, former Superintendent of Victoria Hospital, and one of London's oldest physicians, died early this morning of pneumonia. Dr. Balfour was a member of the staff of Western University for many years, and was a popular lecturer.

A Morrisburg municipal candidate ran on a platform of refusing the Legislature School grants.

SAVED THREE BOYS WHO FELL THROUGH ICE INTO THE DON

Rescuer Plunged Into Water and Had Much Difficulty Getting Out

A Great Missionary Gathering

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 9.—Representatives of all the foreign and home mission boards in Canada have gathered here to-day for a meeting to consider the planning of a Missionary education progress. Rev. H. C. Priest, secretary of the missionary education movement, is responsible for the bringing together of all the various representatives to adopt a more systematic method of carrying out the plans the missionary boards have under consideration.

The Ottawa Ministerial Association passed a resolution protesting against interference by R.C. priests in couples of mixed religion.

A deputation of labor men asked the Dominion Government to release a number of Nanaimo rioters.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Prompt and plucky action of Charles McDonald, a member of the Life-saving crew, resulted in three little boys being saved from drowning in the Don just below the Queen street bridge at 10 o'clock this morning. McDonald was enjoying a quiet skate in the vicinity and noticed the youngsters skating near him. He feared for their safety when they approached the mouth of the sewer, and was just going to warn them when he heard an ominous cracking, which was drowned by the simultaneous cries of the boys, who had all fallen through the thin ice into the water.

Trouble Getting Out.

McDonald rushed to the rescue and springing into the water, grasped the boys one by one and landed them on thick ice alongside the space of water. McDonald had some difficulty getting out himself, for although a large crowd had gathered on the bridge, no one could go to his assistance, as it was feared that the thin ice could not sustain the weight.

However, McDonald was equal to the occasion, for taking a big clasp knife from his pocket, after a few attempts he finally succeeded in digging it into some thick ice. He then, with this aid, laboriously drew himself out of the water. Meanwhile spectators breathlessly watched him, and he was roundly cheered when it was seen that he was out of danger.

OTTAWA PICKS BECK AS LIKELY TO SUCCEED WHITNEY

Difference Between Hanna and Beck Followers Develops Bitterness There

Ottawa, Jan. 8.—Should Sir James Whitney recover sufficiently to be taken home it is believed here that he will within a few weeks tender his resignation to Lieut.-Governor John Gibson, and advise him to call upon the Hon. Adam Beck to form a ministry. That is the belief in Ottawa.

Should Sir James fail to rally from the illness which has stricken him, down the situation willbequitedi down the situation will be quite different.

Following constitutional practice, Sir John Gibson will send for the senior Cabinet Minister, who is Hon. J. J. Foy, now acting Prime Minister.

According to practice the Lieut.-Governor will invite Hon. Mr. Foy to form a Government, as Lord Aberdeen on the death of Sir John Thompson sent for the senior Cabinet Minister, Sir Frank Smith, and invited him to form a government. Sir Frank Smith declined and indicated Sir Mackenzie Bowell as the proper man to call upon.

Beck or Hanna?

It is expected here that Hon. Mr. Foy will not undertake to form a government, but will advise Sir John to call up either Hon. Adam Beck or Hon. W. J. Hanna.

It is learned here that both Mr. Beck and Mr. Hanna are keenly desirous of succeeding to the post of honor about to become vacant. In this part of the Province the friends of Hon. Adam Beck are already active, though Mr. Beck is absent from the country and are making use of the Provident charges against Hon. Mr. Hanna, who seems to be strongly supported by the interests which placed Hon. Tom White and Col. Sam Hughes in the Borden Government. The fight between the Beck and Hanna factions has already developed bitterness here.

LONDON COMBINE MIXES OUR APPLES WITH THOSE OF ENGLAND

How Canada is Hurt in Apple Trade—Price Combine May be Broken

London, Jan. 7.—The Canadian Press learns that a movement is on foot among those concerned with the sale of Canadian apples in the London market to break down the combine which exists among London dealers, under which Canadian apples are sold at practically any price the combine chooses to fix.

Arrangements are being made on behalf of the apple shippers of New Brunswick, Ontario and British Columbia to institute an independent sale centre in London solely for Canadian apples.

Investigations are also being made into the allegations that recent consignments of apples have been tampered with wholesale at the port of entry, inferior articles of English growth being mixed in large numbers with Canadian apples.

CABARET SINGERS CAUSE DIGNITARIES TO BLUSH

Puts the Heads of High Ohio Men in Public.

Canton, O., Jan. 7.—Senators, mayors and ministers had the struggle of their lives with the temptation of the cabaret singer here to-day, and they won.

Two professional performers at a banquet of the Business Men's association were the temptors. One of them tried to ruffle the hair of Senator Atlee Pomerene, and the other tried to kiss a local Methodist minister. The hair ruffling was partially successful, since a full minute elapsed before Senator Pomerene could decide definitely whether the gentle [illegible] in his locks was caused by a draft from the outside or a lady's fingers. As soon as he knew, he withdrew his head.

The kiss was an utter failure, because the Methodist minister saw it [illegible]

The brief dance then came a [illegible] and attack on Mayor-elect Stolberg. She grabbed him by the arm and pleaded with him for just one turn of the irresistible tango. But Mayor-elect Stolberg is a prominent church worker and he resisted.

The boldness of the cabaret singers furnished the shock of the evening to the several hundred prominent business men of Canton who were in attendance.

BOARDING IN A CUBAN HOME

You Must Not Mention Money, but You Pay All the Same.

In Cuba, where money is not talked of, where no one is valued according to his money, the need of it is nevertheless [illegible] hanging over every home. Money—the lack of it—is ever [illegible], but the word is never mentioned, writes Kate Jordan in the New Idea Woman's Magazine.

"[illegible] you do not speak of money," the Cuban friend who had introduced us had said. "From her [illegible] brother-in-law I know the señora expects $25 a week for each of you. Put this in an envelope with her [illegible] on it, which you know [illegible] not only her husband's name, but all of her own family names, which I will give you, and leave it where she will find it. It will disappear, but," said our Cuban friend proudly and [illegible], "it will never be mentioned."

To eat one's three meals under the summer sky gave a holiday flavor to what became habit. Our table was set under a palm at one of the galleries. Our first taste of the [illegible] of Cuba was a moment to be remembered. They are peeled whole and so [illegible] that even the juicy pods [illegible]. A fork is stuck into each orange, and, resting in a bowl of ice [illegible] all night, they are in the morning [illegible] globes of iced liquid sweetness. They are eaten while held up on the fork, the pulp, the skeleton of the orange being left impaled on it.

The Havana housekeeper believes in having the cook, with the gravity of a prime minister, deposit the food on the table, because to her point of view what is meant to be hot should be [illegible].

After the cook's triumphant [illegible] of a [illegible] other servants are on hand to give [illegible] service.

SETTLED OUT OF COURT.

Racing For the Honest Lawyer In a Town In Denmark.

In [illegible] his boyhood home in Denmark, "The Old Town," Jacob A. Riis says that he does not remember that there were at any time more than two lawyers in the place. One was good, the other bad—not a bad lawyer perhaps, but reputed to be tricky, whereas the other was known to be honor itself.

It is therefore perhaps the best character I can give my people when I record the fact, writes Mr. Riis, that when two farmers quarreled, each sure that he was right, they made haste to hitch up to get first to the honest lawyer, and usually that was the end of the quarrel, for the last in the race was willing to make peace.

They used to tell of two well to do neighbors who had fallen out over a line fence and started simultaneously for town. Both had good horses, and they were well matched in the race.

For half an hour they drove [illegible] alongside, each on his own side of the road, grimly urging on their horses, but neither gaining a length. At last as the lights of the town came into sight, for it was evening, a horse broke on one of the rigs, and the [illegible] stopped. The other team whirled away in a cloud of dust.

"Hans," the [illegible] one called after him, and he halted and looked back, "are you going after lawyer —?" naming the square one.

"I am that!" came back.

"Then let's go back. I'm beat." And back home they went and made it up.

They Live To Eat.

According to Herr [illegible], a German traveler, who recently returned from the Congo, there is a tribe of [illegible] down in one of the [illegible] parts of that region actually so stuffed all of the time with food, [illegible] that they are continually in a dull and almost [illegible] stupor.

They do little beside sleep and eat. [illegible] The women are quite as lazy as the men and work only when it is absolutely necessary to eat.

The only times when the natives rouse themselves is at marriage or at death. [illegible]

Good Prospects.

"I'm at the end of my rope! Every [illegible] I have is gone, and I'm broke at last."

"Have you borrowed all you can?"

"Borrowed? No, I haven't tried that."

"[illegible] you say you are at the end of your rope. Why, man, you haven't [illegible]!"

ROD AND LINE WON.

Contest Between a Strong Swimmer and an Expert Angler.

A novel contest took place some time ago at the Edinburgh corporation baths between one of the strongest swimmers in Scotland and a well known angler. The contest occurred in a pool eighty feet long and forty feet wide.

The angler was furnished with an eleven foot trolling rod and an undressed silk line. The line was fixed to a girth belt, made expressly for the purpose, by a swivel immediately between the shoulders of the swimmer at the point where he had the greatest pulling power.

Locating the Bar.

A grimy looking stranger entered a hotel. "Where's the bar?" he asked of Pat, who was standing at the door.

"What kind of bar?" asked the latter.

"Why, refreshment bar, of course! What do you suppose I mean?"

"Well," drawled Pat, with a twinkle, "I didn't know but you might mean a bar of soap."—London Answers.

Tumblers.

Drinking glasses called tumblers owe their name to the fact that they are the successors of the little round silver bowls, so perfectly balanced that, which ever way they were tipped about on the table they tumbled into position again and there remained with the rim upward.

Our Point of View

Before we forget it we desire to congratulate the new Mexican Congress which is greatly distinguishing itself by keeping out of jail.

—o—

Prisoners in the Ohio State penitentiary eat their meals to the accompaniment of orchestra music. This kind of music is said to go well with boiled cabbage and fat pork.

—o—

That English suffragette who has given birth to twins will have something to do besides burning houses and throwing spoiled vegetables at the unhappy Mr. Asquith.

—o—

The average young lady thinks it is perfectly awful if there isn't a bath-tub in the house. Her mother used to splash around in the family wash-tub after the men folks went to bed.

—o—

It is told in history that the maids of ancient Sparta wore their gowns slit to the hips. Now you know the origin of the expression Spartan courage—the courage required to peep at one of those dames when she went out walking.

—o—

Millions of American women are bitterly opposed to woman suffrage. They know, in their hearts, the theory is wrong and unnatural, and prefer to be the loved ones of the earth rather than the hard-featured class that is attempting to unsex itself and bring down destruction on the happy condition that has made women adored through all ages and climes.

"BLOATED" ARMAMENTS.

Lloyd George's advocacy of the cause of the little navyites of the Liberal party is but the natural outcome of the evolutionary processes which have operated to place him in his present high position in politics. A radical of the radicals, it was an easy matter to raise taxes so long as the elements attacked were able to bear the burden. But signs have been multiplying of late that the limits have been reached. His socialistic legislation has imposed taxes upon capital and industry to the extent of their powers of endurance. Distinctly class legislation, like his old age pensions, minimum wages, insurance against unemployment and sickness, the tax on unearned increment, have well nigh exhausted the tax-paying capacity of the hated plutocrats. So long as the ability to meet the burdens held good Lloyd George was able to maintain unchallenged his position as champion of the people. But signs have been multiplying that, if the needs of the exchequer were to be met, new sources of income must be tapped.

Already running dangerously close to the limits of proportion between hostile European forces and those of Great Britain, can Lloyd George hope to convince the country and his in the cabinet that they dare curtail their building programme? Germany has refused overtures of retrenchment. Austria and Italy are adding to the burdens of competition.

It looks as if Lloyd George in playing the game of politics, were but adding to the difficulties which already seriously threaten the Asquith administration. With the labor party divided, with the growing discontent in the country with respect to Home Rule, and the added difficulty of reconciling such diametrically opposed radical forces as Lloyd George and Winston Churchill within his cabinet, can Mr. Asquith long hope to weather the storm?

Weary Tiredness Changed to Vigor

THAT PLAYED-OUT FEELING WAS QUICKLY REMEDIED AND HEALTH RESTORED

Story of a Merchant Who Almost Lost His Business and His Health Through Neglecting Early Symptoms of Disease.

"My life for years has been of sedentary character," writes T. B. Titchfield, head of a well known firm in Buckingham. "Nine hours every day I spent at office work and took exercise only on Sunday. I disregarded the symptoms of ill-health, which were all too apparent to my family. [illegible] thin, then pale, and before long I was jaundiced — eyes and skin were yellow, my strength and nerve energy were lowered, and I was quite unfitted for business. In the morning a lightness in the head, particularly when I bent over, made me very worried about my health. Most of the laxatives medicines I found weakening, and knowing that I had to be at business every day I neglected myself rather than risk further weakness. Of course I grew worse, but by a happy chance I began to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I was forcibly struck by the fact that they neither caused griping nor nausea, and it seemed incredible that pills could tone, cleanse and regulate the system without causing any unpleasant after effects. Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted with me just as gentle as nature—they gave new life to my liver, strengthened my stomach, and won me back to perfect good health. My skin is clear, dizziness has disappeared, and my appetite, strength, spirits are perfect.

Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are sure to cure. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Are You Dizzy?

When in a crowd, or while at your work, sudden spells of weakness overcome you. Are you tired, listless? Does your heart beat irregularly? Have you puffy swellings under your eyes? Is your urine dark or cloudy? Do you urinate too frequently and with great distress? If so, you need a course of Sanol and it will cure you promptly. Sanol also cures gall stones, kidney stones, gravel, etc. At all druggists.—Manufactured by The Sanol Mfg. Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, Canada.

MUNICIPAL BALLOTS

Gditor Morning Times.

Sir,—I would suggest that a better system of ballots be inaugurated for the next municipal elections here. There were a large number of ballot forms used here on Monday. With the exception of our pink ballot, that for the by-laws, the ballots were all white. The returning officers had no means of knowing which folded white ballot went into its proper box. This necessitated the voter opening ballots when presenting them at the tables, which led to delay and every opportunity for the officials to see how the voter's sympathy ran.

C. H.

A DUBIOUS RECORD.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Now that public opinion is soon to be centred on Ottawa, when Parliament meets, it will not be out of place to give a short record of the Opposition leader's political life:

In 1871 Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a member of the Quebec legislature denounced Free Trade. He was then an out-and-out Protectionist of the protectionist and anti-British school.

He was still a Protectionist when he entered the House of Commons but swallowed his opinion for the portfolio of Inland Revenue in the Mackenzie administration.

He appealed to the electors upon a Free Trade policy but the people were suspicious of his sudden change of economic thinking and he went down to defeat, a safe seat having to be provided for him.

He again went down to defeat with the rest of the Mackenzie government, on the Free Trade issue of 1878.

He allied himself with Mercier in 1891, and preached the Continentalist policy of Unrestricted Reciprocity or Commercial Union, and once more led his party to utter route at polls.

He allied himself with the rapid Free Trade platform of 1893 and until 1896 preached "Tariff for revenue only" and "Free Trade as they have in England."

He openly adopted Protection in 1897 and for fifteen years continued a protective tariff, and duties upon foodstuffs.

He advocated restricted reciprocity with the United States in 1911, and was overwhelmed at the polls.

He abandoned restricted reciprocity in 1912, and is now preaching "Free Food."

"Veritas."

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW

Now Lord, the year at Thy behest,
Into the past has flown,
And may Thy holy name be blest
For all the joy we've known.

What humble gratitude we owe
For patient mercy found;
When justly Thou hadst laid us low
As cumberers of the ground.

With prospects beaming fair and bright,
Fresh dawns another year,
Upon its annals pure and white,
May no dark blot appear.

But may devoted service fill
Each hour with glad employ,
Our highest aim to do Thy will
Thy smile our sweetest joy.

And as the fleeting years go by,
Thy Spirit on us pour,
To fit us for the life on high
When time shall be no more.

Three Score and Ten

In the span of life allotted to man. There is no reason why we all should not enjoy it. This is made more possible if you keep your system clear of disease. The Opium Couch.

In the library of a Chinese gentleman the opium couch is as inseparable a feature of a gentleman's home as the armchairs and cigars of an American den. Perhaps it must disappear now before the prohibition campaign which is being waged from Peking, or it will remain under the innocent guise of a reclining reading table, as some innocent globe trotters have described it. Opium as used in the ordinary citizen's private house is considered no more a vice than tobacco with Americans. It is the custom; that is all. The host waves you to the couch for a perfunctory whiff just as Americans begin by offering a guest a cigar.

The Size of Antarctica.

It is a somewhat curious fact, if it is a fact, that the last of the terrestrial continents to be explored is the largest mass of raised land in the world. The concentration of attention upon the south pole since Commander Peary landed the other end of our axis makes it highly probable that the antarctic antipode will soon be dangling from some explorer's belt. Incidentally the south polar continent will be opened, if not to the settler, at least to the magnate. We already know something of its fringes at a few points, and Lieutenant Shackleton pushed into it south of Mounts Erebus and Terror for several hundred miles, but the greater portion of its surface is still terra incognita.—Collier's.

This Year's Baby Crop.

In spite of high food prices, our national baby crop promises to be a record breaker. Based on figures compiled by a Boston economist, its value for 1913 will be $4,[illegible]. These figures represent, approximately, of course, the economic value to the United States based on potential productive capacity of the 2,[illegible] babies which it is calculated will constitute this year's crop. This makes each six pound youngster worth about $2,172, or $362 a pound.—New York Herald.

Growth of Indian Races.

The Indian has at least paused in his passing from the face of the earth if the statistics concerning births and deaths among about one-third of the Indian population in the United States which have just been compiled by the Bureau of Indian affairs can be accepted as a criterion of the general condition of the red race. During the fiscal year 1913 there were 2,[illegible] births and 2,173 deaths among 101,717 Indians. It was estimated there were 300,[illegible] Indians in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, during the last fiscal year.—Washington Post.

The Modest Hunter.

"Can you show me any bear tracks?" asked the amateur Nimrod.

"I can show you a bear," the native replied.

"Thanks, awfully, old chap. Tracks will suffice."—Pittsburg Post.

Enthusiasm.

Anxious Messenger—Say, fireman, there's another fire broken out up the street. New Recruit—All right, old chap; keep her going till we've finished this one.—Punch.

"No. Sometimes I shave when she is away from home."—Chicago Record Herald.

A Japanese Romance.

Prince Ito, the Japanese statesman, married a geisha girl who saved his life. He was pursued during the struggle forty years ago between the followers of the mikado and the shogun. He took refuge in a tea house, where he implored a geisha to save him. Every Japanese house has a dust hole. As the ground floor is raised about two feet above the earth, a square hole is cut in the floor to serve as a receptacle for the sweepings of the rooms. With great presence of mind the geisha put Ito down this hole, which she covered with a board, placing a brazier on top. When the pursuers arrived they found a languid girl sitting by the fire, who expressed her surprise at their visit and assured them they were at liberty to look through the house. After a search they departed, disappointed, not one of them having thought of the dust hole.—Washington Herald.

The Queen of an Ant Colony.

The queen of an ant colony is at first winged. Just as soon as she has strength enough she picks a mate, and they have a marriage flight. When she comes back again she rubs off her wings and prepares to raise a brood. Although the queen lives to be thirteen years old, on an average, the only flying she does is on her nuptial flight, which might be compared to the honeymoon of a pair of newly weds. As soon as she gets back to earth she takes her abode in a piece of bark or other suitable place and remains there for nine months. There she raises a brood of workers; these workers go out and bring in food to the queen, and through the workers the ant colony is kept up. After the queen loses her wings the muscles undergo a physiological change. The substance of the muscles goes into the blood. The queen becomes so light that she would float on water.

Bacteria.

Modern investigations as to the origin of diseases have brought the little organisms called bacteria into so much prominence that search has been made to ascertain whether they existed during the early geological periods. Not long since the fact was announced that Renault had discovered bacteria in [illegible]. Continuing his researches, he found evidence that bacteria were probably coeval with the first appearance of organic life on the earth. They attacked vegetable tissues as well as the bones and teeth of animals; but, as a rule, they belonged to species distinct from those of today.

A Romantic Career.

Cecil Bolton, the young English officer who, at the age of twenty-six, became commander in chief to [illegible] and helped him win the throne of [illegible], has had a stranger than fiction career. At nineteen he received the [illegible] for bravery in South Africa, soon after achieved his captaincy in Somaliland, entered [illegible] service in 1910, and now [illegible] is [illegible] "the [illegible]."

It Cost Money to Be Smart.

A sprightly young matron hopped on a car at Eighth and Chestnut streets, handed a half dollar to the conductor and hurried to a seat without getting the change. The conductor, grinning broadly at the outcome which he expected, awaited developments. When the car reached Sixth street the woman turned to the conductor and remarked, "Did I get my change?"

The conductor laughingly handed her the change.

Then the scene changed.

"My good man," icily spoke the young woman, "I gave you a dollar."

Protestations on the part of the conductor availed him nothing. He fished about his clothes and found another four bit piece and handed it up, with a sigh.

"The next time I try to be funny," said the conductor, "I hope some one catches me before it costs me so much money."—Philadelphia Times.

The Twist of Trees.

A singular uniformity has been observed in the twist of tree trunks. In 980 trees out of every 1,000 whose trunks show torsion the direction of the twist is from right to left. This accords with the direction of the revolution of cyclonic storms in the northern hemisphere and also with that of whirlpools, which the French savant Jean Brunhes says almost invariably turn from right to left. The question arises whether in the southern hemisphere the torsion of tree trunks has an opposite direction, like the cyclonic motions of the atmosphere in that half of the globe.—Harper's Weekly.

A Suitable Career.

"What kind of a career have you mapped out for your boy, Josh?"

"I'm goin' to make a lawyer of him," answered Farmer Corntossel. "He's got an unconquerable fancy for tendin' to other folks' business, an' he might as well git paid for it."—Housekeeper.

An Amiable Hint.

An old Scotchwoman when advised by her minister to take snuff to keep herself awake during the sermon replied, "Why dinna ye put the snuff in the sermon, mon?"

Genius begins great works. Labor alone finishes them.—Joubert.

It Generally Is.

Greatly to the pride and pleasure of his father, Lord Rosebery's second son, the Hon. Neil Primrose, was elected to Parliament for a division in Cambridgeshire.

During the contest, however, reference was constantly made to Lord Rosebery's opposition to the budget, which his son supported.

On one occasion the candidate was asked whether this action on the part of his father did not amount to "hitting below the belt."

"Exactly," said Mr. Primrose, "But when one's father does hit one, it is generally below the belt."

An Asiatic Railway.

The hope of Singapore is for a great trunk line railway running from this southern point of the Malay peninsula northward through Siam to Burma and on to India and a branch line through Cambodia into China. Some day that hope will be realized. Within a radius of 2,000 miles of the little island on which Singapore is built there is a population of 700,000,000.

How to Ascertain If You Have Catarrh

Look for Symptoms of This Treacherous Disease in the Following List.

"Is your breath bad?"
"Is your throat sore?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Is your voice husky?"
"Does your nose stop up?"
"Have you nasal discharge?"
"Do you spit up phlegm?"
"Has your nose a dry feeling?"
"Have you pain across the eyes?"
"Is your throat irritable, weak?"
"Do you sleep with mouth open?"
"Are you subject to sneezing fits?"
"Do your ears roar and buzz?"
"Are you hard of hearing?"

If you have any of these indications of Catarrh, cure the trouble now—stop it before it gets into the lungs or bronchial tubes—then it may be too late. The remedy is "Catarrhozone," a direct breathable cure that places antiseptic balsams and healing medication on every spot that's infected by catarrhal germs.

"No one can know better than I the very first day's use of Catarrhozone," writes T. T. Hopkins, of [illegible], P.Q. "I had for years a stubborn case of bronchial catarrh, bad [illegible], headache, sore eyes, stopped-up nose and throat. It affected my appetite and made my breath rank. Catarrhozone cured quickly."

The dollar outfit lasts two months, and is guaranteed; smaller size 50c., sample size, 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

NEW YORK'S LATIN QUARTER

Old Stables Occupied as Studios by Eminent Artists

Turning north from Washington square, up Macdougal street, you come upon a little alley leading back behind the houses that face on the north side of the square. A sign says this is Macdougal alley. Really it is "the alley." It is the closest approach, perhaps, to a Latin quarter in New York. It is in external aspect and in its spirit unique. It is devoted entirely to horses, black cats and the fine arts. The alley once upon a time was entirely lined with little stables, where the Washington square aristocrats kept their horses. It still appears to be lined with stables, but if you look closer you observe that most of them have studio lights and shades at the upper windows. If you look still closer at the plates on the tiny entrance doors you will read the names of artists known over the entire country.

The first studio in the alley is inhabited by James Fraser, who was at one time a pupil of Saint-Gaudens. The next stable is the home of Edwin W. Deming, who can talk with any Indian in his own dialect and who paints Indian scenes and legends with the grace and charm of Greek mythology. A little farther on Daniel Chester French, one of the leading sculptors of the country, has a studio. The next stable is the home of Blendon Campbell, painter and illustrator. Next door live A. P. Proctor, the animal painter and sculptor, and Victor Salvatore, a young Italian, who learned to model while helping Mr. Fraser in his studio and who now has plenty of work of his own. Still another sculptor is Chester Beach.

At the end of the alley, in a stable differentiated from the rest only by two bits of Italian marbles standing before the entrance, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney works every day, though, of course, she does not live there. Mrs. Whitney, who was Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, is no mere amateur. She works as hard as the rest and on the same terms of competition. She executes professional commissions and has been accepted into the fraternal life of the alley as one of the artistic band.—Metropolitan Magazine.

FOOLS THE BATTERS

The Celebrated Fadeaway Ball Pitched by Mathewson

PITCHED WITH MIDDLE FINGER

Hugh S. Fullerton, writing of the wonders of pitching in the American Magazine, says:

"Before Mathewson learned the trick of pitching his 'fadeaway' there was one man who pitched the same ball in even more wonderful style. He was Virgil Garvin, now dead, and if he had possessed baseball intelligence enough to use other balls to mix with it he probably would have been another Mathewson. Garvin was a tall, slender young Texan with extremely long fingers, and he pitched the ball with the middle finger lapped over the index finger, turning his hand almost upside down, allowing the ball to slip over the sides and ends of the first two and between the second and third fingers. As he released the ball from his hand he jerked it sharply backward. The result was that the ball appeared to be moving with great speed. As it came near the batter the ball seemed to hesitate in the air and then suddenly curve down and in, just as a left hander's slow curve does. The ball was a freak. Garvin did not understand its full worth, and it remained for Mathewson to develop and use it intelligently. He achieved the fadeaway by holding the ball precisely as if for a fast outcurve and by releasing it over the side of the middle finger. By the sharp holding pressure at the moment of release he put 'reverse English' on the ball, causing it to [illegible] up to a point where it [illegible] force and dropped, rather than curved, down and in toward the right handed batter and away from the left handed one. Not content with that achievement, Mathewson learned the ball so that by jerking or turning his wrist sharply at the instant he let go of it he could make it 'fade' either way and, even more, could regulate its speed at will.

"The fadeaway operates exactly on the same principle as a billiard ball struck low can be 'drawn.' When the 'draw English' begins to take effect upon the ball it attempts to return to the pitcher, and if the friction surface was solid instead of air it would do so."

DAILY SHORT STORY

HOW JIMMIE GOT HIS ENGINE.

The Incident That Brought Him Promotion and a Bride.

By WILLIAM WALKER HINES.

It was the general understanding among all the employees of the Lawrenceburg division of the K. and T. R. R. that when Jimmie Kincaid got his engine he would also get Nettie Oliver. But Jimmie's chance for getting an engine in the near future did not seem particularly bright. He was fourth on the list of firemen of the Lawrenceburg division, and that meant he must wait until four engineers died, reached the age of limit or were fired. Of course there was always the chance that he would be able to do something to attract the attention of the superintendent of motive power, and then he might get his engine at any time.

In the meantime Nettie had a fairly good position as telegrapher at Benson station, and Jimmie could get a chance to chat with her for a few minutes every day when his train, passenger No. 14, lay over on the siding at Benson to allow the limited mail to pass. When he had begun scraping an acquaintance with Nettie something over a year before Jimmie had used the pretext that he was thinking of learning telegraphy, and under her tutorship he had picked up a fair working knowledge of the Morse code.

Many a sly joke did the train crew of No. 14 crack at Jimmie's suddenly [illegible] to learn telegraphy, but he bore all of these with equanimity and said that the knowledge might come in handy some time. After awhile it became understood among all the men that Jimmie's case was really serious, and then the jokes stopped. Even the head brakeman of No. 14, who had a reputation as a wit, forbore to make remarks about the connection between the Morse code and pretty girls.

Benson station is at the foot of Twelve Mile hill, and this hill is regarded by the engineers as the worst place on the division. The grade is so heavy that the track winds up the hill in two long loops. When you get to the beginning of the second loop you are only a mile from Benson station on a straight line, but it is six miles distant by the track. After he had mastered the rudiments of the Morse code Jimmie would take hold of the whistle cord when No. 14 came to the loop on the down grade and signal "hello" to Nettie at Benson station in short blasts upon the whistle, which stood for the dots and dashes of the code.

So things went along for a year, and Jimmie's prospects of promotion got little brighter. On the records of the office of the superintendent of motive power he was still merely James Kincaid, fourth on the list of firemen, with a good reputation and the prospect of succeeding to an engine in the course of five or six years. When business picked up in the fall a number of extra freight trains were put on, and he got his first chance to run an engine.

On the first trip it fell to his lot to take out the third section of freight train No. 103, eastbound. The third section of No. 103 was made up of thirty-one heavily loaded cars, and none of these was equipped with air brakes. As he pulled out of Adairville the old yard master swung himself up into the cab of the engine and said:

"I think ye'll pull the engine all right, Jimmie, me boy, but for the love of the saints be careful when ye strike the top of the hill this side of Benson. Faith, it's a heavy train they've given ye, and if it should break in two going down that hill and thim cars with no air brakes on to thim there'd be the devil and all to pay."

Despite this warning there was no fear of a "break in two" in Jimmie's heart as he spurred his engine along toward the top of the hill on the other side of which lay Benson. This is an accident which happens very rarely and which not even the most experienced engineer can successfully guard against. But as he struck the top of the hill and began to descend on the side toward Benson he felt a jerk which nearly threw him off his seat. Looking back, he saw that the worst had happened. A coupling had snapped in the middle of the train.

For the present there was but one thing to do, and that was to go down grade as fast as he could. Looking back, he could see that the rear brakeman, who was the only man on the cars which had been left behind, had made one ineffectual attempt to set the brakes and then had jumped to safety. [illegible] running wild behind caught up with the forward half of the train there would be a wreck which would cause damage to the amount of thousands of dollars and [illegible], if not kill, the engineer [illegible].

Faster and faster the telegraph poles on the side of the track flew past. [illegible] Jimmie's mind [illegible] than it had ever done in his life. His orders directed him to wait on the siding at Benson station for the westbound passenger train to pass, and he knew that at any cost he must save the passengers. Away off on the farther side of Benson he could already see the faint line of smoke coming up from it, and he knew that it would arrive at Benson in just about his schedule. He figured that his own train was going about a mile a minute and would reach Benson in [illegible] minutes. If no [illegible] could be [illegible] to [illegible] when he got to the [illegible] some way of letting Nettie know the condition of affairs it would be an easy matter for her to throw the derailing switch after he had passed and allow the rear half of the train to come to a safe haven in the cornfield beside the track.

Down at the station Nettie heard a sound which sent her rushing out to the platform. Away up the hill she could see a freight train coming down at a terrific rate of speed. The whistle cord seemed to be in the hands of a lunatic, for the whistle was sounding in strange, unearthly shrieks. As she watched it something struck her as being strangely familiar about the way the whistle was sounding. All of a sudden it struck her there was method in the shrieks and that interpreted by the Morse code they were saying "BN, BN, BN," her station call. This was continued for a few seconds, and then began: "Broke in two. Throw derailing switch when first section is past station." Three times this was repeated, and then the engine went around the curve at the farther end of the loop, and she could hear the whistle only faintly.

But she heard enough, and when Jimmie's engine whizzed past the station with his white face pressed closely against the glass at the side of the engine cab he saw Nettie standing at the switch. When the last car in the part of the train which still remained intact had passed the frog he saw her throw all her weight on the switch handle, and the signals told him that all of the cars which were following him would pile themselves ungracefully, but harmlessly, on the soft earth of the cornfield. Bringing his engine to a stop, he ran back to the station and on to the siding in ample time to let the passenger train pass him.

The trainmaster examined Jimmie very closely as to the necessity of piling valuable freight cars on useful agricultural land and passed the case up to the division superintendent. He examined the papers carefully, made some notes on the bottom of them and referred the whole matter to the superintendent of motive power. When Jimmie walked out of the office he was a full fledged engineer and had been congratulated on his presence of mind. And the superintendent of motive power congratulated him again a month later when the railroad lost the services of the telegraph operator at Benson station and Jimmie got a wife.

Taylor McVeity was elected Mayor of Ottawa over Mayor J. A. Ellis, M.P.P.

NEWSBOY PROFITS

Good London "Pitch" Brings Its Owner Big Returns

EARN MORE MONEY THAN CLERKS

The smart street newspaper-seller usually earns more money than the average clerk or mechanic. This surprising statement was made recently by the head of the publishing department of a well-known London newspaper, who furnished some remarkable figures concerning the profits made by street newsboys, and incidentally revealed a curious feature of the newspaper-selling business.

While there are hundreds of youths who obtain copies of the morning and evening papers direct from the offices and secure the full profits, there are hundreds of others who are supplied by middlemen. That is, to say, one man will go down to the office, buy enough papers to supply, say, a dozen youths, jump on his bicycle, and take them to the particular locality in which he has taken a stand or worked up a connection.

A short distance from a certain railway station every morning will be seen a man with piles of the various London newspapers busily engaged in supplying over a dozen boys who stand outside the station to sell the papers. These boys are actually employed by the news vendor, who pays them salaries ranging from $2.50 to $5 a week; and after all expenses are paid he makes a profit of over $15 a week for himself.

"Is it surprising," the publisher remarked, "that youths avoid shop and factory life when, by working from 6 a.m. until 9 p.m., and again, say, from 4 or 5 p.m. until 8 or 9 p.m., they can earn between $10 and $15 a week. I am referring now more particularly to the boys who are lucky enough to get pitches outside stations. Of course, there are hundreds of other boys who do not make anything like that amount, but even the youngest reckons on making $2.50 to $5 a week.

"Pitches outside stations are exceedingly valuable, and it is no uncommon thing for a man to pay anything from $100 to $500 for the privilege of selling his papers there. Many of these middlemen scarcely do any work at all. They secure a good pitch, employ an assistant for about $5 a week, and leave the running of the concern to him, and a very profitable business it is, too."

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a simple thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

GREAT [illegible] RADIUS.

The North Dakota Can Travel [illegible] Miles Without Recoaling.

The people of the United States recently, and it is safe to say somewhat to the surprise of a large number of them, found themselves at the top of the list in naval matters in a flash to speak. They discovered that so far as battleships are concerned they had done just what Great Britain did in commercial vessels when the two great Cunarders came out. They had captured from the world the battleship records at one sweep.

In the sister ships, the North Dakota and the Delaware, America has two unequaled war vessels. Of the two the trial trips seem to indicate that the North Dakota leads. So marked are her accomplishments in some particulars that she has been declared to be in a class by herself.

Equipped with turbine engines of American design and construction, a detail in which alone she differs from her sister ship, which is fitted with reciprocating engines, the North Dakota broke the speed record for battleships and demonstrated that she has a greater steaming radius than any other. The dispatches indicate that when steaming at 12 knots an hour she can travel 2,000 miles, or nearly [illegible] the distance from New York to San Francisco by way of the Magellan strait, without recoaling. At 10 knots an hour she can travel approximately 4,000 miles without refilling her bunkers, while she could reach the European coast when traveling at her maximum average speed of 21½ knots, a speed exceeded by only eight transatlantic liners.

This vast steaming radius is due to her modest coal consumption in proportion to the horsepower produced and made effective in the turbine engines. According to the figures given out by the builders, on her trial trip she burned less coal at the speeds of 12 and 19 knots an hour and at the maximum speed developed more horsepower and made a higher speed than did the Delaware. The fastest run over a measured mile for the North Dakota was at the rate of 22.25 knots an hour, while the Delaware's best speed was 21.98 knots. The average of five high runs for the former was 21.83 knots and for the latter 21.44. The full power trial horsepower [illegible] speed was 31,400 for the North Dakota and 28,600 for the Delaware. The North Dakota's record was slightly and unexpectedly surpassed by the smaller British battleship Vanguard of the Dreadnought type. In the course of her eight hour trial she attained a speed of 22.4 knots.

In offensive and defensive details the North Dakota and her sister ship are the superiors of any other fighting ships afloat. They carry ten twelve-inch rifles in five turrets besides fourteen five-inch rapid fire guns and a secondary battery of twelve guns of the one and three pounder types. The twelve inch guns throw projectiles weighing 870 pounds each, 340 pounds of powder being required for the purpose. With this force behind them it is estimated that the guns can throw these shells a distance of twelve miles and force them through a steel plate eleven inches thick at a distance of five miles.

The United States will not be behind in the race if other nations launch vessels the equal of the North Dakota, for the Arkansas, the Florida and the Utah, now on the ways, will be greater by 1,500 tons displacement.—New York Tribune.

Curious Lake of Soda in the Wilds of East Africa.

Lake Magadi, in British East Africa, is famous for its vast deposits of soda. Until recently few people have seen its shores, for it lies in the midst of a barren and waterless district, but the railway that was started a few years ago by an English company opens the way for travelers to this curious natural phenomenon. A recent visitor describes it in the London Field:

Curiously it looks as if it had frozen and as if snow had then fallen upon it, partially thawed and frozen again. [illegible]

A Strange Likeness.

An extraordinary resemblance has recently been discovered at the London Natural History Museum between a specimen of the huge African elephant and the pygmy shrew mouse. Sir E. Ray Lankester suggested comparison of the two, and the result has been that practically every bone, muscle, blood vessel and nerve of the giant beast has been found identically reproduced in the little animal, which is scarcely two inches in length. In the museum a stuffed mouse has been placed between the fore feet of its enormous mounted prototype for the purpose of showing the curious likeness.

The Trouble.

"So she doesn't return your affection, eh? Well, I shouldn't get mad about that. What's the use of bothering about a girl?" said Watkins.

"I don't mind her not returning my affection," said Dobleigh, "but, confound it, she won't return my diamond ring, either!"—Harper's Weekly.

A Tale of "Tipping."

To tip or not to tip the person who but does his or her duty is a question recalling an incident set down in Walpole's reminiscences of how a king once unwillingly encouraged the custom. "This is a strange country," commented George I. "The first morning after my arrival at St. James I looked out of the window and saw a park with walk, canal, etc., which they told me were mine. The next day Lord Chetwynd, the ranger of my park, sent me a brace of carp out of my canal, and I was told that I must give 5 guineas to Lord Chetwynd's servant for bringing me my own carp out of my own canal in my own park!"

President Gillespie Spoke.

Cornwall, Jan. 7.—The 37th annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association is being held here to-day with a large attendance. President Geo. A. Gillespie, of Peterborough, made an eloquent address in which he deplored the disappointing year they had had. He noted that the new U.S. tariff letting in milk and cream free had handicapped Canadian dairymen. The export of Canadian cheese was short.

His Qualifications.

Yesterday afternoon a young Englishman passing along Hunter street overheard Mr. Ted Cavanagh telling a Times reporter that he had just shipped ten men to the shanties. John Doig Committed John Doig was yesterday charged with stealing $16 from Joseph Finley. He pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by a jury. He had sent for Mr. G. N. Gordon, who at the moment the prisoner spoke, had not arrived in court. Joseph Finley, first witness, said he was arrested two months ago as a blacklister who drank, and was fined. He paid his fine to $10 to P.C. Newhall. The night he was drunk he lost $16. The prisoner was at his house when witness was arrested. Lily Tilly, next witness said she was at Finley's house the day he was drunk. Doig was there. Finley asked Doig to change a $5 bill. Finley later handed Mrs. Doig $15 and asked her to keep it to pay for the coal. Mrs. Doig handed witness the money. When Finley was arrested Doig went to the police station with Finley. On his return he said to Mrs. Tilly, "You give me the money and I'll keep it." Mrs. Doig corroborated last witness. Doig had been away from her for a week. Mr. Gordon said there might be a civil aspect in the case. Mr. Gordon asked that Doig be let repay the money and take the stable. Doig however, was committed for trial.

DID CHILD WAKE UP CROSS OR FEVERISH?

Look Mother! If Tongue is Coated Give "California Syrup of Figs" To Clean the Bowels.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Counterfeits are being sold here. Don't be fooled!

YOUNG BANDIT LOSES BRAVADO

When Ralph Fariss Sees His Father, He Asks to Change Plea to Not Guilty—Charged With S. P. Holdup.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6.—At the earnest request of the young man's aged father, the case of Ralph Fariss, the Bakersfield boy convicted of holding up a Southern Pacific train at El Monte a month ago and murdering Horace E. Montague, a railroad official, was reopened in the superior court here today.

Fariss was brought to trial last Saturday, pleaded guilty, waived all his rights and silently accepted a death sentence from Judge Gavin Craig. At that time he was hiding his identity under the name of John Bostick. His only comment was that he was ready to die for his crime.

But when the police unearthed his past and his father had come from Bakersfield to see him, he lost his bravado and now wants to change his plea and go before a jury in the hope of receiving lighter punishment.

Both Judge Craig and District Attorney Fredericks were willing to reopen the case to the extent of granting the bandit's attorney a hearing but little confidence was felt that the verdict would be changed by the proceedings today.

PANAMA CANAL TO OPEN FOR SHIPS IN 70 DAYS

Only Minor Slides Now Impede Passage of Boats Through Waterway

Washington, Jan. 6.—The Panama Canal will be in a condition to pass vessels all the way across the isthmus within the next seventy days, it was learned today, unless unexpected obstacles are encountered. This is the judgment of a high canal official, who declines to fix the date more definitely.

The only remaining obstacle to prevent the passage of vessels now are the Cucaracha slide, which blocks the cut at Culebra, and other small slides in the same locality. Dredging is progressing satisfactorily on these slides.

In view of uncertain conditions surrounding the work it has been deemed impolitic to attempt to fix a definite date for the opening. Even after a passage is possible, several months must be spent in training the operating force before the waterway is opened to commerce.

GREEK WAS FINED $300 UNDER NEW STATUTE

[illegible] contributing to the delinquency of children, namely Josephine and Bessie Carpenter, of Delaware avenue, 16 and 14 years of age, George Panagtos a greek labourer, was fined $300 and costs or six months in prison. The case was the first of its kind to be tried in the police court. Plainclothesman Arthur Cregg made the arrest under the new juvenile statute.

Panagtos admitted supporting the oldest sister Bessie for six months but said that the younger girl who gave evidence against him had often lived at his house.

Magistrate Denison said that the statute provided for a fine, but that it should be imprisonment. He expressed horror at the evidence and made Panagtos fine as heavy as heavy as he could.

PREMIER OF ONTARIO LYING ILL CANNOT FORGET PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Hon. Dr. Pyne Admits His Chief Continues Very Weak—Strong Stimulants Are Being Administered

Toronto, Jan. 8.—Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General, received the following despatch regarding the Premier's condition, from Hon. Dr. Pyne, at 10.30 this morning:

"New York, Jan. 8.—Sir James Whitney had undisturbed night's rest—but continues weak."

New York, Jan. 8.—While obviously anxious to announce that the condition of Sir James Whitney, Prime Minister of Ontario, lying in the Manhattan Hotel stricken with heart trouble, has shown a [illegible] improvement, Dr. Pyne, who is attending the Premier, after the regular consultation with Dr. Hermann Biggs, the New York specialist, could do no better than state by bulletin at 11 o'clock to-day, that the patient had enjoyed a night of undisturbed sleep, adding the [illegible] reservation that Sir James still continued weak.

Encouraged by Patient.

The failure of Sir James to make progress has been a disappointment to his party, though Lady Whitney, Dr. Pyne and the Premier's private secretary, Mr. Horace Wallis, who form the faithful band constantly around Sir James' bedside, have shown a wonderful hopefulness and have been encouraged by the patience of the Premier himself.

Since Monday Sir James has been practically his old self, mentally, at all times, and has conversed about his affairs from time to time. As something dealing with his office details, that was left unfinished when he started on the vacation which brought him to New York and to near death's door here, occurs to him, he asks questions but is always satisfied with the replies made. The greatest care was adopted by those around him, when thoughts of his office first disturbed the Premier, not to raise any point that might lead to a dispute, and the nurses and Lady Whitney have been content simply to let Sir James follow his own lead.

Sir James Enjoys Food.

Sir James still enjoys his food, light meats and easily digested vegetables forming his principal diet. Of course, this has been supplemented by drugs aimed to [illegible] and to steady the action of his heart. While these have to be administered, Sir James' condition must be considered as critical, and it is even a question as to whether they are not necessary to keep him alive.

The one worry that Sir James has disclosed is his dislike for hotel life, and the desire to get back to Toronto [illegible].

The Premier fell asleep last night about 11 o'clock, after a day in which no change in his condition could be noticed.

SEATH OUTLINES COURSE OF RELIGIOUS TRAINING

Superintendent of Education for Ontario Suggests Two-Year Optional Study Proceeding to High School Entrance

Toronto, Jan. [illegible]—The Ontario Department of Education has [illegible] under consideration a two years course of the most suitable parts of the Old and New Testaments, with selected passages for memorization. As a beginning the subject is to be a bonus on the High School Entrance examination, a paper being set on the prescribed course. The suggestion is now being placed before clergymen of the different protestant denominations.

The proposal is to [illegible] in a long circular which has been sent out by Dr. John Seath, Superintendent of Education in Ontario. The circular fully sets forth the scheme for religious instruction and a [illegible] for the primary schools of the province.

The essential part of the scheme is that no instruction in the course shall be given by the teacher as part of the school course of study, either during or after school hours. The instruction is to be given at home and particularly in the Sunday school. Dr. Seath thinks that this examination would be tried by clergy [illegible] without writing on the entrance test.

Explained.

"What is this civil service business that they are always talking about?" asked the Rook. "What good does it do?"

"It's like this," replied the Cheerful Idiot. "If you have a job and you are not under civil service, they can fire you any time they want to. But if you have a job under civil service they can't fire you unless they want to."

MANY INDUSTRIES ENTER CANADA

What the Defeat of Reciprocity Has Done

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Jan. 8.—During last year no fewer than eighty-eight manufacturing industries from the United States crossed the line into Canada and established themselves along the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway. This followed the rejection of the reciprocity agreement.

The capital investment represented by these eighty-eight industries is placed at [illegible] millions. Employment is given to 10,875 people, which means support for fifty thousand people.

These industries came to Canada because their hope of getting the Canadian home market without moving was frustrated by the defeat of the reciprocity agreement. The home market was coveted and is protected by the tariff. This market is so valuable that it attracted the attention of the United States manufacturers several years ago. Had reciprocity succeeded these firms would have gained access to this market without investing a dollar in Canada and without spending a dollar in the employment of labour in Canada. They would not have built up new consuming centres in Canada where the Canadian producer could sell his products. The maintenance of the Canadian home market has brought half a billion dollars of American capital into the Dominion. Reciprocity would have kept that money out. Think it over.

IMPERIAL BURDENS DUE TO CHAMBERLAIN

London, Jan. 8.—In an editorial review of Joseph Chamberlain's character, the Manchester Guardian, which stoutly opposed the Boer War, says to-day:

"It was the South African war which profoundly changed the temper of the English people and inaugurated the final phase of Chamberlain's career. From Vereeniging onwards the Empire was on the defensive. Chamberlain looked about him for means of defence and found obstacles insuperable. There remained a tariff against the rest of the world. This was acceptable to the colonies, and chimed in with the new mood of nervous distrust of the national character and resources. Tariff reform was in one of its aspects, the first effect of that loss of confidence in our own energy and resources of which [illegible] the Dreadnoughts and the triple entente have been later, and in some ways more serious, expressions. There was in it something of that truckling to the colonies which began with the Boer War. Tariff reform was the old Imperialism with the spirit taken out of it, and its early buoyancy was replaced by a double dose of apprehension and pessimism."

Kingston, Ont. Jan. 8.—Another confession has been made by a member of the penitentiary staff that he secured money for convicts and got a rake-off for himself, but the name of the guilty party is being withheld. Warden Irvine is working on the case quietly and more confessions are looked for. So far as can be learned there have been no dismissals from the staff as yet. The commission is taking up the case of the guards with the Minister of Justice.

IMMORTAL DECREED THE MARTYR MUST MARRY MRS. SHARP

"Doctor" Wright Received His Supernatural Orders by Tossing Dice

Toronto, Jan. 8.—In her affidavit filed at Osgoode Hall by her counsel this afternoon, Mrs. Harriet Sharpe, tells how "Dr." Francis C. Wright, the "Physical immortalizer," forced her to marry him under the alleged direction of "the immortal," and under an assumed name.

Mrs. Sharpe's affidavit says in part:

"He had me sign an agreement about marriage, and the methods he adopted were in line with the methods previously adopted. Further, he came to 790 Euclid avenue one night remarking that he had a very pleasant surprise for me, and on my asking what that was, he pulled out a silver mounted marriage certificate, and he told me he had thrown the Cube and that the Immortal had told him that he was to marry me.

"As to this Cube, I might say that he carried a stock of dice about with him, and he would throw the dice about whenever he happened to be where he wanted to get the direction of the Immortal. I took notice, however, that he never let me see [illegible] when he threw the dice and he always told me that the dice [illegible] against me. [illegible] Further, "the martyr" said with great [illegible] solemnity that the Immortal had said to throw the dice and that I must be married [illegible] of the Immortal [illegible] should be destroyed. By these methods of pressure to secure his every desire, he had me marry him at Niagara Falls, N.Y., on November 15, 1912.

Under False Names.

"In the train on the way to the Falls, he suggested, 'You cannot be married in the name of Sharpe, because the Immortal said I have to be married in the name of Wright, and you have to be married as a spinster in the name of Oadman. So we were married, he giving the name of Wright and I giving the name of H. Oadman, my maiden name. I have never been known by any other name than Harriet Sharpe, my widow name, and my marriage has been kept a secret.

"In fact he told me I was one of the Orders of the Crystal Sea, and that the rule of the Order was that everything was to be kept between the members of the Order, and if any member of the Order should break that rule, he or she would be expelled from the Order, just the same as carried out by the Masons. Further, he threatened me that if I told Mr. and Mrs. Weir or any other person anything about him or his past, he would have her up for blackmail, and that he would take $3,000 more from me."

AGED WOMAN LIKE A WHIPPED DOG UNDER FAKERS CONTROL

Mrs. Sharp in Affidavit Tells of the Immortalizer's Persecution—He Was Invited to Come From England

Toronto, Jan. 8.—The sworn affidavit of Mrs. Harriet Sharpe, the aged woman whose mysterious disappearance from her house at 790 Euclid avenue, was followed by the arrest of "Dr." Francis C. Wright, "Physical Immortalizer," was to-day filed in High Court by her counsel, Mr. Alexander MacGregor, in the civil suit against "Dr." Wright. Mrs. Sharpe alleges that the prisoner by his persecutions caused her to leave home.

The aged woman states that she first knew of the defendant through Mr. and Mrs. McKay, who rented from her a house in the rear of 790 Euclid avenue. The couple lived there for about three years, but Mrs. Sharpe had known them since the fall of 1900, and their religious beliefs cemented a bond of friendship. Mr. McKay was at the time publishing a book called "Woman's Divine Rights," but refused to allow his name to appear.

Invited to Canada.

The affidavit, continuing, sets forth that Mr. and Mrs. McKay showed Mrs. Sharpe letters from a man in Dartmoor Prison, England, who described himself as a martyr to his religious convictions. The aged woman came to regard him as a martyr. She discussed his situation with the McKays and the letter invited him to visit them in July, 1912, when his prison term was shortened. They feared, however, that Madame Dus de Bar, the man's wife, would accompany him.

At this stage the affidavit states that this woman was recently described by the Superintendent of Pinkerton's Detective Agency, as one of the greatest women criminals in Europe.

HEBREW BUTCHERS ON STRIKE AGAINST HIGHER MEAT PRICE

Toronto Jewish Population Have Recourse to Vegetarian Diet

Toronto, Jan. 8.—Hebrew residents of Toronto have been on a meatless diet since Monday as a result of a general strike among the retail purveyors of Kosher Flaish against an attempt on the part of the wholesalers to effect another advance in the price of that commodity. The retailers are strongly supported by the housewives in their fight against the "meat magnates" and a lively struggle may be expected before the matter is settled. 32,000 local Jews are affected.

The high price of meat has been discussed by the Jewish Retail Butcher's Association very much of late and several proposals considered in an attempt to beat down the quotations of the wholesalers. A crisis was reached on Monday when the latter gave notice of a still further advance in the price of beef, the third within the last couple months.

A meeting of the retail butchers was called at once and a general strike called. Of more than 40 retail butcher shops in the city only two have remained open. These have been largely boycotted by the Hebrews supporting the attack on the alleged combine. A lively session was held when the matter was under consideration and the proprietor who refused to close his shop was given a decidedly uncomfortable time.

One of the best known Jewish butchers of the ward discussing the situation with a reporter stated that a couple months ago meat was selling at 10 cents per pound wholesale. An advance was then taken to 12 cents, while the retailers were obliged to pay 14 cents. It was not long before the price was still further boosted by the wholesalers. At the third attempt to exact higher prices, however, the retail butchers balked and the strike resulted. The retailers profess a determination to continue the strike until the wholesaler relent.

REGINA WORKLESS AND GROW DESPERATE; NEED MARTIAL LAW

Red-coated Mounted Police Offer Selves to Protect the Prairie City

Regina, Jan. 8.—It was almost certain early to-day that in view of the grave labor situation and reported threats of violence from the leader of the "unemployed gang" that, Regina will be under martial law by Friday night.

[illegible] McGibbons of the R.N.W.M. police has offered to send a detachment to patrol the city to work in conjunction with the city police. The city is thoroughly alarmed and a movement is on foot to call a mass meeting of citizens to discuss the situation.

With Fire and Violence.

Threatening the city of Regina with fire and violence within four days, if work is not immediately found for the "unemployed gang" a letter signed by Jerry Miner, alleged leader of the gang was read aloud in the police office, and every man on the force has been supplied with a description of Miner with instructions to place him under arrest on sight.

Though the local police court the idea that the city is in actual danger the letter has created the wildest excitement. Mayor Martin has issued a statement calling on the unemployed in the city to meet him at a conference with a view to forming some plan to relieve the labor situation.

Warns Women Off Streets.

Miner after acknowledging writing the letter, has disappeared, and all efforts to locate him to-day were fruitless. In his letter he has warned all women and children to keep off the streets Friday night, when he said the gang would wreak its vengeance on the city. He claims that gang is armed and failing to get work within a stated time, he will turn them loose to pillage at will.

This is the second letter written by Miner within the past week. Although many [illegible] skeptical when it first appeared in a local paper, it is now acknowledged there is a well organized gang of men in the city rendered desperate by the scarcity of work.

A FAMOUS PICTURE

Rosa Bonheur's Stirring Masterpiece, "The Horse Fair."

A PRIZE THAT FRANCE LOST.

The Artist's Native Land Permitted the Great Canvas to Find a Home in This Country—The Story of the Painting and Its Replicas.

One of the chief glories of the Metropolitan museum in New York is Rosa Bonheur's stirring masterpiece, "The Horse Fair," a picture which for its irresistible movement and living portraiture of man's most useful friend holds a unique position in the annals of art and the affections of lovers of paintings.

Few, however, are acquainted with the intimate history of that notable canvas, and fewer still are aware that there are no less than five horse fair pictures in existence. The one in New York is the original and, it will be remembered, was first the property of A. T. Stewart and then purchased for the Metropolitan by Cornelius Vanderbilt for 280,000 francs.

It was painted in Paris, the models used being the horses of the Paris Omnibus company and a few animals studied at the horse market of the French capital. It was first exhibited at the salon of 1853, but went back to the artist unsold.

A part of the further history of the famous painting is recorded by Ernest Gambart in his manuscript memoirs, which have been freely drawn upon for the "Reminiscences of Rosa Bonheur."

"After the closing of the 1853 Paris salon 'The Horse Fair' was intrusted to the Society of Artists of Ghent for exhibition in that town, where it had a great success, but whence it also came back unsold. In the spring of 1854 I expressed to Mlle. Bonheur the desire to buy it from her. At that time it was in Bordeaux, her native town.

"Her preference was that the municipality should purchase it for the city museum, and a price of 12,000 francs had been mentioned at which the town authorities might acquire it. But she said to me that if the canvas came back to her again she would let me have it. However, she could not let it go to England for less than 40,000 francs.

"I unhesitatingly accepted the bargain, and it was agreed that the picture should be mine unless sold to Bordeaux. As the picture was back in her studio again in the following year, I told Mlle. Bonheur that I wished to take it at once in order to have it in my 1855 exhibition and that I should like to have it engraved by Thomas Landseer, the celebrated engraver and brother to the painter.

"She was delighted at the idea of the picture being engraved and said to me: 'I have asked you 40,000 francs for my picture, although in France I cannot get 12,000, and I am pleased at your consenting to my terms. On the other hand, I don't mean to take undue advantage of your liberality. How can we arrange matters? Let us see. Well, the picture is very large, and it will be difficult to find a place for it in an engraver's studio. Besides, you want to exhibit it. Wouldn't it be better for me to paint you a smaller copy?'"

That suggestion she carried out and explains how the second canvas came into existence. That smaller copy was the one from which Landseer's well known steel engraving was made and is the picture which is in the British National gallery.

When she heard that it had become the property of the British nation Mlle. Bonheur decided to make a third copy, thinking the second was not good enough for the London collection; hence "The Horse Fair" No. 3. But the National gallery authorities were not able to accept the substitute, as the painting which it was designed to replace had been given to them as trustees.

Besides these three, Mlle. Bonheur executed a water color replica and a drawing based on a large photograph. Of all these, however, the picture in the Metropolitan is by far the finest work, which is only as it should be in view of the fact that the artist always found her best patrons in America.

This was recalled to her detriment when the rosette of the Legion of Honor was requested in her behalf. "She has already exhibited at the salon," objected the president, "and sells in America everything she paints." The complete answer to that was that the French government had had the opportunity to buy "The Horse Fair," but had neglected it.—Argonaut.

Easy Way to Kill Moles.

An excellent way to exterminate moles is as follows: Procure a small can of calcium carbide, which can be purchased from an automobile or bicycle dealer, open the hole where the mole has been digging and place some of the carbide in it. Pour two or three gallons of water into the hole and close up the opening. In about fifteen or twenty minutes open the hole and immediately ignite the gas formed. [illegible] long stick should be used. [illegible] will burn for a few seconds, and then it will break fire in the hole. There will be no more trouble from the moles.

CURIOUS COLOR NAMES.

There Was Once an Extensive Group of Flea Shades.

"Puce," which was for a long time the name given an exceedingly popular hue, is when translated from the French simply "flea." It appears that the accidental admission of a flea at a court festivity in France and the subsequent discovery and capture of the unprivileged guest gave rise to a host of jokes and anecdotes, and so a new color was [illegible] named in the insect's honor. Indeed, there was an extensive group of flea shades—old flea, young flea, flea's foot, lively flea and others. Puce, which was a kind of drab, is still familiar to the reading public through its frequent mention in literature, dramas and letters of noted personages in the past.

Few of us, however, know anything of the following colors, each of which was a favorite in its day and as familiar to the speech of fashionable ladies and gentlemen as are the [illegible], old rose, etc., of our own time. Here is a little list of them:

Marathon blue, drooping poppy, green of the Oracle, triumph of Aspasia, robe of Venus, bridal blush, canary's tail, merry laugher, flying chaff, dolphin about to die, thunderstruck, innocent infant, caterpillar brown, fading hope, Cinderella ribbon, smoke of Vesuvius, penitent hermit, dissolving pearl, Cupid's feather, captain's glory, beautiful savage, enchanted wild beast, rose of Eden, faithful shepherd, every traveler's shoe, agitated nymph and dreams of the beloved one pink.—Exchange.

A BLOOD TAX.

Payment by a French Town to Spain For an Ancient Crime.

Seven hundred years ago some shepherds of the valley of [illegible], in Navarre, were murdered by shepherds of the valley of [illegible], the crime taking place on the high pasture lands of [illegible], in the Pyrenees. It would have been difficult to bring the murderers individually to justice, and the Spaniards were preparing to make war upon the valley from which the French murderers had come when the French villages proposed that peace be maintained at the price of a yearly tax or tribute, to endure for all time, and this proposition was accepted.

The payment of this blood tax—originally three white mares, but later three cows of a particular breed and color—has been made ever since, the custom (it is nothing more) having survived even the great wars in which both France and Spain have engaged and the storm of the French revolution.

Yearly the representative men of the two valleys meet on the frontier at a certain stone remote from any town and go through the ceremony of presenting and receiving the cattle. The order of procedure, which is elaborate and impressive, is fixed by a document bearing the date 1375, though the tax was paid a hundred years prior to that time. The records of each yearly meeting and payment are duly attested and deposited in the archives of the [illegible].—New York Tribune.

The Sanity of Paris.

The French live within their means and by a sense of economy wholly unknown to us manage to save and contrive to enjoy whatever fortune has stored up for them, says F. Berkeley Smith in Success Magazine. To them France is sufficient. They voyage rarely and grumble less. The spendthrift or the man who plunges on the bourse, the races and the gaming table is regarded by the masses in the light of a rogue and a fool. The Parisians work hard enough for their leisure, but they never eliminate it nor allow their work to encroach upon their traditional daily vacation, as luncheon, the aperitif hour, dinner and fete days. They work, not to amass millions and die in harness, but to save enough to give their daughter her dot, without which she may never marry; start their son in his chosen trade and have enough income left to retire before they are too old to enjoy their freedom.

Want Their Children Thieves.

The Kabba Khels, a tribe that inhabits the country of the Khyber pass, in northern India, are thieves and consider thieving a most honorable occupation. A young woman of the Kabba Khel will not look at a young man who would like to become her husband unless he is proficient in the art. The fondest wish of a mother is that her little boy may become a cunning thief. Every child is consecrated, as it were, at its birth to crime. A hole is made in the wall similar to that made by a burglar, and the mother passes the infant backward and forward through the hole, chanting [illegible] "Be a thief! Be a thief! Be a thief!" RAPID STORY WRITING.

A Boast That Dumas Made, a Wager and the Result.

For rapidity of composition the prize among novelists must be awarded to Alexandre Dumas, who died with over 1,200 books to his credit, in all of which he had some share. According to Mr. Arthur F. Davidson, one of his biographers, he often declared that when once he had mapped out in his mind the scheme of a novel or a play the work was practically accomplished, since the mere writing of it presented no difficulty and could be performed as fast as the pen could travel. Some one disputed this; the result was a wager.

Dumas had in his head the plan of the "Chevalier de la Maison Rouge," of which he had not yet written a word, and he made a bet of 100 louis that he would write the first volume of the novel in seventy-two hours. The volume was to be formed by seventy-five large foolscap pages, each page containing forty-five lines and each line fifty letters. In sixty-six hours Dumas had done the work in his fair, flowing hand, disfigured by no erasures—and the bet was won with six hours to spare.—London Chronicle.

There was an old story, to which we find constant reference in Elizabethan writers, that crocodiles wept over their prey. No doubt the legend arose because the crocodile possesses largely developed lachrymal glands, but it appears in various amusing forms.

As early as the fourteenth century, in "Mandeville's Travels," we find: "In that contre ben gret plentee of Cokadrilles. Theise serpentes slee men, and thei eten hem wepynge."

An odd turn is given in the tale by the narrator of one of Sir John Hawkins' voyages. Whether he was a married man or not we do not know, but he writes: "His nature is ever, when he would have his prey, to cry and sob like a Christian body, to provoke them to come to him, and then he snatched at them! And thereupon came this proverb, that is applied unto women when they weep, Lachrymae crocodili, the meaning whereof is that as the crocodile when he crieth goeth then about most to deceive, so doth a woman most commonly when she weepeth."

In Fuller's "Worthies" there is the added information that "the crocodile's tears are never true save when he is forced where saffron groweth." Shakespeare, Spenser and Dryden allude to this old world fancy.

A Clever Retort.

During the last general elections Rev. J. J. McGaskill vigorously upheld the Reciprocity Pact in the Province of New Brunswick. At a meeting in Queen's County he was discussing the effect of the agreement on the price of various commodities.

"What about hay?" shouted an opponent.

"I'm discussing human food now," retorted the speaker, "but I'll come to your specialty in a moment."

THE FORMAL GOWN FOR DINNER OR BALL STILL SHOWS THE TRAIN

There are two distinct classes of evening gowns this season, the formal frock with its low bodice and short train and the chic little dancing frock of chiffon or lace with the clinging, scant skirt that interferes not at all with the steps of the dance. For the dinner or formal gown the richer silks and velvets are used, many of them showing an Oriental figure in wonderfully rich colorings. An overskirt of chiffon accompanies a [illegible] of lace or chiffon, and then again the over-draperies are sheer chiffon [illegible]. [illegible] to advantage one of the new figured silks that are so suitable to this style of gown. There are [illegible] of [illegible] and gold in the [illegible] design [illegible] ground is of gauze-like sheerness. The bodice is of figured chiffon.

To copy this design in size 36 it will require 4⅝ yards of material for the draped skirt and overblouse, 1½ yards of 36 inch material for the guimpe and foundation skirt and 1⅛ yards of silk for the girdle.

Canary color chiffon in 7862 is hung over a silk, the ground of which is a deeper yellow with a quaint figure scattered over the surface.

This gown may be copied with 5⅛ yards of 42 inch material for size 36.

The Persian headdress which is so modish this season adds greatly to the effect of the gown.

FAMOUS NOVELISTS.

What Some of Them Did Before They Took to Writing.

Among those novelists who studied law we have Fielding, Scott, Charles Reade, Wilkie Collins, Blackmore, Washington Irving, George Meredith, Robert Grant, Henry James, Anthony Hope, Rider Haggard and Owen Wister. Journalism, which Mr. Kipling once defined as the one legitimate branch of the profession, is represented by Dickens, David Christie Murray, William Black, J. M. Barrie, Marion Crawford, George W. Cable, Stephen Crane, George Barr McCutcheon, Frank Norris, Richard Harding Davis and David Graham Phillips. The navy and merchant marine have given us Smollett, Captain Marryat, Fenimore Cooper, Clark Russell, Joseph Conrad and Morgan Robertson. Artists and architects include Thackeray, Du Maurier, Hopkinson Smith, Robert Chambers, Thomas Hardy and William J. Locke. Medicine and theology are not so well represented. Under the former head we recall for the moment only Smollett (naval surgeon), Holmes, S. Weir Mitchell and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; under the latter, Sterne, Charles Kingsley, Henry van Dyke, Edward Everett Hale, Ian Maclaren, Ralph Connor and Thomas Dixon. College professors who have either given up their chairs to become novelists or have found time for occasional novels in the midst of their other duties are Sir Walter Besant, Robert Herrick and Brander Matthews.—Bookman.

Our Point of View

As a dove of peace is not doing anything these days she could make herself useful by laying a few eggs.

◆

If we had Thanksgiving Day on the second of January most of us could be thankful that the holiday was over.

◆

In Spain the other day a woman gave birth to seven girls. Just think of it. If that is not enough to drive a man to think, what is?

◆

The "army of the unemployed," that we read about in the Toronto papers, is composed largely of recruits who don't want any employment.

◆

A news item says a Parisian gown was made in twenty minutes. When you consider the small amount of material there is in a Parisian gown it looks like the makers loafed on the job.

◆

A Montreal woman was sent to prison for five months for throwing hot water on her husband. The average wife, however, keeps him in it all the time and is never punished.

◆

A Liberal newspaper says that the Liberal party must be reorganized by Liberal leaders, which is just as good a joke as to say that the tariff must be revised by the Grain Growers' Association.

◆

A rebel general in Mexico has issued orders that all foodstuffs shall be sold at low prices. This ought to qualify him for honorary membership in the Housewives' League.

◆

A German scientist says women can talk more than men with less fatigue, because their throats are smaller and they tax their lungs and vocal cords less. At last a great mystery has been explained.

◆

Says "General" Flora Drummond: "Here and now we swear that never again will the government get Mrs. Pankhurst. We shall organize a bodyguard which will even face battleships." So there, John Bull, you horrid man; you've got your notice.

◆

A paragraph in The Mail and Empire the other day states that a man's character can be determined by his handwriting. It would be well for those who have shady characters to learn how to use a typewriter if they don't want to be known for what they are.

Quit Sniffing,
Stop Sneezing,
Cure Your Cold Now

Thousands of Cases Prove the Quickest Cure is Catarrhozone.

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag—when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—goes right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflammation—makes Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I have ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry, of Seguin Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat—had droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial trouble." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essence of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00, and contains two months' treatment; smaller size 50c. and 25c., all druggists and storekeepers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

ASQUITH'S OLIVE BRANCH.

The Leeds speech of Premier Asquith was frankly accepted as a declaration of war. Far from its resolute tone having the effect that was intended, it simply spurred the more aggressive Unionists to make preparations for actual combat. The unbelievable, civil war in the United Kingdom, with its ghastly effects through the whole Empire, seemed very near to coming true.

The proclamation prohibiting the importation of arms and ammunition into Ireland proves that this is so, and Asquith's hurry to hold out hopes of a settlement which will accomplish everything which Sir Edward Carson says it must accomplish, shows that he realizes that his government with its parliamentary majority is not omnipotent to compel a change of the character that is designed without bloodshed.

The reality of the crisis is strikingly brought out by the proclamation and by Asquith's latest speech. That an arrangement may be brought about will be the hope of everyone; but what has been the effective factor in bringing about the possibility of an arrangement should never be forgotten, the threat of an appeal to force, a real, not an idle, threat.

PUPLIC OPINION

A HARSH SENTENCE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw in your paper a report stating that an 18-year-old girl has been sentenced to six months in the Mercer Institute simply because she, to make an honest living, cut off her hair and worked for a man in Fort William dressed in man's clothes. The report says that she worked for several months without her employer suspecting her sex. There is nothing to indicate that she was, in any respect loose in moral or character. The very fact that she worked without being suspected of being a woman. Still this poor girl is sent to an institution where loose female characters are confined. Is not this a travesty on justice!

Justice.

READING THE BIBLE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I occasionally see a copy of the Catholic Register, edited by Rev. Father Dorie. In a late issue of that sheet, a correspondent, presumably a Roman Catholic, writes asking, among other things, this question, "Are Catholics allowed to read their Bible?" Of course the editor says "yes," and declares that they have been reading that Bible for 1,900 years. Just how they could start reading the Bible 1,900 years ago may puzzle some people, but the strange thing to me is that a Roman Catholic could ask such a question. Evidently there has been very little stress laid on Bible reading by the priests who had dealt with that correspondent. Imagine a Protestant asking whether he was allowed to read the Bible or not!

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, etc.,

A. F. Foster.

The attraction was mutual, and during the remainder of her stay she was a frequent visitor at the rink. In due course she returned to her home in the west end of Glasgow, and shortly afterwards the young man secured a situation as instructor at the Victoria road rink, [illegible]

ANOINTING A NEW KING

Many Historic Customs Dropped Since George IV.'s Coronation.

The crowning of the King of England has usually been accompanied by what was regarded as the still more solemn rite of anointing with oil, which dates from the days of the ancient Hebrews. And in England, before the Norman conquest, the term used was "hallowing," or consecration, rather than that of coronation.

But from old records it seems that the ceremony as then performed at Winchester was in all essentials the same as that which now takes place in Westminster abbey. Few people seem to be aware that the coronation ceremony was the only religious rite of the Anglican Church which escaped the pruning policy of the reformers; hence its impressive ritual and gorgeous pageantries.

The last coronation at which every old world ceremony was duly performed was that of King George IV. At his crowning a coronation banquet took place, there was a procession of peers, the herb strewer scattered flowers, and the challenge of the champion of England was included in the ceremony. But at the coronations of William IV., Queen Victoria and King Edward these old customs were for various reasons omitted.

However, much remains that is of deep interest and stately splendor. The dean and chapter of Westminster claim the right to instruct the sovereign in the duties of this solemn service, and on coronation day the regalia are delivered into their custody. According to old records, [illegible] paid for the anointing oil supplied by the royal apothecary. The coronation chairs are of interest. That of the King is the chair of Edward the Confessor, used by every British sovereign since the time of Edward II. It is of oak and is recovered with fresh crimson velvet on each occasion. Beneath it is placed the stone of destiny, an ancient relic which came originally from Ireland.

COLLECTOR OF HAIRPINS

Odd Hobby of Secretary to the Mayor of Indianapolis.

Hairpins are the special hobby of Lemen K. Babcock, private secretary of Mayor Shank of Indianapolis. Mr. Babcock has hairpins by the hundreds and thousands, from the ordinary little wire affair that can be bought two dozen for 5 cents to the more elaborate tortoise shell effects that can be bought at a price as high as the buyer wishes to go. For years Mr. Babcock, who is a modest young bachelor, has been collecting hairpins until now he has approximately [illegible].

"I always wanted to make a collection of some sort," he says, "but I did not wish to collect something every one else was interested in. So far as I know there is only one other man in the country who collects hairpins, and he lives in Grand Rapids. My collection is probably the largest of its kind in the United States."

Included in the collection are 450 hairpins that he found in the streets during a tour of Europe in 1912. Every pin is labeled to show when and where it was found.

Worn out with Coughing?

Nothing is more exhausting than a persistent cough. Old folks and very young folks alike, find a bad cough most distressing. No need to go on suffering!

Peps will end the worst cough or cold. Peps contain the balsamic essences and fumes of the Pine tree, with other medicinal ingredients, so prepared, that as soon as a Pep is put into the mouth it dissolves and these medicinal fumes are liberated. They are then breathed down the throat, and direct to the lungs.

THE BLARNEY STONE

Corkonians Seem to Have a Good Reason for Not Kissing it

The best known trip from Cork is the one to the blarney stone, which you will find at the very top of the 120 foot castle nine miles out from Cork. A fine old castle it is, too, once a stronghold of the McCarthys. The country all about it is beautiful, notably on the way out, around the pretty St. Anne Shandon Church, where for a sixpence or a shilling to the sexton you can hear again
The bells of Shandon that sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the river Lee.

Now, to kiss the blarney stone you should be of a thin, wiry build. Stout people find some difficulty because of the bending required, which is why one well known pastor admitted to his congregation that the best he could do was to put the handle of his umbrella to the stone and then kiss the umbrella. You should first remove your coat and jacket and anything that is likely to fall from your pockets when you are held upside down (women seldom attempt the feat), because if you do not they will drop down to the moat below. And be careful of your movements, for they will show you even now the tree that broke the fall (and the head) of the last man who slipped. If you should fall, of course it means death.

Two fellow tourists will grab you by your ankles; then you will sit back like a woman washing a third story window on the outside and bend down, clutching two parallel iron bars set in the granite, until your head is hanging as low as it can hang. Your head by then should be in the embrasure the top stone of which is the blarney stone. You will forget, if you can, what will happen to you if you slip, while you apply your lips to the top stone. Then you sing out and your tourist friends will pull you back by your ankles.

From then on you are qualified to hand out the blarney, for into your speech in future will come a beguiling quality that was not there before.

But do the Corkonians kiss the blarney stone? I put the question to one man there. A twinkle came into his eyes.

"Sure," said he, "what is the good at all to be kissing an owld gray stone when Cork is full of pretty girls waiting to be kissed?"

Something in that, too, we thought as we hurried for the train that was to take us to Killarney.

THE MEUX MUMMY

Fears for the British Museum on Account of Hoodoo Relic

Believers in the supernatural are rather exercised in their minds at the moment regarding a mummy which is included in the Assyrian and Egyptian antiquities bequeathed to the British Museum by Lady Meux. The mummy is that of Nes-Amsu, who died about 2,500 years ago, but does not seem to be able to rest comfortably unless he is doing somebody a bad turn. Nes first came into the possession of the late Mr. Walter Ingram, younger brother of the founder of The Illustrated London News, who bought it while serving in one of the Nile campaigns.

Owing to a misunderstanding, Mr. Ingram did not pay the price the dealer expected, and in his wrath he heaped an ancient curse on Mr. Ingram's head. And when the mummy came home, and Mr. Ingram presented it to Lady Meux, who was then getting her collection together, certain hieroglyphics were found to read thus:

"If any person of any foreign country, whether he be black man, or Ethiopian, or Syrian, carry away this writing, or it be stolen by a thief, then whosoever doeth this, no offering shall be presented to their souls, they shall never enjoy a draught of cool water, they shall never more breathe the air, no son and no daughter shall arise from their seed, their name shall be remembered no longer upon earth, and most assuredly they shall never see the beams of the Disc" (the Sun God).

Curiously enough, two years later Mr. Ingram was killed while elephant shooting in Somaliland, while in 1900, Sir Henry Meux died childless, and the baronetcy became extinct, another phase of the curse therefore being fulfilled. And now some people are wondering what is going to happen to the directors of the British Museum if they accept the bequest.

The first practical Graphophone was a COLUMBIA. All other talking machines are manufactured under license. Columbia owns the fundamental patents.

The COLUMBIA process of Engraving Disc Records, invented by Jos. W. Jones, of Speedometer fame, has now been adopted by all makers. The above is the early disc type of horn Graphophone.

The COLUMBIA Grafonola or hornless Graphophone was the most significant improvement in years. It marked a big step forward in changing the "Talking Machine" into a musical instrument selling for as little as $20.00.

The COLUMBIA Grafonola is to-day the highest type and most attractive of self-contained instruments selling for $250 or less.

The Long Road of Progress

marked by COLUMBIA improvements.

The foundation of the talking machine industry rests on the fundamental patents granted—the first COLUMBIA. Every improvement of note since then has been devised and patented by COLUMBIA. The last word in the development of the one and only universal musical instrument is the "Grand." Only an inventive genius equal to conceiving the original primitive machine and this latest elaboration of it can hope to devise further improvement. That means that when it does come it will be marked COLUMBIA GRAFONOLA.

NERVES: (Continuation of article written for Home Health Club, by H. Lindlahr, M.D.) Among the country population of Germany the meaning of the words "dyspeptic" and "nervous" is hardly known. [illegible]

[illegible] mixture will provide enough of the former elements of nutrition, but it is much more difficult to provide sufficient amounts of the "mineral salts." In order to feed the blood with all the elements it needs in right proportions, and in that way to maintain it in a normal, healthy condition, one-half of the diet should consist of fruits and vegetables, and the other half should be made up of [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] safely in cleansing cases of any kind. I am glad you had good success with it, and hope that others will be inspired to use this simple home remedy whenever needed.

BEATS THEY ALL DREAD

ENGLISH CITIES HAVE DISTRICTS HARD TO POLICE.

In Some of the Slum Sections It is Customary For Two Constables to Patrol the Streets Together and Often Three Are Engaged—Hooligans Whose Chief Ambition is to "Bash the Cop"—London's Evil Quarters.

That the policeman is ever ready to risk his life for the country he serves is illustrated by the conduct of the constables who were [illegible] in the Houndsditch burglary and the Sidney Street siege in London. Furthermore, it will probably surprise many readers to learn that about one in every six London policemen is injured during the year, either by accident or through assault when making arrests.

It might be said without fear of exaggeration that the average constable who patrols the East End of London has more dangers to face than a soldier on a battlefield. There are the narrow streets in Whitechapel, Stepney, and adjacent districts, where it would be unsafe for a policeman to venture alone, even in the daytime. Constables generally patrol these criminal-infested quarters in pairs.

Almost equally dangerous is the "man in blue" is the area that extends from the back of the Borough by the Tower Bridge, bordered on one side by Tooley Street and by Long Lane on the other. This district includes a great number of what are known as "warehouse beats." In all the great cities there are certain districts given over the warehouses, and these are deserted and silent as churchyards in the nighttime. The policemen on duty have to walk down the passages that separate the warehouses and try each door, and probably they will not meet a human being, unless it be a burglar [illegible] from midnight to daybreak.

"Tunnel beats," that is, districts which comprise subways and arches are almost as nerve-trying to [illegible] as "warehouse beats." They are often the scenes of [illegible] robberies with violence, and similar crimes. One of the worst "tunnel beats" is said to be in Leeds. In the heart of the city there are numerous arches, and the police authorities have found it advisable to have them closely watched, both by night and by day. The arches are haunted by lawless characters, and more than one dead man has been found there during recent years.

The haunts of the "peaky blinders" at Birmingham—the type of character known in London as the hooligan—are almost as bad as the worst districts in Whitechapel. Gangs of "peaky blinders" [illegible] and the neighborhood of [illegible] Street, and woe betide the [illegible] constable who [illegible] one of the members of a gang unless he is well supported by other comrades. In the [illegible] swinging in the air, and one or two cracked skulls are generally the result of affrays with this Midland type of hooligan.

In the Ardwick district of Manchester, where the slums are thickest, the police on night duty walk about with their lives in their hands, and the same might be said of certain portions of Salford, which want a lot of beating for general lawlessness and antipathy to the society of the police.

There has been considerable outcry lately against certain districts of Liverpool, in which foreigners — mostly Chinamen—have settled down to carry on certain nefarious practices. The police have to use considerable wariness in tackling such aliens, who have no compunctions about using a knife when cornered.

Perhaps the worst beats in Liverpool, however, are on the long road extending from Bootle Dock on the north to the Herculaneum Dock on the south. Running into this road are numerous small streets occupied by dock laborers, foreigners, and questionable characters, amongst whom robbery with violence is by no means uncommon. The police patrol this district in strong numbers, but many have met with ill-treatment there. Various streets in the neighborhood of the Sailors' Home and Marylebone, too, are noted for the lawless characters who frequent them.

In Glasgow, round about the Green, are certain spots which the police do not consider particularly desirable. Neither are parts of the streets in the neighborhood of the Cowcaddens exactly what policemen term pleasant localities, and it is no unusual thing for two or three policemen to patrol the beats together. In these districts of Glasgow the police have some tough encounters, and it was only a short time ago that one constable, while trying to arrest a gambler who was creating a disturbance at a football match on Glasgow Green, was so badly knocked about that he was rendered unconscious.

In Dundee some of the streets off the Greenmarket used to have an unenviable notoriety, and the Scouringburn, Fish street, and Overgate used to appear frequently in police court cases. One of the most notorious women drunkards in "Bonnie Dundee," who was convicted hundreds of times, was, years ago, always to be found in the Overgate when she was not being looked after by the prison authorities.

ADAM'S PEAK.

A Region Revered by Three Conflicting Religious Sects.

Throughout Asia "holy places" are almost as numerous as leaves on a tree, but in Ceylon is a mountain which enjoys the unique distinction of being a very holy place to the devotees of three absolutely distinct and conflicting religious sects. This is Adam's Peak, or Samanala.

According to the Mohammedan belief, Adam, after the fall, was taken by an angel to the top of Samanala, and a panorama of all the ills that through sin should afflict mankind was spread out before him. His feet left an impression on the solid rock, and his tears formed the lake from which pilgrims still drink. The Buddhists contend that it was not Adam, but Buddha himself that made the footprint in the rock, that being the last spot where he touched the earth before ascending to heaven, while the Brahmins have still another legend. All, however, Brahmins, Mohammedans and Chinese, agree that Samanala is a very holy place, and to perform a pilgrimage to the spot is to the Buddhist what a visit to Mecca is to a Mohammedan. In mixed crowds the worshipers come, each pitying the ignorance of the other, who is so far from the "true way."

It requires no little faith and some imagination to trace in the depression in the rock the likeness of a human footprint. It is 5½ feet long by 2½ feet wide, on the top of a huge boulder. The natives, however, insist that it is the footprint of Adam.—Bennett Campbell Hall in Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

MINIATURE GARDENS.

Tiny Lakes, Trees and Houses in Diminutive Japanese Parks.

The Japanese have the art of dwarfing trees to mere shrubs and of cultivating plants in a similar way. The people take great delight in their miniature gardens, which require a special gardener to keep them down to fixed limits. A Japanese garden is generally about ten yards square, and in this small space is found a park and domain, with lake, summer houses, temples, trees, all complete and in keeping with the dimensions available.

One such garden shows a lake four feet long and full of goldfish. On the border stands a pine tree exactly eighteen inches high, and fifty years old. Beneath its shade is a temple carved out of one piece of stone the size of a brick. On a lofty crag of some two and a half feet stands a fine maple tree, perfect in form and shape, fifteen years old and twelve inches high.

One household in Japan boasts of a complete garden contained in a [illegible]. Everything is complete down to the fish in the lake, a sheet of water only a few [illegible] square, and the footbridges over the water courses. Ten [illegible] there are and numerous trees of various kinds, each about six inches in height. [illegible] on the hills are these diminutive trees, but full of vitality, and yet never growing bigger.—New York Press.

Make Life [illegible] Joyous and Sue Out Business Worries.

Whatever your lot in life, keep joy with you, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. It is a great healer. Sorrow, worry, jealousy, envy, ill-temper, create friction and grind away the delicate human machinery so that the brain loses its cunning.

Half the misery in the world would be avoided if the people would make a business of having plenty of fun at home instead of running everywhere else in search of it.

"Save For Rest and Fun." "No Business Troubles Allowed Here." These are good home building mottoes.

When you have had a perplexing day, when things have gone wrong with you and you go home at night exhausted, discouraged, blue, instead of making your home miserable by going over your troubles and trials [illegible]. Instead of dragging them home and making yourself and your family unhappy with them and spoiling the whole evening, just lock everything that is disagreeable in your office.

Just resolve that your home shall be a place for bright pictures and pleasant [illegible], kindly feelings toward everybody and "a corking good time" generally. If you do this you will be surprised to see how your vexations or business [illegible] will be ironed out in the morning and how the crooked things will be straightened.

We have made expensive preparations for the Holiday Trade, and invite the public to call and inspect our stock and get our prices before purchasing elsewhere.

Please Remember

1.—That The Times Bookstore has everything marked close to cost.

2.—We can sell cheaper than any other house. The reason we can afford to do so is, because our expenses are practically nil compared with other concerns.

3.—We are large manufacturers of stationery supplies and books, employing about 40 persons, so that in these lines we have goods at first cost.

4.—We sell to the wholesale trade, who again sell to the bookstores and stationers throughout the country, so that by purchasing direct from us you save, in many cases, the profits of two "middle men."

5.—The Times Bookstore is confident that it can give you satisfaction, and would urge an early inspection of our stock before the rush begins. You only have to select what you want and have the goods put aside for delivery when required.

Soliciting the favor of your esteemed patronage, and wishing you the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very respectfully yours,

Times Bookstore

THE TIMES BUILDING, 141 HUNTER ST.

A Game That Lasts.

For the man who has once had the responsibility of coaching an eight-oared crew the task has an attraction which can't be resisted. Some one asked me once why it is that most college crew coaches make good chess players. I know that the person who put the question didn't know much about the rowing game, for producing a successful eight-oared crew requires an amount of thinking which makes chess seem like pure recreation by comparison. Of course it's different from a chess problem in the fact that eight men don't always start with the same strength of pieces, but this only adds to the fascination of trying to build a winning combination.

The Other Way.

There was a hopeful gleam in the eyes of the young man [illegible] as he approached the father of his ladylove.

"Will you give your daughter to me in marriage, sir?" he asked in as firm a voice as he could muster.

"I'm afraid you are not well enough acquainted with her, young man," answered the father.

"Why, I've seen her twice a week for nearly a year," said the astonished suitor.

"That may all be," said the parent, "but if you knew much about her character you'd have said, 'Will you give me to your daughter in marriage?'"

A Japanese Peculiarity.

"When a Japanese servant is [illegible]," says a traveler, "he must smile like a Cheshire cat. The etiquette is very misleading at first. I often used to think that Taki, my rikisha 'boy,' meant to be impertinent when he insisted on smiling when I was angry at him. But when he told me of the death of his little child with a burst of laughter I knew that this was only one of the curious details of etiquette in this topsy turvy land."

Frogs For the Meds.

For the use of the embryo doctors a big batch of some thousands of frogs has been obtained by the faculty of medicine in Toronto University. The frogs are not used for French dishes, the idea being merely to try experiments upon them. For instance a student will "pith" a frog that is, make it insensitive to pain by destroying its brain. He may then expose its heart by dissection. To the heart he will attach an apparatus which records its beats. Drugs which paralyze or stimulate or kill outright are daily used on the small animals in this condition. Often when the monotony of the work becomes too oppressive, there ensues a "frog fight" and many a fellow has to eat frogs' legs that are neither cooked nor cleaned.

In Danger of Getting Lost.

A young barrister was once arguing a case before Chief Justice Barker of New Brunswick. His brief was an elaborate one, and his argument very technical and tedious; and finally the judge began to lose interest in the abstruse deductions of the youthful Blackstone.

"Pardon me, your honor," said the lawyer, "but do you follow me?"

"So far I have," replied the judge, "but if I could find my way back I'd gladly stop right here."

LIKED THE FRYING PANS.

Indians Found an Exciting Use For the Cooking Utensils.

The Indian, however averse he may be to any kind of useful labor, is not slow to avail himself of a new source of amusement. This was shown some years ago when among the supplies sent by the government to a certain agency in the west were several hundred large frying pans with long handles.

These the Indian agent found in stock when he took possession, and at the end of the year the number had not been diminished. Thinking that perhaps he had not discharged his whole duty in the matter of supplying Uncle Sam's wards with these culinary utensils, the agent began making special efforts to induce the red men to use them.

At first it was hard work, but by the time he had given out about two dozen there came a sudden change. Not a day passed in which the agent did not have applications for at least a dozen, and some days he disposed of twice that number.

When the supply was nearly exhausted he noticed among the applicants some to whom he had previously given pans, and naturally enough he became a trifle curious to know what use they were making of them. He questioned several of the men to no purpose, but at length a young buck more communicative than the rest gave him to understand that if he would visit a certain part of the reservation not far away he would find his inquiry answered.

The next day, therefore, the agent rode out in the direction indicated. About two miles from the agency he noticed on the crest of a narrow spur of the mountain three or four Indians who suddenly disappeared on the opposite side of the ridge. At the same time he heard faintly the cry of many voices.

On turning the point of the ridge he saw a crowd of several hundred Indians who were shouting as if greatly pleased. He noticed also several objects, which he at first supposed to be bowlders, descending the side of the mountain toward them with tremendous rapidity.

Instead of fleeing from these moving objects the Indians simply applauded and shouted. Soon he saw other objects like the first descending, and in a short time the whole situation was plain to him.

Having selected a long, smooth slope of the mountain where there were no stones, the Indians had converted it into a sort of earthen toboggan slide and were utilizing the frying pans as toboggans. Seating themselves in the pans, they grasped the handles with both hands, then, crossing their legs over their arms, they went [illegible] down the slide with great rapidity. The agent let them have the few pans that remained in the storehouse, but did not order a new supply.—Harper's Weekly.

WOMEN AND CARDS.

The Newest Fad of the Fashionable Set In New York.

Card playing for money among the fashionable women of New York has become such a craze that they have found it expedient to emulate the example of their husbands and brothers to that extent that there are few games now that "kitty" doesn't play an important part—that is to say, a percentage of the stakes goes to pay for a hired room and refreshments.

The big Broadway and Fifth avenue hotels are the scenes of many "quiet little games of bridge these wintry afternoons, and here is how they are arranged: Women who launch upon shopping or calling tours in the morning hours agree to meet for luncheon at some well known hotel. One woman in the party is designated as hostess, and she pays the bills. While the luncheon is in progress orders are given that a room be reserved and the furniture so arranged that one or two tables of bridge may be indulged in.

HORSE'S KEEN INSTINCT.

Hydro "Employe" Can Spot Dead Lamps With Certainty.

Bucephalus, as every schoolboy knows, has always been the "top liner" in horsedom, though the enchanted horse in that old friend of our boyhood, "The Arabian Nights," ran him a close second. Since then innumerable tales have been told of the intelligence of "man's best friend," and the latest comes from the city of Toronto, just at a time, too, when the auto seems about to hack Dobbin off the stage.

Among the multifarious departments which are in existence to attend to the various utilities run by the city, is one called the Hydro-Electric garage. Here are kept the autos used by Hydro officials; trucks for the "trouble department," and other machines too numerous, almost, to mention. There are also horses, which are used occasionally to save gasoline.

One ancient equine has nocturnal duties, to wit: He hauls about, all over the city streets, from dewy eve to morn, an equipage presided over by an employe whose duty it is to prowl round, from one thoroughfare to another, and replace burned out street lamps with new ones. Whether, like that friend of Haroun Alraschid (to drop once more into mention of "The Arabian Nights") he cries "New Lamps for Old," deponent sayeth not.

But it is in connection with the intelligence of this particular horse that this tale has to do. So "wise to his job" has the venerable nag become that, while roaming the streets in the wee sma' hours, apparently sometimes, asleep on his feet, he will instantly spot a Hydro post in front of which a lamp is not burning, and, without word or act on the part of his driver, proceed with nonchalance most remarkable, to turn round, if on the wrong side of the street, and bring the wagon to a halt right at the foot of the pole to which the "dead" lamp is attached.

Nor does the intelligence of the gentle animal stop at dead lamps. He has a keen scent for apples, and can, in the language of his driver, "spot one on the street a hundred yards away." A loose rein and [illegible] driver allow Dobbin fair chance to pick up his tid-bit, which he masticates leisurely and then, without urging, starts once more on his way in quest of "dead" lamps.

A MERCENARY MARRIAGE.

Romance of Lady March and the Second Duke of Richmond.

One of the mercenary marriages which turned out happily was that of the second Duke of Richmond. He was married to Lady Sarah Cadogan as part of an agreement that her father's gambling debts should be cancelled, Lord March (as he then was) being eighteen and the bride thirteen. Immediately after the wedding Lord March's tutor took him off to the continent for the grand tour, and Lady Sarah went back to her nursery. This is the sequel as told by Lady Russell in [illegible]:

"Three years elapsed. Lord March returned from his travels, but, having such an unfavorable recollection of his bride, was in no hurry to claim her and went the first evening of his return to London to the opera. There he noticed that all eyes—and lorgnettes—were directed to one box, where, surrounded by several persons, sat a most beautiful young creature. Turning to a man beside him, he asked who she was. 'You must be a stranger in London,' was the answer, 'not to know the reigning toast of the town, the beautiful Lady March?' Lord March lost no time in going to the box and introducing himself to his bride, with whom he ever after lived so affectionately that their devotion to one another became proverbial."

Cruelty to Women.

We wonder what death the man will die or what tortured life he will be caused to lead who discovered the little "trick" by which a woman's age can be ascertained beyond a doubt—that is to say, while her health is normal. The only instrument required is an ordinary watch. The wrist of the lady whose age is in question is the telltale, for when you count her pulse and it registers sixty-nine beats per minute you know that she is between twenty and twenty-five years old. During the next five years seventy-one beats go to the minute, and the "femme de trente ans" and over is entitled to seventy-three. It is a pity the men of science who established these facts is not more exact when dealing with the women of riper age, for, according to popular tradition, it is only after she is thirty that a woman begins to leave off having birthdays.—Westminster Gazette.

Dropping Coaches on the Run.

The ingenious means by which one of the great railroad systems of England drops passenger coaches off at intermediate stations without stopping the locomotive, even for a fraction of a second, in its speed of sixty or more miles an hour, is called the "slip coach" system and is described in Popular Mechanics. It is a system never tried in America and consists in dropping, or "slipping," one or more of the rear coaches just before the station is reached. [illegible]

Stomach Always Baulked, Had Constant Indigestion

SMELL OF COOKING MADE HIM SICK—BILIOUS TWO DAYS A WEEK.

Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Clemmons' experience is not unusual. Nowadays poor stomachs are more the rule than the exception. But the proper treatment is sure to make a quick cure. You can always depend on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, they reach the trouble at once, go right to business, work while you sleep and have you feeling better if not cured next morning.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge P.O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded [illegible] the action of the heart, for often at night it would do grand stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend who had been cured of a similar condition advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were relieved of excessive work. Health soon grew within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man."

Be advised—Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c. per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Fined for Wrong Hockey Playing

Lindsay Post: Hockey is a strenuous game and the trouble sometimes with the [illegible] devotees of this sport is that they lose their heads and allow their angry passions to rise. A display of bad temper on the part of a boy brought him into the police court Tuesday to answer to the charge of assaulting another boy by striking him over the head with a hockey stick. A fine of $1.00 and costs was imposed.

Yesterday's Police Court.

Yesterday morning the police court was held by Magistrate Dumble downstairs in the squad room. Only one case was presented. This case was a charge of drunk preferred against a young local man. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5. It seems that on Wednesday night, the young man, realizing his condition, called voluntarily at the police station. He was told to go in peace. Unfortunately he dallied with the forbidden cup again and was pinched. When handed out the $5 fine, he remarked, [illegible] days in which to settle the fine.

PEERAGE INTRICACIES

THEY ARE A COMPLETE LIFE STUDY IN THEMSELVES

The Lords Grey and Lords Howard Are a Numerous and Confusing Group and the Lords of Hamilton Are Legion—Extra and Supplementary Titles Are Common to Most Noble Houses.

If anyone is seeking a hobby which shall tax brain and memory to the utmost, and which shall [illegible] and baffle and tantalize him to the verge of distraction, let him set to work to master the intricacies and perplexities of our peerage. I am inclined to think that after a few weeks of it he would turn to Pons IV. as a light recreation.

Who, for instance, even in the gilded circle of the peerage itself, can reel off the various fellow-peers who answer to the description "Lord Grey"? And how should he know which of them was referred to under that designation—Earl Grey, Viscount Grey of Wilton, Baron Grey of Codnor, or Baron Grey de Ruthin, to say nothing of Earl de Grey? The Lords Howard are equally confusing; for we have a Lord Howard of Effingham, another of Glossop, and a third of Walden. And are there not Lords Howard of Morpeth and Charlton?

The Lords of Hamilton swarm like bees. We have a Hamilton Duke and a Marquis, Lord Hamilton of Dalzell, and two subsidiary titles of Lord Hamilton, in addition to a small crowd of courtesy lords who bear the name. Of Lords Stuart or Stewart there are four; and coroneted Boyles, Byrons, Douglases, Hays, Herberts, Hills, and Montagus number three each.

If you wish to go farther into the peerage maze, take a peep at the division lists of the House of Lords, which may well puzzle the King-at-Arms himself. Who, in the name of all that is reasonable, is the Earl Strange who figures there? Who are Barons Skene, Mendip, Saltersford, and Fisherwick, Worlingham, Meldrum, and Botreaux? All, as a matter of fact, are well-known peers, who sit in the House of Lords under these unfamiliar imperial titles. The Earl of Aberdeen is known at Westminster only as Viscount Gordon; the Marquis of Headfort, as Baron Kenlis; the Earl of Limerick, as Baron Foxford; the Marquis of Sligo is Baron Monteagle; the Marquis of Waterford is Baron Tyrone—and so on through the long [illegible] list.

The foreign titles borne by our peers, however familiar in a dozen alien countries, are just as effectual in concealing identity from us. We know Lord Reay well enough, but who knows him as the Dutch Baron Mackay of Ophemert? Lord Clarendon figures in the Prussian peerage roll as Baron Villiers; his grace of Richmond is hailed by the old French noblesse as Duc d'Aubigny; the Duke of Hamilton is Duc de Chatelherault across the Channel; and his brother Duke of Wellington is Duque de Ciudad Rodrigo, Marquess of Douro and Torres Vedras, Conde de Vimieira, Prince of Waterloo, and a grandee of the first class in Spain. His grace of Marlborough is the Swabian Prince of Mindelheim; the Earl of Clancarty is Marquess of Heusden when he takes a trip to Holland; and in far Brazil the Earl of Dundonald is greeted as Marquess of Maranham. In Italy, Charles Giustiniani-Bandini is Duc di Mondragone, Count of Carniola, and Lord of Verona; in England he is the Earl of Newburgh, and the heir to all these strange dignities is just Viscount Kynnaird.

Even when the titles are familiar enough to us it is fatally easy to blunder. Thus, if we speak of Earl Lytton and the Earl of Beauchamp we convict ourselves of gross, unpardonable ignorance. It is the Earl of Lytton, the Marquis of Cholmondeley, the Earl of Onslow; just as it is the Marquess Camden, the Earl Beauchamp, and the Earl Cawdor—and so on through a long list of more than forty peers who repudiate the preposition "of."

If we descend to subsidiary titles we are hopelessly undone. Indeed, it is doubtful whether some of our peers themselves could reel off the list of their dignities offhand without error. His grace of Atholl has twenty-two of them, ranging from Baron to Duke; The Duke of Argyll boasts seventeen; the Duke of Hamilton sixteen, including a trio of dukedoms; and the Marquis of Bute and the Duke of Buccleuch count their up to fifteen.

Who among us could recognize the Duke of Atholl under the guise of Lord Balquhidder; the Duke of Argyll in Earl Cowal; Lord Bute, as Viscount Mountjoy, or His Grace of [illegible] as Viscount of [illegible]? Lord Rosebery as Viscount of Inverkeithing is a stranger to most of his [illegible]; Lord Lansdowne, as Earl of Wycombe; and the Duke of Portland would scarcely know himself as Baron Bolsover.

One ought to be very careful of one's orthography in writing to, or of, our peers if we are not to be branded as ignoramuses. Beware of writing Donegal, Guildford, Roseberry, Kinnoul, or Argyle instead of Donegall, Rosebery, Kinnoull, Guilford, and Argyll. And we must be equally careful to avoid confusing Lord Camden with Lord Campden, Lord Dundas with [illegible], Earl Landaff with Viscount Llandaff, or Baron [illegible] with Baron [illegible]—to mention but a few of these confusing [illegible] who are really quite distinct, and who certainly object to being mixed up.

Courtesy titles are a great puzzle to the uninitiated. It is, of course, usual for the eldest son and heir to a dukedom, marquisate, or earldom to be known by the family title next in rank to that borne by his father, but the rule is subject to perplexing variations. Thus the heir to the Marquisate of Lansdowne is known in alternate generations as Earl of Kerry and Earl of Shelburne; and the heir to the Marquisate of Lothian may be Lord Jedburgh as well as Earl of Ancram.—Modern Society.

WESTERN ONTARIO IS BEING STRIPPED OF FINEST CATTLE

Record Prices Paid Owing to U.S. Tariff, and Local Butchers Worry About Their Future Supply

London, Jan. 8.—Frank Shannon, of Montreal, is scouring this district for cattle to be delivered in May, and is offering record prices. He has secured many thousand dollars worth of animals.

There is the keenest competition in this district just now that has ever been known, owing to the marked shipments made across the line recently under the new tariff law, and the consequent scarcity of good meat. Experts say that meat prices for the public in general this summer will break all records.

As a result of the heavy purchases of the American buyers, there never was such a small supply of cattle in the country, and many local butchers are beginning to wonder where they will get their supply, with so much of the present stock already contracted by Toronto, Montreal, and Detroit and Chicago packing houses.

Keep Thyself Pure

Your stomach can no more handle your food when clogged with indigestion than can a furnace work properly with a bed of clinkers. Now, in order to acquire good digestion and pure, wholesome blood, you must first purify and keep pure your stomach. Result, pure blood, robust health, long life. Sanol Blood Salt will do all this. At all druggists. Manufactured by Sanol Mfg. Co., Ltd., Winnipeg.

An Italian labourer at Winnipeg tells of the drowning of 75 navvies by the wreck of a boat in the Fraser River, B.C.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

WONDERFUL GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE INDEPENDENT ORDER OF FORESTERS

Splendid Address of Supreme Chief Ranger Stevenson at Big Banquet

Members from All Parts of Canada and United States Present

The complimentary banquet given in Toronto on Thursday evening to Hon. Elliott G. Stevenson, Supreme Chief Ranger of the Independent Order of Foresters, was a magnificent success in every respect. The big banquet was held in the Temple Building. The great importance of this function was demonstrated by the fact that many of the most prominent men of Canada and the United States were among the guests. Four hundred and fifty sat down to the banquet. A notable feature of the occasion was the display of a life size portrait of the late Dr. Oronhyatekha, whose life was so largely devoted to furthering the interests of the I.O.F.

Toasting the Order.

At the conclusion of the feast [illegible] E. W. J. Owens, M.P.P., [illegible] and proposed the health of King George V. and President Woodrow Wilson, which was responded to by the singing of the National Anthem and "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

[illegible]

"of complete solvency," said he. "May we continue to have this distinguished leader as our guide, philosopher and friend. The I. O. F. has done utmost good for the poor widows and orphans, therefore we should make some extra effort to make the order even stronger numerically." (Applause).

He then called upon Mr. R. J. Niddrie, M.D., to read and present an address expressing the order's appreciation of Mr. Stevenson's fidelity towards its interests and progress. It reads as follows:—

Address to Mr. Stevenson.

"To the Honorable Elliott G. Stevenson, Supreme Chief Ranger, Independent Order of Foresters:

"Bro. Stevenson,—It is fitting at this time that we, representing as we do to-night many of the High Court jurisdictions in the Independent Order of Foresters, should tender you our best wishes for the coming year, which we hope will be for you and your colleagues as pleasantly peaceful as the year 1913 was honorably strenuous.

"The older among us can remember the struggling years of this now powerful and stable Order and the hand-to-mouth existence of a slender band of earnest men. We can also remember the steps by which the Order gradually increased in numbers and in influence until it emerged into the second stage of legal recognition by the Government in whose territory we had established our courts. With recognition of the fraternal system came responsibilities to make fraternal insurance safe and sound for the dependents of the members. It has fallen to your lot to bear these responsibilities for us and we thank you for your six years' labor as Supreme Chief Ranger.

"At the outset of your administration you were confronted with many and serious problems. These you have successfully solved. That success was due to the confidence of the members and of the public in your leadership.

"Of a continuance of this support we can confidently assure you. For, proud as we have been of the early struggles of the Order, proud as we have been to see it rear its temple in the Queen City of Ontario, proud as we have been to see our Chiefs recognized by statesmen and Governments as men of public eminence, we are to-night prouder still of the work that has enabled us to fulfill that first, last and basic obligation of an insurance fraternity, the obligation of sound finance.

"Signed on behalf of the Committee,
"E. W. Owens, K.C., M.L.A.,
"(Chairman.)
"R. J. Niddrie, M.D., (Secretary)."

Ovation to Mr. Stevenson.

Strong Address in Reply.

Seldom is the subject of a demonstration given such an ovation as Mr. Stevenson received as he rose to respond. Vociferous cheering lasted several minutes and ended with musical honors.

Mr. Stevenson said in part:—

I thank you very sincerely for your kind and generous words, and I assure you that had it not been for the [illegible] and continued evidence of your confidence and the loyalty and support of the active men of [illegible] society the important work you have referred to in your address as accomplished would not have been possible of accomplishment.

As earnestly as I have striven to serve our society and its membership [illegible] of health and strength [illegible] how futile would have been the efforts made to place our society in the proud position it occupies to-day as one of the very few fraternal societies on an actuarily sound basis without the sympathetic support and encouragement of a greater portion of our membership.

It is nearly seven years since the late lamented Oronhyatekha was called [illegible]

Japan's Preparation for War

Tokio, Jan. 10.—The Japanese Government has been informed that the new cruiser, "Haruna," which was launched in December at Kobe, will be ready sooner than was expected, because of the success of the builders in getting a quick delivery of some of the materials required in construction. Japan will build three super-dreadnoughts in 1914 in home dockyards, and is making plans to form an aerial army.

HOCKEY NEWS

Oshawa vs. Petes.

Last night Brock street rink was crowded to capacity by a large attendance of enthusiastic fans. The game was between Oshawa, who held a fair chance for "the goods." The result was Oshawa 2, Petes 6.

RURAL MAIL ROUTES TO BE EXTENDED

The people of Ennismore have so prized the rural mail route recently established there that they are asking for an extension. Negotiations to this end have been under way between the Department and Mr. Burnham, who has been notified that a departmental agent will be sent here at once in response to his request to look into the matter.

It is rumored that John Clarkson, of Lakehurst, Charles E. Horton, of Peterborough, and Dan Whetung, Jr., of Curve Lake, having the lowest tenders, have secured the Lakefield-Lakehurst route, the Fourth line of Smith route and the Curve Lake route.

RECORD PRICES PAID TO THE FARMERS FOR BEEF

London, Ont., Jan. 9.—In their anxiety to secure beef for their respective packing houses, American and Canadian buyers made a new record to-day, when eight cents per pound was offered on the hoof, waste not to be deducted. Only a short time ago farmers thought six cents was a top-notch price, and the oldest stock raisers cannot remember anything like the prices at which contracts for spring delivery are now being signed.

There is a great scarcity of calves in this district.

The outlook for meat eaters is anything but bright, and the only encouraging feature of the situation is that the continued mild weather is bringing the prices of eggs down within reason again. Large quantities are now coming in and prices are falling rapidly, notwithstanding that large shipments are being made. It is reported that efforts are being made by some of the representatives of leading firms to form a ring to stop prices paid to farmers going any higher, as the packers fear that people will absolutely refuse to buy.

THREE-FIFTHS CLAUSE IS TOO HEAVY A HANDICAP--ROBLIN

Tells Manitoba Temperance Men That They Are More Fortunate Than Their Comrades in Ontario

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 9.—A deputation from the Social Service Council of Canada waited upon Premier Roblin and colleagues at the Parliament Buildings and urged upon the Government the advisability of making some amendments to local option laws, asking at the same time that a Provincial plebiscite on the question of the abolition of the bar be taken.

In reply Premier Roblin said: "Abolition of the bar would be in the worst possible interests of sobriety and good-living. If you will come out frankly and say it is a prohibition law you want, I am with you, for I am as anxious as any man living to promote the cause of temperance. But I have not yet surrendered my judgment of sobriety to anyone else. To close bars, opening up instead, numerous wholesale places, would in my opinion, be a retrograde step. Close the bars and wholesale houses, too, that is the thing."

The Premier asserted that the local option law was more favorable to the temperance element than the boasted law of Ontario, which demanded a three-fifths majority. The Manitoba law, he said, imposed no such heavy handicap.

L. O. F. IS NOW ON FIRM BASIS

Big Banquet to Hon. E. G. Stevenson Who Has Brought Order Out of a Comparative Chaos

That the Independent Order of Foresters has had to struggle against adverse circumstances is an open secret. This splendid fraternal and beneficial society has now, Phoenix like, risen above the ashes of its former depression to a leading place amongst similar organizations of the world.

As may be seen in other columns of this issue a big banquet was tendered to Hon. Elliott G. Stevenson, Supreme Chief Ranger of the I.O.F. The banquet was attended by prominent Canadians from all parts and also by leading Americans from both West and South. An interesting incident noticed at the banquet which was attended by 450 guests, was a life-sized portrait of the late Dr. Oronhyatekha whose splendid ability and organization laid the fundamental principles of the Order, which has now safely weathered the storms of adverse circumstances.

Mr. E. W. J. Owens, M.P.P., amid vociferous and prolonged applause proposed a conjoint toast to the King and President Wilson.

A very flattering, but well based address was read to Mr. Stevenson, who made a suitable reply.

The I.O.F. in Peterborough is a strong organization that is patriotically supported by its numerous members and that gives every indication of rapid growth.

HIGH PRIEST OF CRYSTAL CIRCLE IS NOW OUT ON HIS PAROLE

Released From Dartmoor After Serving Part of Sentence Police Have Papers

Dundee Credulous

London, Jan. 9.—The London correspondent of the Dundee Advertiser, announces in all apparent seriousness that a rumor has reached him "that the removal of the Vatican from Rome to Montreal is in serious contemplation."

The Tablet, the official Catholic organ, merely remarks that the foregoing paragraph enables one to test the measure of the credulity of Dundee.

Vicar-General McCann was spoken to and laughed before replying.

"Oh, I don't think there is anything in it," he said. "It is not—likely."

"Do you intend us to infer that it is ridiculous?"

"Not precisely that, something just this side of ridiculous. There is no truth in it."

Toronto, Jan. 9.—In one of the most crowded courts of the year, filled mostly with women who were all eyes for the High Priest of the Crystal Circle, who sat calmly in the prisoner's dock, Francis W. Wright, whose real name is Frank Dutton Jackson, alleged ex-convict, of Dartmoor Prison, England, was remanded another week, on the charge of securing by fraud considerable sums of money from Mrs. Harriett Sharp. He pleaded not guilty, and elected to go before a jury.

The remand was at the request of Assistant Crown Attorney Hughes.

Police Have Papers.

"We have come on a number of important papers," said he.

These papers are said to be Jackson's certificate of parole from Dartmoor prison, one of the provisions of which is that he should report every month to the chief of police in whatever town he is in; mutual will and agreements between Jackson and Mrs. Sharp; and an agreement with a lawyer, providing for the ascertaining of the whereabouts of Madame Anna Odelia Dis Debar.

These papers, it is said, were taken by the police out of a safety deposit vault.

W. H. Hodge, K.C., appeared first for Jackson, and to-day T. C. Robinette, K.C., was called in to act with Mr. Hodge. Mr. Alexander McGregor is counsel for Mrs. Sharp.

TRANSVAAL FORCES CALLED TO ARMS AS STRIKE ROW GROWS

Cabinet Hastily Called, Issued Proclamation to the Citizen Soldiers

Cape Town, U. of S.A., Jan. 9.—The entire active citizen defence force of the Transvaal was called out by a proclamation issued to-day after an urgent meeting of the Cabinet to consider the situation brought about by the railroad strike. This action was taken on the ground that serious disorders were anticipated.

Burghers Called to Arms.

The burghers of several districts of the Orange River Colony also were called to arms.

General Jan Christian Smuts, Minister of Defence of the Union of South Africa and Henry Burton, Minister of Railways, departed hurriedly for Johannesburg after the Cabinet Council had ended.

Railway Traffic Halted.

The strike of railway men had badly disorganized the railroad service in the Transvaal and the Orange Free State Provinces to-day and traffic was suspended as far south as Klerksdorp, about 120 miles southwest of Johannesburg.

Police were on guard at all the stations and detachments of troops were ordered to the affected area as a precautionary measure. It is feared by the authorities that the men may be aroused to acts of violence by the revolutionary speeches of their leaders.

THE DOCTORS STILL HOPE TO SAVE PREMIER WHITNEY

With Rugged Doggedness He is Still Battling for His Life "No Improvement"; Latest Bulletin

New York, Jan. 9.—With "rugged doggedness," to use the words of his physician, Sir James Whitney is still battling for his life, and the struggle is still a drawn battle. After a night with six hours of [illegible] sleep, and a much appreciated breakfast, he is lying quietly on his back, without the restless tossing which characterized his behaviour last night, and at intervals slightly delirious. The doctors are still administering strychnine and digitalis, but Sir James shows no improvement, neither does he show any marked signs of weakening. Hope has by no means been given up yet. The reserves of strength laid up by years of well regulated life with plenty of out-door exercise, have not been exhausted, and it is not at all impossible that they may pull him through.

Lived a Careful Life.

"Sir James, except for his heart," said Dr. [illegible] [illegible] could, and never neglected to take exercise. The reserve vitality conserved by this mode of living, is standing him in good stead now."

Last evening the patient was restless. For almost the first time he showed impatience at the discomfort of continued inactivity. For a time he [illegible] and talked [illegible] going home and catching up with his work and of plans for any projects the Government is to tackle.

POISON BOTTLE IN BRADLEY CASE

Prague, Jan. 9.—Dr. Joseph Horak succeeded in giving back to a girl of 16 her right arm, threatened by a growth called sarcoma. It had been suggested to cut off the girl's arm, but the doctor kept Marie Hubacek, a seamstress, in the hospital, "waiting for something to turn up," as the girl pleaded that with one arm she would not be able to continue in her profession.

Five weeks ago, a girl having attempted suicide by firing a bullet into her brain, came to the hospital. She was of the same age and build as Marie, and the doctor assumed charge of the case. When the latest arrival died the doctor asked an assistant to remove her arm at the elbow joint while he amputated Marie's arm in the same place.

After all the infected parts were cut away the sound arm was placed into the cavity and the necessary bandages applied. In the fastening were used ivory hooks and golden pins. Marie had no fever consequent upon the operation.

After three weeks the bandages were removed, but the arm, while evidently as alive as any part of her body, remained stiff. Then followed systematic exercises assisted by electrical treatment, causing the arm to gain in flexibility daily. The girl has now been discharged as cured and is again following her profession.

GERMAN PURCHASES OF CANADA GOODS SHOW BIG INCREASE

This Disclosure in The Recent Returns Calls for Official Attention

London, Jan. 9.—Largely increased German purchases of Canadian produce, especially wheat, as disclosed in the latest returns, are directing the official attention of Berlin to the fact that Canada has not yet fulfilled the understanding between the German Consul-General and Hon. W. S. Fielding when negotiating for a Canadian-Germany agreement in 1910.

It is likely this will be the prelude to a full commercial convention.

Some Germans urge that German goods entering Canada are still treated less favorably than French, much less British goods, while the Germans are buying more and more Canadian produce.

The German Government could carry out the stipulations of the agreement of 1910 and give Canada two months' notice of its intention to resume the old high duties on Canadian wheat and other products, but the German Government shows no disposition to take any hasty or unfriendly action.

Will See Hon. Mr. Foster.

It is stated in Berlin to-day that the German Ambassador in London has been instructed to take advantage of the presence in London of Hon. Mr. Foster to discuss the whole question with him. Canadian wheat, which paid duty of 46 cents per bushel before the present arrangement, now pays 35c.

SHE CALLED HIS BLUFF.

Wifey Puts Test on Hubby's Knowledge of English Politics.

Mrs. Dubbs fixed her husband with one of those looks which presupposes his ignorance.

"I don't suppose you realize the significance of the political situation in England," she said.

"Upon the contrary, I fully realize it," he replied, exhibiting a cockiness quite unlike him upon such occasions as this. "I may be a dead one on most subjects, but I happen to have looked this one up myself."

Mrs. Dubbs was dumfounded.

"You!" she said. "You know something about it?"

"Sure!" he replied. "I got tired of three men in every five trying to make me realize what is going on over there. I am doing a little of that now myself. I can say George Lloyd as glib as the next one, and only today I cornered a fellow who frankly admitted that he didn't realize what the refusal of the budget may mean in the end. I'll bet he won't read anything but Reviews of Reviews, Nations and Literary Digests for the next thirty nights."

"Is that where you got your information?" she asked.

"Of course," he said. "I wasn't always going to be the goat. After about ten men in one day had made me admit that I didn't realize what was occurring I decided to get wise myself, as they say on the floor of the Manchester Exchange."

"And did you get wise?" she asked.

"You may judge for yourself," he responded. "I met two men today who were under the impression that they understood the situation perfectly, but I convinced them in a very few minutes that the real import of what impends had never occurred to them at all."

She bent toward him, holding him with her level gaze.

"Let's hear you say Asquith," she said.

"Asquith-h-h-h," he repeated, slighting the "th."

She pushed her hand over her forehead as one dazed.

"You!" she gasped. "You know the [illegible]!" — St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Author Who Wrote Legibly.

No author, or any one else, for that matter, could possibly have written more legibly than Francis Thompson. He wrote frequently in pencil in a careful round hand that would have got a scholarship at the top of his writing class. His copy was always "good" for the compositor, which was fortunate, for there was always the greatest difficulty in getting him to correct the proofs of his reviews. I have the manuscript of one of his later poems, which a child of ten could read with ease, though it is written partly in ink and partly in pencil and carefully stuck together where lines have been snipped out with scissors. He was probably the only writer of poetry who used penny exercise books as manuscript paper.—London Spectator.

Tennyson and a Telescope.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree in "Thoughts and Afterthoughts" tells this tale of Lord Tennyson: The poet was invited to a certain country house, and all the neighboring luminaries of the county had been invited to meet him. After dinner his host asked whether he would like to look at the stars. Tennyson took up the telescope and, [illegible], gazed for twenty minutes at the wonders of the heavens. "Well, what do you think, Mr. Tennyson?" inquired the host. "I don't think much of our county families," Tennyson replied.

THE CANNY SCOT.

Harry Lauder's Initiation as the Laird of Dunoon.

As every one who has ever met him knows, Harry Lauder is a thrifty sort of a Scotchman, wise as to the values of dollars and dimes and never overlooking a good investment. Not long ago, as Lauder proudly announced to all his friends, he bought a fine old Scottish estate near Dunoon and thus became a real laird after years of saving and planning.

Every Scot hopes and dreams that he will some day be a laird, and the surest proof of Lauder's Caledonian blood is shown in the eagerness with which he bought the old estate and the pride with which he assumed his new dignities.

Harry's thrifty soul, however, was doomed to a jarring jar before he had long been a laird of Dunoon.

A day or so after he acquired the old place he summoned one of the tenants, a gray old cotter, and questioned him as to the lives and habits of the previous lairds.

"Ye well ken, Sandy mon," said Harry, "that I wush to follow a' the auld customs o' the lairds o' Dunoon.

New Metals.

Modern research has brought to our industries at a marvelous rate not only new compounds, but even new elements. Of the fifty metallic elements now known only seven were in use 2,000 years ago, and until 100 years ago, the rate of addition was less than one metal for each two centuries. Within the last twenty-five years about fourteen metals have been added to commercial use, an addition at more than one hundred-fold the previous rate.

Undeserving Blame.

"My dear boy, I happen to know you mortgaged your house and lot in order to buy that motorcar. How are you managing to keep it in repair?"

"No trouble about that. I give an occasional mortgage on some bits of personal property. From the way you talk, Uncle Henry, one would think I hadn't any business capacity at all."

Hopi Courtship.

When a Hopi maiden decides which of the eligible young men of the tribe she wishes to marry she goes and sits in his house and grinds corn until he is sufficiently impressed by her industry to marry her. After the ceremony, which is an elaborate one, the couple go to live in the wife's house. If she tires of her husband she can obtain a divorce by merely throwing his saddle out of the house. After marriage the house, fields and all their property except the herds belong to the wife.

The Hopis are indulgent parents. The right of the children to do as they please is never questioned.

The Old Story.

"Did Hardlucke bear his misfortune like a man?"

"Exactly like one. He blamed it all on his wife."—Judge.

Where Did They All Fight?

Fenian raid veterans seem to be multiplying as the years roll on. Forty-five years have elapsed since the dreaded invaders were repelled, and it has been estimated that no more than ten thousand men took up arms in defence of Canada at that time. A large number of the volunteers have died during the almost half century.

However, to no fewer than eleven thousand "Fenian Raid Veterans" has the sum of $100 been paid by the Government under the Bounty Act of a couple of sessions ago. Not only that, but there are [illegible] thousand applicants for the bounty still to be passed upon. The bulk of them will likely be rejected, of course.

The greatest number of applications in proportion to the population comes from Nova Scotia.

Leacock's Repartee.

Prof. Stephen Leacock was once criticizing the following lines from Campbell's "Ye Mariners of England."

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn;
Till danger's troubled night depart,
And the star of peace return.

"The star of peace," he pointed out, could not "return" after night "departed," for stars do not shine during the day.

"If you were struck hard enough between the eyes you would see stars any old time," suggested the witty member of the class.

"That is quite true," replied the professor, "but it would not be a 'star of peace'."

Our Point of View

A college education doesn't seem to improve a girl's education. She will come home after she has graduated and step off a street car backwards.

There is nothing more ridiculous than to see people dancing the tango who are so old that every time they dip their joints creak.

The Kingston hen that laid an egg with a dime in it has done much to back up the statement that there is money in poultry.

It is said that courtship in Bohemia often lasts for fifteen years, which is considerable longer than many marriages last in this country.

Lopez, the desperado, who has baffled the efforts to kill him with bullets, poisonous gas and dynamite, would make a first-class President of Mexico.

Every time we see a picture of Kaiser William his moustache commands our admiration, because it stands straight up and well out of reach of the soup and custard.

Over in Belgium motor cars are called "Snelpaardelooszonderspoorwegpetroolrijtuigen." By the time a fellow gets through reading one it is at the other end of the line.

A queen bee lays from two to three thousand eggs in twenty-four hours. The man who will discover how to cross a queen bee with a hen will soon have enough money to buy an automobile for himself and all his relatives.

DIAGNOSING THE STRINGENCY.

It is a "stringency that has sprung from prosperity." Thus Lord Strathcona sums up financial condition which have affected Canada, in common with the rest of the world. The condition has been otherwise tersely summed up as "growing pains." Canada has been growing at a tremendous pace within the past few years. Vast stretches of new country have been opened for settlement. Cities have grown up where, within the memory of Lord Strathcona and others, the buffalo roamed and the noble red man held sway. Industry has expanded, we have built railways, our older cities have doubled in size. It has been a period of unprecedented growth. Being a new country, we have drawn heavily on borrowed capital. Our very prosperity necessitated heavy borrowings. But Canada was the only borrower. Almost every country in the world had made inroads upon the world's supply of capital, until there being an insufficient supply to go round, a natural easement ensued.

The situation as it affects Canada is entirely different from that arising from a period of depression and hard times from within. We have not been building beyond our needs or legitimate demands, but we have for the time exceeded the ability of the worlds money markets to keep pace. The potential greatness of the country, however, is unimpaired. We have still a wealth of natural resources that are the envy of the world. Our credit is not lessened. Future development may proceed along more conservative lines, but growth and expansion there must be. It is the habit of capital to see the avenues which offer the richest returns. Therein Canada's position is secure. No other country offers a fairer, safer field for profitable investment.

A Cure Discovered
That Really Does Cure

Thousands Testify to the Lasting Benefit Derived by This Marvelous Preparation

The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific surprise, a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once say so after the very first time. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.

Creighton E. Thompson, well known in Calgary, writes:—"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that a man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drugstore and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh.

The one-dollar package last two months; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Thos. Johin says:

"Please use my name for reference. Send copies of my letter to everyone in Canada, as everybody should and must know of this cure, which you have for kidney trouble. I could write all day, and then would not have told you all I think about Sanol."

SUNDAY STREET CARS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Now that the city of London, Ont., has voted, by a lathe majority, for Sunday street cars, is it not time that Peterborough secures similar privileges and utility? The old blue laws days are passed and a reign of commonsense and reason is in existence everywhere. The mechanic, the laborer, the hardworked clerk is now beginning to realize that he has a right to enjoy God's fresh air in the country and to escape the sordid surroundings of his week day's toil. I suppose that this will be opposed by some of the ultra-fanatical church-goers. However, in my estimation, during the winter months the church would gain in attendance. Whilst, in the summer evenings a few dimes and nickles might pass the churches by they would balance accounts at the morning services.

DEAD GIRLS AIM IS NOW PART OF ANATOMY

Surgeon Saves Patient From Giving Up Occupation as Seamstress

New York, Jan. 9.—At the conclusion of yesterday's investigation into the deaths of Patrolman James Bradley and Mrs. Laura March Gibson, Assistant District Attorney Mark, of Bronx County, found he had two mysteries on hand.

The testimony of six relatives of the deceased, whose bodies were found in Bradley's flat on December 5th last, failed to shift the report of suicide to a proof of murder. It brought out the astonishing fact that none of these relatives had ever hinted at the grave rumor.

Indeed, they all protested strongly against any responsibility for an inquiry.

Two other curious facts were brought to light. There was no doubt both Bradley and his companion had died of hydrocyanic acid, but no vessel, glass or bottle was found that had contained the poison.

It was further established by Mr. Mark that while Mrs. Gibson had been known as a "trained nurse," no one could say where she had gained her training. Some one spoke of a surgical hospital where she had worked a month, but no one knew what hospital. The deduction was that she could not be a poison expert.

Mr. Mark announced he would continue his investigations.

WONDERFUL GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT OF FORESTERS

disappointed in finding in the end that their contributions for the protection of their families had been absorbed in meeting obligations to those who had long before become members, but who had from the beginning paid inadequately for the benefits promised them.

Contributions Were Inadequate.

It has been a source not only of regret but of sincere sorrow that in working out the result that has been accomplished bitter disappointment had been brought to many of our members, who were unaware that their contributions had been inadequate.

Many have been found who appear to have been unable or unwilling to recognize that what had been done in the way of imposing additional burden upon them was necessary. Apparently, they have only been able to see that we had a large and increasing accumulation of assets, and they closed their minds to the consideration of the other side of the question—the extent of the society's obligations and how they were to be provided for.

When carefully considered the situation was a simple one.

As at December 31, 1912, we had in hand twenty million dollars of accumulated funds and two hundred and forty million dollars of obligations that all had to be provided for within the lives of our [illegible] members. To meet these obligations we had this $20,000,000 in hand. We could count on the interest to be earned on this accumulation and upon the premiums that would be paid by our members.

These items constituted everything that would be available to meet our $240,000,000 of obligations, and when we took stock in an intelligent and scientific manner, we found that instead of having $20,000,000 in hand we should have had [illegible], and that with this sum and the interest to be earned upon it and the premiums to be paid by our members, we could just meet our obligations as they matured, according to our society's mortality and disability experience.

It was further ascertained that all of the deficiency existing in our assets, as compared with our liabilities, was created by the inadequate contributions of members that joined our society before 1899, and that those who joined after 1899 were paying in full for the benefits promised them and their beneficiaries.

The difference in the situation of members who joined before and after January 1, 1899, resulted from the fact that, as the result of legislation by our Supreme Court in 1898, a new table of rates, largely increasing those in force prior to that time, came into force, but this table of rates was, unfortunately, only made to apply to those who joined after 1899.

Having made a pledge to the Government to take steps to make provision that would enable the society to meet its obligations to its members we set about to do this by employing competent actuarial assistance and establishing a statistical department that would enable us to ascertain the exact mortality and disability experience of our society.

A Deficiency of [illegible].

When this work was completed it was, as indicated, found that there existed a deficiency in our assets as compared with our liabilities of [illegible]—a deficiency that had to be provided for unless the society was to be permitted to drift into slow liquidation and in the end disappoint thousands of our members and their beneficiaries.

After the actuarial results referred to had been ascertained we spent long and anxious days and weeks and months in endeavoring to work out a plan that would make the burden that had to be imposed upon those whose inadequate payments had created this condition as light as possible, with the result that all who had part in deciding in the plan that was best to be adopted agreed that the plan we have adopted was best in the interests of all concerned, having in mind the necessity of [illegible] for all time placing our society upon a sound basis.

The situation that I have outlined ought not to have been a surprise either to our membership or the public. Our society for upwards of fifteen years has been conducting its business in Great Britain, and under the laws of Great Britain every insurance company and society is required to file quinquennially with the Board of Trade a valuation of its liabilities.

December 31, 1907, was a date when such a valuation had to be filed, and when this valuation was filed it showed that there existed as of that date a deficiency in our assets as compared with our liabilities of $55,000,000.

Assessment Rates Inadequate.

Complaint has been made that in the plan adopted we discriminated against the old members and that in fact the deficiency referred to that it was necessary to provide for should have been covered by assessments spread over the entire membership instead of being levied against that portion of the society whose inadequate payments had created the deficiency.

In this connection the fact must be borne in mind that the society in 1898 when it adopted its new and increased table of rates and assessments consisted entirely of what are now commonly spoken of as the old members.

It was recognized that the rates of assessments in force up to that time were inadequate, else there would have been no need of putting into force a table of assessments increasing such rates of assessments.

The representatives of the then membership thus recognizing the inadequacy of the rates then in force made provision that only those who should thereafter join should pay the adequate rates then adopted, and that those who up to that time, numbering more than 100,000, who then [illegible] the society, should continue to pay the inadequate rates before then in force.

A Fraternal Fund.

In view of this it seemed inequitable that those who thereafter joined in paying the increased rates of assessment and adequate rates of assessment should be later burdened in making provision in whole or in part for the inadequacy of the payments made by those who had joined before 1899. It was nevertheless recognized that there was an increased burden imposed upon the survivors of the members who joined before 1899 in that the deficiency existing was created in part of the inadequate contribution of those who had deceased and whose beneficiaries had received full payment of the benefits promised them. To equalize this it was provided in our legislation recently adopted that $1,000,000 should be transferred from the accumulations of the payments made by the members who joined after January 1st, 1899, and that for all time in the future there should go into a fraternal fund to relieve against the assessments levied against the so-called old members the interest earnings above 4 per cent upon the accumulated fund of the post-1898 members, as well as upon the accumulated funds of the pre-'99 members.

Of the existing accumulation of [illegible] $6,000,000 belonged to the members that joined before 1899, and $14,000,000 belonged to those who joined since 1899, and inasmuch as we are earning a fraction over 5 per cent. on the investment of our accumulated funds, 1 per cent. upon the $14,000,000 belonging to the post-1898 members, amounting to $140,000 per annum, goes to the fraternal fund referred to for the relief of the so-called old members.

Mr. Stevenson rejoiced in the presence at the banquet of so many prominent citizens, whom he gladly addressed on the merits of the Order. He continued:

Powerful Agency for Doing Good.

Our society is [illegible], and is, a great society and a powerful agency for doing good to mankind, but in membership and the extent of its obligations it is insignificant as compared with the aggregate membership and obligations of fraternal insurance societies generally.

Statistics show that at December 31, 1912, there were [illegible] fraternal insurance societies conducting business within the Dominion of Canada, and 307 with the United States. The former had a membership of [illegible], the latter a membership of [illegible], a combined membership of [illegible], that the former, the Canadian societies, had insurance in force of [illegible], and the American societies of [illegible], a total of insurance in force of [illegible], and that the combined assets of the Canadian societies amounted to [illegible], and the combined assets of the societies within the United States to [illegible].

[illegible] provided for during the lives of the present membership aggregating $10,000,000,000, there was accumulated assets amounting to $190,000,000, or less than two per cent. of the aggregate of the obligations outstanding and while the membership of the Independent Order of Foresters represented only two and a half per cent. of the entire membership its accumulated funds amounted to ten per cent. of the entire accumulated funds and then was $25,000,000 short of what was necessary to provide for its obligations.

When it is considered that this membership of 10,000 has undertaken to provide protection through this $10,000,000,000 of insurance in force for practically fifty million women and children, and that the fifty million women and children will sooner or later be largely dependent upon this protection for their future necessities or comforts, and that inadequate provision exists for maturing this protection, the situation really becomes appalling.

Put Them on Sound Basis.

I must not be understood as attempting to minimize the importance of fraternal insurance societies, for I recognize that they are among the greatest agencies available for improving conditions and protecting the families of wage-earners throughout this and other countries. I do, however, desire to impress upon everyone possible the importance of having these societies that are doing so much good placed upon a sound basis so that they may continue the splendid work they have been doing, for notwithstanding the imperfections that have existed in their plans from the outset they have up to date distributed to the widows and orphans—beneficiaries of members of these societies—a total exceeding 2,156,000,000, a sum largely in excess of the combined public debt of the Dominion of Canada, and the United States, and the Independent Order of Foresters has done its share in this beneficent work—it has to December 31, 1912, disbursed in benefits [illegible].

It will have served my purpose if what I have said shall enlist the interest of some of those who may be influential in bringing about the needed reforms in connection with the financial status of these societies.

Now on Sound Basis.

So far as the fixing of the financial status of our society is concerned, our work is finished. We have a society one hundred per cent. sound, able to meet all legitimate calls upon it with respect to its obligations present and future.

We must for the future look forward not backward, and with united effort endeavor to make it even more useful than it has been in the past.

I assure you that our society will have my earnest endeavor to advance and protect the interests of its members wherever resident, and I pledge myself in the administration of its affairs to recognize no lines of division as between men who revere the Union Jack and men who revere the Stars and Stripes, but one common brotherhood united in one great international society.

High Praise for Order
And Mr. Stevenson's W[illegible]

Sir John Willison, who proposed the toast to the Parliament of Canada, at first adhered to the work of the honored guests. "I have never yet met a man whom I have greater regard for than Mr. E. G. Stevenson," said he. "His achievements are beyond compass. To have placed this order beyond such a satisfactory financial basis is an accomplishment worth while." (Cheers.)

He lauded the work of Parliament, "which, after all, labors of the interests of the people."

Mr. F. F. Pardee, M.P., was also received with vociferous cheers. "I am proud to be here and be permitted to speak to members of one of the best fraternal societies in the world," said he. "I have the greatest respect for Mr. E. G. Stevenson, whom I have known for many years. He is a man you should honor because he has done so much for you. The I.O.F. will never have a man more able to look after the work of the order and make it a greater success than it has been since he accepted the position of Supreme Chief Ranger."

He declared social reform is attracting the attention of Parliaments, but old-age pensions, etc., are only on the horizon. "But your order," said he, "is accomplishing all these reforms without the brass band accompaniment — without fuss and feathers.

"It is doing a work that is bringing it good in the very best sense. [illegible] you take the wolf from the door and are, therefore, in a position to say to the Parliaments of Canada, 'Go thou and do likewise,' and accomplish what you set out to do." (Laughter.)

He made an eloquent plea for great interest in the accomplishments of those who sit on Canadian Parliaments.

Mr. Claude Macdonell, M.P., who sponsored the I.O.F. bill, which passed Parliament last session, also spoke on the merits of the order.

Mr. Rowell's Tribute.

Mr. N. W. Rowell, leader of the Ontario Opposition, responded to the toast to the Legislature. As he rose he was greeted with loud cheers and the waving of handkerchiefs. "I am here to pay my respects to your Supreme Chief Ranger," said he. "He is a man for whom I have a great deal of respect. Though born in Middlesex county, he had attained a very high position before the American Bar, but relinquished it to come back to Canada to render a public service by the successful working out of the destinies of the I.O.F. He is a strong and courageous leader. He has grappled with a serious condition of affairs, and the result reflects credit on himself and the order as a whole.

"Of course, there are some who disagree with his actions, and I am sorry to say that I [illegible] sympathy to the minority. He has done what was best, and now occupies a position for which he is peculiarly adapted."

Hon. Thomas Crawford, who also responded, in the absence of Hon. W. J. Hanna, declared that Mr. Stevenson deserved the utmost credit for his accomplishments.

Dr. J. A. Macdonald proposed the health of the "American Brethren." He complimented the members of the order on having Mr. Stevenson at the head of affairs. "Your Executive has done its duty," said he. "Your order accomplishes a noble work because it ministers to the whole [illegible] nation can be great if it upholds the poor and the needy, and the way it [illegible] stands ever above all party."

Hon. W. H. Brown of Michigan, made a suitable response.

Dr. T. A. E. [illegible] proposed the health of "The [illegible]," which was responded to by Mr. W. A. [illegible], Dr. G. M. [illegible] and [illegible] Thompson, R. [illegible] and R. J. Macdonald.

A MAORI WEDDING

Big Feast Marks Nuptials Among New Zealand Natives

After the ceremony had been performed we went out again into the sunshine to see cooks and attendants bearing smoking dishes to the dining-shed, built for the occasion, to accommodate the guests. When the feast is spread on the long sixty-foot table a horn is blown and a soft-voiced "kotiro" (girl) stands at the door chanting a song of invitation. The verse loses much of its poetry in translation, but here it is:

Oh, all you kindly guests,
The feast is spread and awaits you,
Come now to the feast, before the food grows cold,
Hither, oh, come hither.

The dinner is "gargantuan," more than aldermanic, and the table bends under the weight of good things; pigs and sheep, roasted whole, great hunks of beef, turkeys, geese, and other fowl, mutton-birds, "kakas," and wood-pigeons, preserved in their own fat; plum puddings, tarts and sweets. Everyone is blessed with good appetite, and the viands quickly disappear. Graceful girl attendants wait at table, pressing dainty after dainty upon one's notice. The dominant note through it all is profusion, and while we eat, the cooks are still busy at the "hapu" preparing for further contingents of diners. Maori hospitality has passed into a proverb, but one must see it at a "hui" to fully appreciate what it means.

I said the dining-place was a shed. This is misleading. We sat in an oblong enclosure surrounded by walls of wattle ti-trees, about three feet high. Over us a roof of palm-leaves supported on high poles, the space between the top of the low wall and the eaves being open to the air. Thus, while dining, one's vision ranges up and out to where the children play on the beach; out across the white sand, over the blue water, dotted here and there with a white sail and flecked with flights of white, wheeling gulls; away to where the rugged headland of Maunga thrusts its pinnacles high into the azure sky. All the time birds sing in the trees near by, soft sea-breezes come gently beneath the eaves, and over all pours a flood of golden sunlight.—D. O. Fagan, in the Wide World Magazine.

DAILY SHORT STORY

How I Became an Archaeologist

By ARNOLD C. TINKAM

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

When I was a boy and studied Latin I read stories about ancient Rome that gave me an unconquerable desire to see the Eternal City. I wished to visit the chasm, or at least the place where it was, into which Quintus Curtius leaped on horseback, the remaining pillars of the temple erected to the two beautiful strangers, Castor and Pollux, who watered their horses in the forum after the battle of Lake Regillus, and the bridge that Horatius defended so valiantly. There was no prospect of my ever visiting Italy, for I had not the means even to take me to college.

But I was a good deal of a dreamer, and, my fancy getting fixed on my object, I couldn't turn it upon anything else. The only practical result was a resolve to "save up," as children put it, with a view to getting enough money to take me to Rome, keep me there long enough to get a hurried view of what I wished to see and bring me back to America.

By the time I was eighteen years old I had acquired this amount. I suppose I should have spent it in starting me upon a college education, but I did not. I bought a second class ticket on a ship crossing the Atlantic and proceeding through the Mediterranean to Naples. I remained at Naples long enough to visit Pompeii, then went by rail to Rome.

At first I was disappointed in getting into a modern commercial city, but when I struck some of the landmarks of ancient Rome—the Pantheon, the arches of Constantine and Titus, the Coliseum—I was not long in forgetting the modern in my rapture over the ancient. When I had exhausted Rome itself I was seized with a desire to visit its environs. I had read of the Campagna, as it was once covered with forums and villas.

But by the time I had seen Rome itself my money was all gone. I hadn't enough even to buy a return trip ticket to America. I was stranded in a foreign country. What could I do? What did I do? I followed the genius of archaeology that was strong within me. Reading a notice in a newspaper that an excavating party was to make a search for the ruins of a certain villa some fifty miles from the city, I hired myself as a digger to the archaeologist in charge, went with him and dug with the rest. In his reading he had hit upon a description of the site, but could only confirm his views by burrowing in the ground. In other words, he must hunt for that for which he was looking.

We dug three days, at the end of which time my employer gave up the search. During this time I put in my spade here and there on my own account, with no result. When the party went back to Rome I asked for my pay, a few lire, and they returned without me. I had seen a stone projecting from the soil at some distance from where we were digging that seemed to me to have been artificially shaped, and I wished to investigate it.

As soon as the party were gone I began to dig about this stone. I found that it rested on another, to which it was fixed by mortar. This in turn rested on another. Then I came to a wall. I followed the wall for a dozen feet and came to an angle. The top of the wall was five or six feet from the surface, and I was not likely to find anything of value at a less depth. I dug all day, and as the evening was coming on, some ten feet below the surface, my spade struck something hard. I shuddered, for by this time I knew that I was liable to ruin a treasure. These villas were ornamented with statues—some of them very beautiful—and every year they are found. I had with me a scoop and, throwing down my spade, began to dig about the hard substance with the smaller implement. It was round. In a few minutes I uncovered a marble head.

Had I discovered a mine of inexhaustible gold I could not have been more delighted. I scooped away enough earth to tell me that I had found a statue. But it was by this time too late to look any farther. I threw back the loose earth, marked the spot with a stake and hurried away from the fever stricken Campagna that I might not be caught there after nightfall.

The next morning I went to the archaeologist who had conducted the search and told him of my find. It would have been illegal for me to remove the statue myself, and I preferred to proceed under his superintendence. He was as much delighted at my luck as I was myself. We started at once for the hole I had dug, removed the loose earth and exposed the marble. We could tell nothing about it except that the face was very beautiful.

We dug about the statue till we could see that it was the figure of a woman, the drapery being ancient Roman.

The archaeologist before leaving Rome had left word for workmen to follow, and when they arrived the statue was removed. It proved to be of great value. I had struck the site of the villa for which we had searched, and other articles were found in it, though none in as good condition as this. I received a remuneration for my find, but what I valued more was being taken as a student by the man who had employed me to dig for him. I spent a number of years under his tuition and by my own efforts have contributed to the contents of the museums to no small degree.

FAMOUS SWORDSMAN

Late Captain Alfred Hutton Was One of England's Finest

In Captain Alfred Hutton, whose death is announced, England loses one of the finest swordsmen it has ever had.

Born in 1840 at Beverley, Yorkshire, Captain Hutton acquired his taste for swordsmanship at his school at Blackheath, where the great Angelo was fencing master. He devoted all his spare time to the art, and was soon one of the most proficient pupils at Angelo's salle d'armes in St. James' street. He was intended for the church, but the outbreak of the Indian Mutiny turned his thoughts to the army, and he joined the 79th Highlanders.

The youngest officer was probably the most skillful swordsman in the army, though his comrades did not realize the fact. He brought with him a bundle of swords of different kinds, and one of the sergeants, anxious to teach the newcomer a lesson, challenged him to a bout. The sergeant, who had a reputation as a man-at-arms, chose the bayonet against the young ensign's sword, but was easily worsted, and the result was the same when the weapons were changed.

After this feat the young officer was invited to form a fencing class for the officers and non-commissioned officers, and the swordsmanship of the regiment was greatly improved. He continued this work in the other regiments in which he afterwards served—the 7th Hussars, and the King's Dragoon Guards—and throughout his career he was a strong advocate of better swordsmanship in the army. He was one of the first, too, to raise bayonet-fighting to the dignity of a science.

No man of his time knew more of swordsmanship, and his books on the subject, "Cold Steel," "Fixed Bayonets," and "The Swordsman," are classics, full of technical knowledge, and at the same time as delightful as are the books of the late Captain Sir Richard Burton on similar subjects.

In appearance Captain Hutton was a sixteenth century swordsman. His long, straight nose, short-cut moustache, and slight pointed beard gave him a remarkably knightly appearance. He was seventy years old.

DECAY AND DIRT

These Seem to be the Prevailing Conditions in China

"Along the road—and this is characteristic—nothing is being repaired," writes the Peking correspondent of the London Times. "It is the national failing to spend nothing on repairs, to build and then leave the building to fall gradually into decay and ruin. Nor is anything cleaned, and the squalor that is a feature even of the imperial palace in Peking is most extraordinary. A few miles out of Hsuanhua there is a fine stone bridge of five arches, but the piers are falling away, the parapet has disappeared, and the flagstones with which it is paved have great gaps and hollows, so that the cart rumbles and crashes and bumps across it in a way that would break any but a Chinese springless cart. To repair is no one's business."

At another stage in his journey he remarks: "Perhaps to some extent the anticipated coming of a railway, which will kill the present cart traffic, may account for the shocking condition of the native inns. With railway extension in the air there is no inducement for the innkeeper to spend money on the upkeep of his hovel. Nothing is repaired. Their filth and squalor are amazing. In the inn yard the well has its mouth below the level of the soil, so that water which is spilled may flow back into the well and carry with it the surface drainage.

"A doctor must notice the prevalence of consumption. To the universal habit of expectoration on the floor, the exclusion of air and the absence of drainage this prevalence must be due."

Shocked His Pride.

Of his Cambridge days a dignitary of the Church of England tells this story. He always wore a white tie, and when he got his fellowship, full of pride, he went to call upon the master of his college. He rang the bell, the door was opened, and he was about to present his card when the footman, who had run his eye over him, said: "You're too late, young man. I got the place yesterday."

Connaught in Africa.

Here is a pleasing little picture, furnished by a correspondent who accompanied the royal party: The tour of the Duke of Connaught through South Africa, has assumed the character of a triumphal progress. At every tiny station in the vast expanse of the brown Karroo there was a gathering of farmers, many of whom had driven twenty and thirty miles in wagons drawn by twelve or fourteen mules or oxen. British and Dutch were equally eager to see the Duke and Duchess, and the Duke and Duchess were pleased and [illegible] with loyalty after chatting with them, showing his interest in their affairs, shaking hands all round, and finally waving farewell from the window as the train moved on. GERMAN CITIES.

They Now Lead the Modern World in Artistic Splendor.

I know of no cities in the modern world which compare with those which have arisen in Germany during the past twenty years. There are none in Great Britain, from which country official delegations are constantly crossing the North sea to study the achievements of the German city. There are none in France, in which country the building of cities has made but little progress since the achievements of Baron Haussmann made Paris the beautiful city that it is.

There have been three great periods in which the building of cities inspired the thoughts and dreams of men. In the age of the Antonines the Roman people gave themselves with enthusiasm to the embellishment of their cities. The great public structures, the temples, amphitheaters and palaces then erected have withstood the ravages of time and still remain the wonder of subsequent centuries. During the middle ages the cities of Italy, France, Germany and the Netherlands erected similar monuments expressive of the love and pride awakened by their newly obtained freedom. Now again in the twentieth century the German people are expressing their pride in the fatherland and the imperial aspirations of Germany in monuments of the same permanent character and artistic splendor. Capital cities like Berlin, Munich and Dresden as well as more commercial cities like Dusseldorf, Mannheim, Frankfort, Cologne, Wiesbaden and Stuttgart are vying with one another in the beautiful, the orderly and the serviceable.

Important as are the beauty and the efficiency of the German city, it is the bigness of vision, boldness of conception and farsighted outlook on the future that are most amazing. Germany is building her cities as Bismarck perfected the army before Sadowa and Sedan, as the empire is building its warships and merchantmen, as she develops her waterways and educational systems.—Frederic C. Howe in Scribner's.

The King Edward Glass.

In a curio cabinet which occupies a corner in the drawing room of a handsomely furnished New York house there is a red and white Bohemian glass tumbler of odd shape. At first glance it looks as though it had been trodden upon and flattened out. On one flat side is a raised picture of the Sprudel at Marienbad and on the other a landscape. The curious drinking vessel when it was new fell one morning from the hands of a little girl at the German spa and broke into four pieces. She carried the pieces home and said that a "stout gentleman" had picked them up and said they could be put together again. This a jeweler succeeded in doing by means of wire and carefully drilled holes. The vessel has always been known in the family as the "King Edward glass" because the late King Edward was "the stout gentleman" who rescued the pieces and soothed the child in her misfortune.

Shocking Shoes.

You will often run across a jolly looking individual who wears a button on which is a figure which looks like a little red devil. He belongs to the Order of the Rejuvenated Sons of Jove and most necessarily be an electrical man. The order is national in its scope and includes electrical salesmen, engineers, inventors, manufacturers and others engaged in electrical callings. Every once in awhile the order holds a "rejuvenation." It had one at the last electrical show in Chicago. It is said that they had a pair of "electrical shoes" there through which the luckless initiate, before his rejuvenation was esteemed complete, received most startling shocks.—Popular Electricity.

Warring Against the White Plague.

New York city, Boston and London have already cut in half their death rates from tuberculosis. Why should not the smaller cities and rural communities, where conditions are more favorable, do likewise? No tuberculosis in 1920 is put forth as a huge unity. Yet some are optimistic enough to believe that it expresses a hope that will not be long deferred, and every effort is being made to make as near as may be possible to its realization. A roll of honor has been established, including those cities and counties which are making provision for the control of tuberculosis.—Review of Reviews.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1908 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,100,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 102 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 38,000 bushels each, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 7,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,750,000 bushels.

PURE GLYCERIN.

It Is a Queer Substance Endowed With Peculiar Properties.

One of the great advantages of glycerin in its chemical employment is the fact that it neither freezes nor evaporates under any ordinary temperature. No perceptible loss by evaporation has been detected at a temperature less than 200 degrees F., but if heated intensely it decomposes with a smell that few persons find themselves able to endure. It burns with a pale flame, similar to that from alcohol, if heated to about 300 degrees and then ignited. Its nonevaporative qualities make the compound of much use as a vehicle for holding pigments and colors, as in stamping and typewriter ribbons, carbon papers and the like.

If the pure glycerin be exposed for a long time to a freezing temperature it crystallizes with the appearance of sugar candy, but these crystals being once melted it is almost an impossibility to get them again into the congealed state. If a little water be added to the glycerin no crystallization will take place, though under a sufficient degree of cold the water will separate and form crystals, amid which the glycerin will remain in its natural state of fluidity. If suddenly subjected to intense cold pure glycerin will form a gummy mass which cannot be entirely hardened or crystallized. Altogether it is quite a peculiar substance.

LEARNING A LANGUAGE.

It Is an Easier Task the Younger It Is Taken In Hand.

The time to learn a language is when you are young, the younger the better. We learn our own language as children. The older we grow the harder it is, because it means not merely learning by heart a great many words, not merely training the palate and tongue to produce different sounds, but adopting a new attitude of mind.

Nothing definite has been discovered as to the localization of faculties in the brain, therefore nothing certain is known, but it has always seemed to me and to others whom I have consulted that when you learn a new language you are exercising and developing a new piece of brain.

When you know several languages and change from one to another you seem definitely to change the piece of brain which actuates your tongue. You switch off one center and switch on to another.

You will always notice in yourself and others that there is a definite pause when the change of language is made. Now it becomes every year more difficult to awaken an unused part of the brain and bring it into active use, and to begin at twenty-five is late.—Atlantic.

The late J. Q. A. Ward, the sculptor, found great diversion in watching the tricks and peculiarities of the horses which served as models for some of his equine statues. He made friends with them all, and he was a good friend to them.

"The only horse humorist that I have had experience with," Mr. Ward is quoted as saying, "was of thoroughbred blood, and he was a real joker. That was Lex, a horse of the blood of the immortal Lexington.

"Lex was of a splendid type. He stood for me for much of my early work. Somehow he discovered that a table on which I worked was easily shaken. It was a board on trestles so arranged that the position of the board might be altered to almost any angle. When Lex saw I was busiest he would sidle slowly and silently to the side of the table and turn his head to have a good look at me as he jostled the table with his shoulder or hip. It was amusing at first, but it sometimes hampered me, and I thought I would try a joke in return.

"Lex had a place at the table that he invariably approached, and when he struck it always leaned on the same corner. Lex was not conscious when I placed my compass, with the pointed ends out, barely half an inch extending over the edge of the table, and braced the other end against a weight.

"I had not long to wait before Lex quietly came up, and I thought I could see mischief in his eye. He took his usual place, and then when I pretended to be very busy he pushed the table in his usual manner, pitched his shoulder on the points and jumped back with a snort. He looked long and hard at me, but took his place of duty. The joke was against him that time."

Old Time Toys.

"Boys," said the old timer, "don't seem to play with the same things they did when I was a boy. I haven't seen a boy playing bones for years. When I was small I nearly wore out the ears of my family rattling bones around the house at all hours of the day and night. Rattling them! Good heavens, I played a regular cannonade on them! How many boys do you see now playing with those clappers that used to be so popular? People now think the boys are noisy. What would they have done if they had youngsters such as I was around them? Then it was a question of noise, noise, all day long, and the noisiest boy was the best liked among his fellows. Do you notice many boys today playing with turkey bladders or turkey legs? Not many, and in my time every boy whose family could afford a turkey managed to get hold of the feet and bladder and play with them with the greatest enjoyment. Oh, the boys now are cleaner and quieter, I suppose, but give me my boys and my time any day."—New York Press.

RUBBING UP THE ARMS.

Said to Have Excellent Results in Cases of Fainting.

When my wife faints, which is not quickly often, says a writer in the London medical journal, the Lancet, I do not apply friction in the usual absurd way—rubbing backward and forward, which must alternately check and accelerate the passage of the blood—but, taking hold of one of her hands with my left hand, I place the thumb and finger of my right hand tight round her wrist and then push them firmly up toward her elbow.

Having brought them back loosely to the wrist, I pass them firmly up again, and when I have repeated the operation two or three times, sometimes on both arms, I have the pleasure of hearing the ejaculation, "I feel better now." When I first had recourse to this means of resuscitating my lady she exclaimed instinctively on two different occasions, without being at all aware that I had had any particular intention, "Oh, that is what I seem to want!"

From the invariable and immediate effect of this mode of friction I flatter myself that it is not unworthy the notice of the medical practitioner in the friction of fainting patients, a process which should be much oftener resorted to and more energetically persisted in than it generally is.

Beauty of a Norway Fiord.

The Moen fiord is incredibly narrow and deep. Its abrupt shores lay in an abandon of color past mortal conception. Sun tipped peaks, like [illegible], rose sheer from fathomless green water, their adjacent crevices and rocky distance alike lost in a violet haze. As the sun broadened the mist played lower upon the mountains, and gulls circled with a dazzling glimmer of wing as they darted from the shadow into the upper sunlight. Purple silhouettes of the western mountains lay upon the still sunny cliffs to eastward, but astern through the gateway of rock the lower fiord was suddenly hidden under a veil of wind driven rain. Suddenly the sun burst forth, and such a wave of color engulfed us as made it seem that we were ourselves in and a part of the pageant. Then over the glorified world once more came that strange twilight which is called night. Between and beyond two peaks, the color of amethyst, a vast snowy summit raised its head, and above its dazzling whiteness hung a pale moon, the symbol of all things cold.—Caroline Thacher in Century.

Watch Jewels.

Each watch jewel is shaped in a circle and bored through the center, each having being just a little less than the diameter of the pinion used in the factory where it is finally to be placed in the upper or lower plate of a watch. Before the jewel gets to the setter it has been put into a lathe, and by means of a minute steel point covered with diamond dust and oil the center has been enlarged to fit the steel pinion which shall be housed in it. UNLESS THERE IS SUDDEN CHANGE DR. McPHEDRAN SAYS SIR JAMES WILL SOON BE WELL ENOUGH TO MOVE

Toronto Physicians Encouraged by Patient's Condition and Returned to City Saturday Night Instead of Staying in New York Several Days as First Planned

New York, Jan. 10.—The removal of Sir James Whitney from the suite in the Manhattan Hotel where he has been lying suffering from heart trouble, to his home in Toronto, "in a few days," was this afternoon promised by Dr. McPhedran, the Toronto doctor brought here to act with Dr. Hermann Biggs, the New York specialist called in, and Dr. R. A. Pyne, the Premier's Cabinet confrere, who has been with him since his illness took a serious turn.

Dr. McPhedran slightly qualified his promise by remarking that this move would be made provided no further change for the worse took place in Sir James' condition. The doctor said that the Premier was getting along as well as could be expected.

Dr. McPhedran Returns To-night.

An indication that Dr. McPhedran is satisfied with Sir James' condition is to be found in his decision to go home to Toronto to-night instead of waiting over for several days, as he originally intended.

Dr. McPhedran saw Sir James Whitney several times today and it was after a visit at 3 o'clock that he made his announcement about taking Sir James home to the waiting pressmen.

Sir James knew the doctor when he visited him this morning and recalled that he had treated him at the beginning of his sickness. The Premier, however, was slightly delirious and could not keep up a connected conversation, forgetting in a little while that he knew the doctor.

Premier Resting Quietly.

After his conversation with the newspaper men Dr. McPhedran, accompanied by Dr. Pyne, visited an exhibition of English pictures at the Doven Galleries, their absence from the hotel thereby giving emphasis to the sick room report that the Prime Minister was resting quietly. "There were no new developments," replied Dr. Pyne when asked how Sir James had passed the morning.

WESTERN CROP BROKE RECORDS FOR QUANTITY AND QUALITY

Over 106 Million Bushels of Wheat Were Inspected, of Which Ninety Per Cent Was of Contract Grade

Winnipeg, Jan. 10.—Returns from farms of the west show an enormous increase for 1913 over all previous records, for the final four months of the year. This has been brought about by the excellent harvest and threshing weather, the high grade of the crop and rapidity with which it has been got to the market.

For all practical purposes the crop of the west is marketed, there [illegible] be come from either grain or live stock. Lower tariff on coarse grains has been a valuable factor in [illegible] the returns, while the open market for live stock proved a great boon to breeders and feeders.

For the first time something like adequate [illegible] stock figures have been received from Alberta of all shipments. Shipments from Saskatchewan were [illegible] [illegible] the line at North Portal, and many of these would be from southern Saskatchewan. Alberta, on the other hand, ships heavily to the Pacific Coast. Of 16,000 head going south from Winnipeg, [illegible] went via [illegible] over the C.P.R. and [illegible] via C.N.R.

The Canadian west in 1913 enjoyed the finest harvest and threshing seasons it has known for over 20 years, and the movement of the crop has [illegible] all previous records. Wheat, as the most important cereal, naturally comes first, and up to December 31, the following amounts have been announced for:

Inspected, passing Winnipeg, 116,750,000 bushels; required for interior mills and seed, 30,000,000; in interior elevators on Dec. 31 and in transit, 23,000,000; total, 69,740,000.

The grain inspection department of Canada certainly won laurels for themselves in 1913. Between Sept. 1st and Dec. 31, they inspected 106,[illegible] bushels, or 20,264,725 bushels more than any previous four months in the history of the department. They were helped no doubt, in this by the high quality of the crop, of which fully 90 per cent. was of "contract" grade.

Owing to the enormous bulk of grain that was rushed on the market and the persistent [illegible] of the crop which had preceded the threshing season, the [illegible] were greatly depressed, and in spite of the high quality of the grain the relative [illegible] to farmers has been smaller than if the grain had been marketed more slowly. The readiness with which the grain was absorbed [illegible] [illegible] that had it been fed out more slowly and less sold about any enormous yield, prices would inevitably been higher.

Already much has been said about the magnificent work done by the railroads in moving the crop. The Canadian Pacific Railway broke all records in moving 112,000,000 bushels in 110 days, and the Canadian Northern made a good record.

DO NOT WAIT FOR GOOD FORTUNE

Sir Frederick Treves Gives Some Sound Advice on the Ladder of Life.

London, Jan. 10.—"The capacity a man has for working when work becomes distasteful," was described by Sir Frederick Treves, the celebrated surgeon, who distributed the prizes at the Dartmouth Home for Crippled Boys recently, as the essential quality for success in life. Following are some further aphorisms from his speech:

If you have a fault and realize it, you have done nearly half the work to remove it.

Have yourself ready for opportunity, it often opportunity arrives.

HOCKEY NEWS

Kingston Seniors Lose Opener—Varsity Had the Condition.

Arena Gardens, Jan. 10.—Varsity Senior O.H.A. team played Kingston Frontenacs a league game here this afternoon and as both teams were making their initial appearance speculation was rife as to who would be the ultimate winner. The Kingstonites were slight favorites, because their team was at full strength, while the blue and white were minus Aird, their sensational forward.

The score stood, Varsity 5, Kingston 3.

A COURT MARTIAL BELIEVES OFFICERS BEFORE CIVILIANS

German Court-Martial Acquitted Officers Charged With Breach of Law

Strassburg, Jan. 10.—Court martial to-day acquitted all the German army officers charged with breaches of the law in connection with the recent violent incidents between the military and civilians of Zabern, the military judges in all cases accepting the word of the officers against the sworn testimony of the civilian witnesses.

Co. von Reuter, commander of the 99th Infantry regiment, was charged with wrongful imprisonment, but the court found his acts justified and set him free.

Lieut. Schad, accused of striking a prisoner, was also released by the same court, on the ground that the charge had not been proved.

Lieut. Baron von Forstner won his appeal before a second court martial against the sentence of 43 days' imprisonment imposed on him on Dec. 19, on a charge of sabring a lame shoemaker, and was given his liberty.

The justification of Col. von Reuter's acts was based by the court on a decree issued by the King of Prussia in 1820, which gave the right to the military to intervene without waiting for a request from the civil authorities in case the latter were powerless to suppress disorders. This decree was inserted in the most recently issued army service instructions, and is valid at the present date in Alsace, although subsequent laws do not authorize military action without requisition from the civilian authorities.

The decree was issued at the time of the Holy Alliance which existed from 1815 to 1830, between the European sovereigns, and was intended to perpetuate the reigning dynasties and prevent revolutions.

Col. von Reuter's retention of the civilian prisoners over night, altho [illegible] by the court as illegal in [illegible], was considered justified because the [illegible] of the prisoners at night [illegible] in the opinion of the court, have caused more serious disorders, and perhaps bloodshed.

The military judges trying Lieut. Baron von Forstner decided that the crippled shoemaker had made a threatening remark to the officer, and when they heard the testimony of one of von Forstner's men, who swore that he had found a pocket knife in the shoemaker's pocket, they declared that Lieut. Forstner had been justified in sabring the shoemaker.

MOVING PICTURES AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons have certainly inaugurated a new and appreciated innovation in presenting cheap and good amusement for the Peterborough public. Their recent move in introducing up-to-the-minute moving pictures in the Grand Opera House has caught the public's attention. At the Grand people for 5 and 10 cents can see the latest films whilst seated in comfortable chairs and protected, as they are not in some other places, from danger of fire.

60,000 CITIZENS CALLED TO ARMY

Pretoria, South Africa, Jan. 10.—A further proclamation calling 60,000 men of the citizens' defence force to the colors was issued here to-day. This step was taken by the authorities in view of the possibility of widespread disturbances following the expected orders for a general strike by the labor federations.

It Happens.

The Woman—Here's a wonderful thing. I've just been reading of a man who reached the age of forty without learning to read or write. He met a woman, and for her sake he made a scholar of himself in two years.

The Man—That's nothing. I know a man who was a profound scholar at 40. Then he met a woman, and for her sake he made a fool of himself in two days!

HUNDRED MEN ADDED TO MONTREAL FORCE

Numerical Strength of Police Now Nearing the Thousand Mark.

Montreal, Jan. 10.—Montreal's police force is nearing the 1000 mark, an addition of 100 men for 1914, bringing its numerical strength to 979. This is made up of the chief, two deputy chiefs, 156 officers, 3 matrons and 815 men.

In his requisition to the board of control for 1914, Chief Campeau asked for 200 new men. That number he considered necessary. In many of the stations, especially those on the outskirts of the city, there were only a few men, and the outlying districts were growing so rapidly that better police protection was required.

More men were needed also for the detective bureau as it could not be expected that forty men could cover the entire city from Longue Pointe, and Rosemount to the far end of Cote Ste. Paul and Notre Dame de Grace between the St. Lawrence and the Back River. He required 100 new men.

Daring Girl Satisfactorily Demonstrates New Aerial Life Preserver.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 10.—One of the two women passengers carried yesterday by Glenn Martin an aviator, stepped from his machine when it was 850 feet in the air. She reached the ground safely and demonstrated to Martin's satisfaction the practicability of a new aerial life preserver.

Spectators saw the girl, Miss Tiny Broadwick, fall 75 feet like a shot. Then a parachute attachment on her shoulders unfolded and she descended gradually and with no apparent effort at balancing.

Important Resolutions Before Western Grain Growers—Want Public Operation of Hudson Bay Railway

Brandon, Man., Jan. 10.—At the eleventh annual grain growers' convention, the morning session handled the president's and secretary's report. Inter-municipal hail insurance raised the most discussion. The Saskatchewan Act was criticised, and officials were proposed to the projected Manitoba bill which will come before the present session of parliament.

Among the more important resolutions to come up are: "Whereas, the policy of the political parties favors the spending of millions of the peoples' money on a navy; resolved, that in the opinion of this convention, before this expenditure is authorized by parliament it should be submitted to the people through a referendum.

"That in the opinion of this association the money that is asked to build naval vessels might better be applied to the establishing of a [illegible] fund, to give relief to the Canadian people from the extortion of the steamship combine.

"That this convention, while approving of the government's expeditious construction of the Hudson Bay Railway, [illegible] to the principle of government operation of the same, and furthermore that this convention [illegible] [illegible] to report to future annual conventions all data obtainable regarding [illegible] work and cost thereof.

"That we condemn the present practice of our towns, cities and municipalities of granting exemptions from taxes to manufacturing corporations.

"That this convention views with alarm the increasing corruption prevailed in elections, both provincial and federal, and hereby express their indignation and condemnation of such practices, and demand that the law bearing on elections be changed that parties condemned or proven can be adequately punished.

"That we urge on the Dominion Government the necessity of enforcing existing legislation intended to hinder any such action as will unduly increase the cost of the necessities of life, or in any way be a restriction to trade. And if existing legislation is not sufficient for the purpose that such legislation be amended so as to apply to offenses."

WORRIED OVER MINING DEAL CHAS CAMERON HANGS HIMSELF

Chas Cameron, Spadina Ave., Threw Rope Over Beam in Garage and Jumped Off Saw Horse

Toronto, Jan. 10.—Worry over meeting a payment in connection with a mining deal caused Charles Cameron of 201 Spadina avenue to commit suicide on Saturday morning by hanging himself in the loft of the garage at the rear of his residence.

Cameron went into the garage which is also used for storage of fuel, to bring in some fuel for Mrs. Waterman, his housekeeper, shortly before 11 o'clock and when he did not return, she sent Wallace Cameron his 13-year-old son to look for him. The son found the body of his father hanging from a beam in the loft. His father had placed a board across two sawhorses and fastening a rope around his neck had jumped off the board, and when discovered by his son the body was found suspended by the rope.

P. C. Dunn, of No. 3 police station who was called, found the body still warm and rendered first aid, but was unable to restore any sign of life. Dr. W. H. Nelson, of Strachan avenue, who was called pronounced life extinct. The body was then removed to the morgue, but whether an inquest will be held has not been decided.

During the past year Cameron had experienced a number of financial worries, but that which led him to commit the act is believed to be due to some money he was to have furnished in connection with a mining transaction.

CROWN PRINCE TO PREPARE FOR WAR

German Emperor Sends Son to General Staff to Study Tactics.

Berlin, Jan. 10.—Not only are all the rumored reasons for the recall of the German Crown Prince from Danzig to Berlin denied by his imperial highness in the course of an interview published in The Zeitung Am Mittag to-day, but the crown prince is said to have made the startling statement that Emperor William had recalled him because his majesty believed no more time should be lost in preparing his eldest son for the higher command which he would have to assume in case of war.

The transfer of the crown prince to the general staff was to have taken place last autumn, but he requested a year's extension of his stay at Danzig. The crown prince himself said to the interviewer:

"This extension was at first granted, but in December I was detailed to the general staff because his majesty considered the step necessary, with the view that I should immediately study how to conduct larger bodies of troops I should naturally in a certain contingency, command more than a regiment."

The newspaper says the crown prince will probably visit Africa in the course of this year.

BANDIT'S ESCAPE PLANNED BY PALS WHO WILL KILL HIM

Feared That Before Krafchenko Case Was Finished All Would be Implicated

Winnipeg, Jan. 10.—A reward of $5,000 was this afternoon offered by the attorney-general's department for the arrest of Krafchenko and $2,000 for his accomplice.

J. Black, chauffeur, who was reported to have assisted in the outlaw's getting away, and to be under arrest, was merely held for examination, and when he gave satisfactory account of his movements at the time the escape was effected, was permitted to go.

One sensational statement made by a reliable authority, but which may be taken for what it is worth, is to the effect that Krafchenko was freed by foreign pals because they feared that before the murder case was concluded they would all be implicated one way or other.

The same authority declared that Krafchenko would never get away alive, as delivery was made for the purpose of removing him for all time.

It is considered possible that Krafchenko may now be across the boundary line. Running at a speed of 30 miles an hour would have enabled him to be in the States before daylight.

KNIGHTS OF THE GRIP HOLD SUCCESSFUL SMOKER

On Saturday night the local Commercial Travellers' Association, recently formed in the Bank of Montreal Chambers gave an initial housewarming in their fine new club rooms on Water street. The rooms were fully described in a recent issue of The Times.

On Saturday nearly one hundred of the commercial men and their invited guests gathered in the commodious quarters. The rooms were bright with electricity and "bon mots" passed from one knight of the grip to whomsoever he was conversing with. Possibly there is not any class in any civilized community more replete with wit—plus business—than are the commercial men, particularly the commercial men of Peterborough.

The function took the character of an informal "smoker." A fine musical program was rendered that was appreciated by the large audience present.

THE PROGRAM:

Violin solo—Mr. Whitehouse.
Recitation—Mr. Dougald.
Song—Mr. [illegible]

TO WARD OFF WINTER COMPLEXION ILLS.

(From the Queen.)

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all winter, there's nothing quite as good as ordinary mercolized wax. Rough, chapped or discolored skin, inevitable in this weather, is gently absorbed by the wax and replaced by the newer, fresher skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, the latter being applied at bedtime and washed off mornings. Creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand, are apt to appear conspicuous at this season, because of alternating expansion and contraction of the skin, due to changing temperatures. I advise you to try this simple treatment. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store and use like cold cream. This will help any skin at once, and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably youthful and healthy.

Winds and flying dust often cause squinting and other contortions which make wrinkles. You can quickly get rid of every wrinkle, however produced, by using a harmless face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel.

To-day—Mostly fair and about the same temperature.

Getting at the Facts.

Miss Smith—I hear you are talking of getting married again.

Miss Jones—Getting married again! Why, I've never been married!

Miss Smith—Yes, I know. I said you were talking of it again.

VENETIAN WOMEN.

The Whims of Fashion Hold No Terrors For Them.

The women of Venice are absolutely free from the rule which Dame Fashion exercises over their sisters elsewhere. They care nothing for modes. With them the length of the skirt remains always the same, neither short nor long, and they always wear plainly made dark dresses, black stockings and the heelless slippers of the east. Hats are unknown.

The universal outdoor wrap for all ages and all sizes is the black shawl, with a deep silken fringe. It is [illegible] stretched arm, which makes the spectator think of a big bird stretching its wing.

In their attire the women of Venice are independent, only wearing local clothing, but with feminine inconsistency they are thoroughly up to date in the matter of hairdressing, the style of their coiffures changing from time to time, according to the vogue of the moment in London and Paris.

Identified.

William M. Chase, the artist, was a picturesque figure, dressing in clothes that had a certain originality, though they conformed more or less to the prevailing fashions. On one occasion Chase on his way home stopped into a little wine shop [illegible] of claret of a special brand [illegible] to the house. The lad who brought it came to the front door an hour afterward, when the artist had already arrived. "Some wine," he said curtly. The maid, knowing there was yet plenty in the cellar and believing the lad had made a mistake, said she was sure it was not for that house and bid the boy remember the name of the man who ordered it. The boy didn't. "Then," said the servant, "you've come to the wrong place, we never ordered wine!" At this moment the boy spied Chase's famous hat on the hall table. "Say," he asked, "does that hat live here?" "Yes," said the amazed maid. "Then," said the boy triumphantly, "here's where the wine belongs!"—Argonaut.

Mormons In Canada.

The visit which Joseph F. Smith, president of the Mormon Church, has been making to Alberta in connection with the erection of a temple at Cardston to cost [illegible], directs attention to the extent of the Mormon population of Canada. According to the census of 1901 there were [illegible] Mormon settlers in the Dominion, and in 1911 almost [illegible]. The number is now believed to be considerably over sixteen thousand.

In the former decade the principal settlement was in Ontario, the total being 3,377, while in Alberta there were 3,312. By the last census it is shown that more than half the Mormons of Canada are now found in Alberta, the total in that province being [illegible]. In Ontario the number is [illegible], the balance being scattered throughout the other provinces.

Mark Twain's Definitions.

It is told of Mark Twain that during a conversation with a young lady of his acquaintance he had occasion to mention the word drydock.

"What is a drydock, Mr. Clemens?" she asked.

"A thirsty physician," replied the humorist.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Funny Things You Didn't Know About Our Nomenclature.

Surnames are not what they seem, and some of the most distressing contain a wealth of meaning.

Take, for example, the surname with which many people think they are cursed—Snooks. This, by no means, seems to be an impeding [illegible] but, as a matter of fact, it is a name of great antiquity, and one of which nobody need be ashamed. In reality it is a contraction of "Sevenoak." It was first corrupted to Snooks, which, in its turn, was corrupted to Snooks of to-day.

The original bearer of the name of Legless was so called merely because he was a lawyer. Originally, the name was spelled Lawless, the expression signifying "learned in the law." Strangely enough, Lawless is derived from exactly the same source, and signifies exactly the opposite to its apparent meaning.

Take the case of the surname Heart. It is really a corruption of Hard, which was a name given to show that the owner was a man of firm character and resolute bearing.

One must extend pity to the poor individual burdened with such a name as Gumboil. Yet those who possess the name may be interested to know that it, too, has nothing at all to do with any part of the anatomy. It denotes that its first bearer was a man of considerable importance and great power in the state. It is derived from the Norse word "gumbold," which itself has nothing to do with any affliction, but means "bold in war."

It is quite wrong to assume that the name of Smith is derived from the fact that the original bearers were workers in metal. In reality, Smith is a very fine old name, far more ancient than Anglo-Saxon. The oldest-known bearers of the name were brewers, and it was in use many thousand of years ago in mighty Egypt.

Such names as Swearing and Gambling show how the original meaning has become corrupted. Swears and Swearing are derived from the older Sweer, which comes from an Anglo-Saxon word meaning "honorable." "Gambling" comes from Gamling, which comes from a Norse word signifying "old descent." The ending "ing" to a surname simply means "son of." Thus, Browning means "son of Brown," and Dunning, "Dunn's son."

Apparently, a very ignoble surname is Tremble, a name which might make one imagine that the ancestor of Mr. Tremble was a craven-hearted creature. Still, the exact opposite is the case, for the name is only a corruption of the ancient word "trumbald," which signifies "steadfast and bold."

Any individual rejoicing in the name of Mr. Earwig may be proud in the fact that originally the name meant the "boar of battle." The surname Motter denoted at first a man of great courage; while Mr. Ratt gets his name from the fact that the first bearer of the name was a wise person, who gave "counsel" to the king.

Goss, Gosling, and Jocelyn are corruptions of a word which originally denoted the "Goths." The first Mr. Gander was an individual called "the wolf"; while the original Mr. Doubt was a "doughty" man.

Not surnames are not what they seem. For instance, Lind appears to be a somewhat charming name; all the same, it is derived from a Teutonic word meaning a "snake." The apparently quiet and harmless surname Wren comes from a word which denotes "tagline." Then, Fish, though such an innocent name in appearance, originally meant "impetuous." The common surname Haddock is derived from a word meaning "war."

Never judge a person from his name!

A Western Landmark.

Another historical spot in western Canada has recently been located and marked. It is in the Province of Saskatchewan, and in the constituency of Pelly, situated about three miles north of the town of Pelly, on the C.N.R. The location is on the site of the old headquarters of the Mounted Police, known as Fort Livingstone, or Swan River Barracks, [illegible] an important point in the west. It was here that the first session of the first Northwest Council was held, commencing on March 8, 1877, presided over by Hon. David Laird, who was Lieutenant-Governor of the Northwest Territories at that time. The members of that notable Council were: Col. Jas. F. Macleod, Commissioner of Mounted Police; Hugh Richardson, Stipendiary Magistrate; Matthew Ryan, Stipendiary Magistrate. At that time there were no [illegible] and the [illegible] were only being commenced in the far west. In 1878 the headquarters of the post were moved about 100 miles south, where the men put up new log buildings. In 1884 the [illegible] Swan River was swept with prairie fire, in which the old barracks fell a prey.

Dr. Montizambert, director of public health in Canada, believes that he has discovered a cure for leprosy. During the past year two of the cases which have been under the treatment at the Canadian Leper Colony at Tracadie, N.B., have been sent away cured. In all there have been four absolute cures. The only doubt which is in Dr. Montizambert's mind is that the disease has run itself out, for two cases have been cured in some way without more than ordinary care and treatment. At any rate, four cases which have been under this special treatment have been completely cured, and apparently hopeless cases have been materially benefited.

The cure, Dr. Montizambert says, is chaulmoogra oil. He has made a special study of leprosy during the past 30 years, and amongst all the remedies which he has found used in various parts of the world, he pinned his faith to this oil, which has been in use in India for centuries. He will explain the treatment to medical societies and submit detailed reports of the effect of the Indian treatment.

Choosing the Cuspidors.

Rev. Alexander MacGillivray, the well-known Presbyterian minister in Toronto, is credited as being the relator of an amusing story concerning an actual incident in a Canadian kirk.

It seems that in this particular church there were some careless young fellows who got into the bad habit of expectorating on the floor. The nuisance had continued for some time when the pastor's patience finally came to the breaking point.

He attended a meeting of the Church Session, and explained the situation to the pillars of the kirk.

"I am afraid if this expectoration continues we will have to have a couple of cuspidors," said he.

Up rose one of the aforesaid pillars, and gravely asserted that immediate action should be taken on the request of the minister.

"I move," said he, "that we nominate David McPherson and Sandy Campbell as cuspidors."—Canadian Courier.

How Eggs Are Hatched in China.

There is in China a curious method of hatching eggs. First the eggs are placed in there in a large basket, twice the size of an ordinary barrel, which is thickly lined with hay and carefully closed from the air by a tight fitting cover of twisted straw. In three days' time the eggs are taken out and replaced in a different order, those at the surface being put in the lower tier. This is repeated every third day for a fortnight, when the eggs are removed from the basket and placed on a shelf in another room, being carefully covered with bran. In a day or two the chickens chip the shells and make their appearance into the world. The success of this method is attributed to the fact that the animal heat of the egg, being retained by the basket, which is formed of material not conducting caloric, is sufficient to support animal life and develop it.—Detroit Free Press.

How Much Sleep Do We Need?

How much sleep is necessary for a man? The question was raised centuries ago by Montaigne. "Physicians," he wrote, "may consider whether sleep be so necessary that our life must needs depend on it, for we finde that Perseus, King of Macedon, prisoner at Rome, being kept from sleep, was made to die; but Plinie alegeth that some have lived a long time without any sleep at all. And Herodotus reporteth there are nations where men sleep and wake by halfe yeares. And those that write the life of Epimenides the wise affirm that he slept the continual space of seven and fifty yeares."

A peculiarity of that most [illegible] of South African antelopes the springbok is that it always leaps over human tracks. It is at once exceedingly shy and marvelously active, and the reason for this strange antic is its intense suspicion of any possible enemies, among whom it has come to recognize man as the most dangerous. It is not only with human tracks that the springbok goes through this performance, for it does the same with the tracks of lions or even when it gets wind of a lion. The leap is exceedingly graceful, and the animal covers from twelve to fifteen feet at each bound. It drops on all four feet at once and immediately rises again, making a clean spring without any run. Its usual gait when not pursued is a light springy trot. The springbok usually travels with its nose to the ground, as if constantly on the lookout for the scent of enemies.

Our Point of View

In Toronto a leading role in grand opera is now being taken by a former blacksmith. He ought to be able to make a great hit in the anvil chorus.

Do you ever think of the days when you could borrow a dozen of perfectly good eggs from a neighbor when your own hens stopped laying. Those were the happy days?

Now comes the interesting news that Naomi, the daughter of Enoch, was 580 years old when she married. So the case of some old maids we know is not entirely hopeless.

There are only seven thousand stars visible to the naked eye, say astronomers. We saw more than that number the first time we put on a pair of skates.

In New York a man named [illegible] is running for clerk of the general assembly. After the campaign the state of his finances will probably suggest the advisability of changing his name to Nomoney.

A British sanitarian, speaking of the use of meat as food, says: "Most people are digging their graves with their teeth." But it is well to say that in this country the prices of the meat trust are doing a great deal to discourage that kind of grave-digging.

ERADICATING SCARLET FEVER

Of all the ills that afflict childhood, none, perhaps, give cause for greater anxiety than scarlet fever. A highly infectious disease, and so frequently fatal parents dread its entry into the family with a wholesome fear. Not only is the disease itself highly dangerous, it so often is accompanied by complications giving rise to serious after-effects, [illegible] sometimes blindness, or affecting the hearing, or otherwise working serious harm that the ill disease is properly looked upon with well justified alarm. The announcement before the Society of American Bacteriologists at Montreal by Dr. Newell S. Ferry, of Detroit, that he has succeeded in isolating the germ that gives rise to the disease, and that he has discovered a ready means of [illegible] brought into contact with the disease, will be hailed with high hopes that his discovery may prove as effective as he anticipated. Dr. Ferry submitted evidence of tests he had himself made, and offered to submit to his fellow members the secret of his discovery that more thorough trial might be made. And should the discovery prove to be all that it promises, which we sincerely hope it will, it would be an inestimable boon to humanity.

Blinding Headaches From Catarrhal Irritation Now Quickly Cured

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With All This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old-fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headache. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is sweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh [illegible], Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size, 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

TALES OF RAZORBACKS

How Hogs of This Breed Get Down a Steep Hill.

The group on the porch was talking about razorback hogs, and the storekeeper was telling a story.

"There was a feller travelin' through here," he said. "He was a stranger in these parts. One day he come across a bunch o' hawgs that had big slits in their ears. He figgered at those slits. They was too big for brands. What else could they be? After a bit a native come down the trail. 'Jess lookin' at them hawgs,' said the stranger. 'You was,' says the native. 'D'ye mind tellin' me what them big slits in their ears is for?' said the stranger. 'Not at all,' says the native. 'Have you noticed these hills?' 'What d'ye mean? Noticed how steep they is?' 'Yes, I have.' 'Waal,' says the native, 'that's [illegible]. We have to [illegible] them slits in the hawgs' ears so [illegible] big stick their [illegible] 'em an' rough [illegible] themselves down them hills to keep from killin' themselves.'"

There was a salvo of very hearty outdoor laughter at this and Mr. Antwine stirred behind his newspaper.

"That remin's me of the way they use to tell down on the Arkansas line," he said. "There was a feller goin' through there [illegible] a drove o' [illegible] carryin' on mighty queer. There was about twenty o' 'em, an' they [illegible] like they was crazy. They would run fust to one tree an' then to another, tryin' to climb it. Then they would spin aroun' on their ears, crack their tails an' squeal in the most pitiful way you ever heard. The [illegible] watched them hawgs for [illegible] minutes, an' the more he saw of 'em the more they puzzled him. Finally [illegible] he come to a house. There was a man out in front. He was lookin' in the sun. 'Is them your hawgs up there in the hills?' the stranger asked. 'Yep,' says the native. At that the traveler stepped up an' looked his man in the eye. 'Say,' he said, 'what in the [illegible] ails the matter with them hawgs? The native [illegible] half smiled. 'They does act queer, don't they?' he says. 'I should say they does.' 'Waal, it's this a-way,' said the native. 'We had a hard winter in here this time, an' there was no feed in the hills for them hawgs. I had to let 'em have corn. Along late in the winter I tuk such a bad col' I couldn't holler pig-oooey any more. I had to call 'em up by bittin' the cornerib with a ax handle, an' now,' he says, lookin' back up the hill, 'them darn woodpeckers is cattin' 'em crazy.'"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Pitiful Drama.

Manager—We've got a great play here.

Backer—But it has no comedy in it.

Manager—The actors will insert that.

Backer—There's no action.

Manager—I've got a few dandy mechanical surprises to put in.

Backer—What has the author furnished, then?

Manager—Everything else except for required indecency. I'll have to hire an expert on that.—Cleveland Leader.

The Old "Chanticleer."

Edythe—Oh, grandmamma, Jack and I were to see the new play last night! All the players were dressed to represent barnyard fowls.

Grandmamma—Why, that's nothing. The summer before I was married I had a dres[illegible] a [illegible] hat trimmed with canary ribbon, and every one said your grandfather was the biggest goose in town.—Judge.

She Knew the Answer.

A reporter called on a rector to ask him if he had accepted a bishopric that had been offered him. The servant said that her master could not be seen. He was at prayer seeking for guidance. Then could the reporter see the rector's wife? "Oh, no," said the slavey, "you can't see her. She's busy packing up!"—Circle.

A Neighborly Precaution.

The new clerk at the drug store returned the prescription to the old customer with a request that he wait till the boss returned.

"But why can't you fill it out?"

"I could if you was a stranger, but I ain't to fill 'em for folks that lives about here."—Success Magazine.

Passing It On.

The clerk filled out the marriage license and handed it over.

"Thank you," said the young man.

"Hold on! That's $2."

"Two dollars!"

"Yes. Did you suppose we gave these things away?"

"I certainly did. Charging a man $2 for a sheet of paper that didn't cost the county more than a nickel at the outside is robbery. Have I got to pay it?"

"You'll pay it or you'll hand back that document."

"All right," said the young man, taking a bill out of his pocket, handing it to the clerk and waiting for his change, "but I can tell you right now you ain't robbin' me. You're robbin' the preacher. He'll get just $2 less than I was goin' to give him."

Pocketing the change and tilting his hat back on his head, he stalked out of the office with the air of a man who had been imposed upon, but who knew how to get even.—Chicago Tribune.

The Cat Came Back.

Bunte—Did you ever try to lose a cat?

Egbert—Oh, yes. I hit upon a plan which I thought would work. I wrote a [illegible] $10, and tied both about the cat's neck. The note read, "Finder may keep both the cat and the money."

"And how did it work?"

"The cat came back the next day with another note tied to its neck. The note said: 'Don't need the cat, but can use the money. Please send $10 more.'"—Yonkers Statesman.

The Pleasure Site.

Willie—Father, is it true that riches do not bring happiness?

His Pa—Quite true, my son. If you doubt it observe how much noise the people in the bleacher seats make to enjoy themselves than those in the grand stand.—New York Telegraph.

SEATS EASILY LOST

Great Britain is Strict With Her Legislators

To gain a seat in the British House of Commons is no easy task in these days of strenuously-contested elections; to lose one is a far simpler matter.

A glass of beer given by a too-generous canvasser to a wavering elector, a promise of employment, an omission in the return of election expenses, or the issue of a poster without the name and address of the printer and publisher, are a few offences, among many, fraught with grave consequences to the triumphant member. Recent election petitions have shown the truth of this.

If personally responsible for corrupt practices, the unhappy candidate, on conviction, is incapacitated for election to any constituency for seven years, and his late election is rendered void. Whether the candidate be personally responsible, or responsible only through his agents, a conviction of illegal practices usually carries with it the latter penalty, and the unseated member has before him the option of retiring from public life for a season or of once more facing the music of another contest.

It must be borne in mind, too, that a candidate is, with certain exceptions, liable for the illegal practices of all persons who may, on the trial of the election petition, be held to be his agents.

It is possible, however, to have to vacate a seat in the House under happier circumstances than these. For example, a writ may be issued summoning a member to the House of Lords; and, as peers of Parliament and peers of the realm—with the exception of Irish peers, not included in the twenty-eight representatives of Great Britain—are ineligible for a seat in the Commons, the newly-born peer retires to his rest with blushing honors thick upon him, and leaves to some other aspirant for Parliamentary honors the fierce turmoil of another contest.

Acceptance of the "Stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds," or, when that office is not available, the "Manor of the East Hundred," is, of course, equivalent to resignation, and is the usual method of vacating a seat in Parliament.

There are three cases on record where a member has been appointed agent of a militia regiment to enable him to vacate his seat and stand for some other constituency.

The election of a member to the House of Commons can also be rendered void by bankruptcy or lunacy, but, in such a case, the seat is not immediately vacated.

Six months' grace is allowed by law before the House can order the issue of a new writ.

A number of most interesting cases have arisen out of the famous Act known as the 6th of Anne, the 25th section of which enacts that, if a member shall accept any office of profit from the crown, his election shall be void, but such person shall be capable of re-election.

There are certain exceptions, however, provided for by statute. A few offices of profit there are acceptance of which does not entail the vacation of a seat in the Commons, among them being those of Financial Secretary to the War Office, Governor of the Bank of England, and the office of Paymaster-General. A further exception has been made which provides that a member may accept [illegible] office in succession to the one for which he sought re-election without vacating his seat.

A Statesman's Queer Ambition.

The great Lord Grey had an ambition far above politics. He had passed the reform bill, but that did not satisfy his soul. There was talk of Taglioni, and Grey said quite earnestly, "What would I give to dance as well as she!" The statesman who had [illegible] an indelible mark on the history of his country was envious of an opera dancer!—London Saturday Review.

LATEST FROM APSLEY

The municipal elections are over for 1914, and there was a strong fight put up. The result was: N. Leon, for Reeve; Councillors, Geo. [illegible], W. C. Stone, B. F. Coones, A. Harris.

The holiday season brought the usual concerts, tea and Christmas trees by the churches.

A very pleasant evening was spent at Mr. McIlvena's on the 29th, when a number of the young people gathered and had a very enjoyable time, with games, music and dancing until the early morning hours.

Miss Brown, of Peterborough was visiting her brother, Mr. D. Brown, merchant, of Apsley, for some time.

Miss Myrtle Hales has been visiting friends at Coe Hill for a week.

Walter Wigg spent a few days with friends in Apsley and surroundings.

Miss Emma Tucker was the guest of Miss McIlvena for several days.

Mrs. Kelly, teacher of No. 1, Apsley, and Miss Herr, of No. 2, Anstruther, have returned from their holidays and resumed their duties.

Mrs. John Kilborne and Master Russell are visiting friends in Anstruther.

Mr. Jas. McIlvena met with a severe accident as the result of a kick from a horse he was shoeing.

Lloyd Younge, while clearing out a lumber road, cut his foot very badly and will be laid up for some time.

Another young man who was working in Jackson camp received a severe cut on his hand and has gone home for treatment.

The sleighing, though not extra good, is much better than wheeling, and the P.L.Co.'s teams are taking advantage of it to rush in supplies for the camps.

Work in all the lumber camps is progressing favorably and if we get good hard frost and sufficient snow there will be a large output this season.

Mr. A. [illegible] has almost completed his contract on Eel's Lake Dam and has made an excellent job of it.

Messrs. Thompson and Davidson drove through Apsley Tuesday on their way to their camps.

We regret to hear that Mr. Chas. [illegible], of [illegible], is very ill, but hope to hear of his quick recovery.

MAKING OF A BRITISH SEAMAN

How Jack-Tars are Educated for Their Life Work

The making of a British sailor begins with the selection of boys of good parentage and not over 13 or 14 years of age. While there is still a possibility of coming in through the hawse pipe and going out by the poop, or to rise from an ordinary sailor to captain, this possibility has practically died out as far as officers of liners are concerned. The would-be navigator must go through his deep water training of three or four years before he is eligible to be examined for a second mate's certificate, and the usual procedure is for a boy to become a premium bound apprentice to a sailing ship firm. Indentures are signed for four years, and the boy's parents or guardians pay a premium of from $150 to $500, as the case may be.

Once he has joined his ship, the apprentice after a few days is expected to find his way aloft and perform any little odd jobs which do not call for much experience, and after the softness has been knocked out of them the boys really enjoy the battling with the elements, as it gives them a feeling that they are doing a grown man's work. At the end of the four years, if they apply themselves, they are good sailors, so far as steering, knotting and splicing or making and furling sail go. In order to pass a second mate's examination the candidate must prove that he is capable of navigating a ship to any part of the world by means of sun and sextant, and he must also produce his first aid certificate. By this time the age of 18 has usually been reached.

For a first mate's certificate the British Board of Trade demands one year's service in a sailing ship as second mate, and at least eighteen months as third mate in charge of a watch on a steam vessel. The candidate must also satisfy the authorities that he can navigate a vessel anywhere by means of sun and stars and that he has a sound practical knowledge of chart work and can find the error of compasses by star or sun azimuths. He must also have a knowledge of stowing and care of cargoes. Having secured a first mate's certificate, after twelve months in a sailing vessel in that capacity he is qualified to demand his master's examination, in which to be successful he must show that he can navigate a vessel by means of the sun, moon and stars, and compensate the error of the compass by means of magnets. In addition to navigation and seamanship, in the latter of which he must give satisfaction in every detail, he is expected to know all about charter parties, bills of lading, etc.

The minimum age limit to hold a master's certificate is 21 years; the "boys," therefore, as they are sometimes referred to, who officer passenger steamers, are only so in appearance and age. In experience they are men in every sense of the word, and no matter what might happen to the master or the majority of the officers of a liner, if there were one certified officer left, the passengers need have no fear of her not reaching port safely so far as human nature is concerned.—Marine Journal.

MARK TWAIN AS A BOWLER

When Mark Twain was an editor in Hartford he was considered a formidable opponent at skittles. His favorite resort was a bowling alley in a cellar on State street not far from the steamboat dock. While the celebrated humorist was under Major Pond's management he was billed as one of the features for an evening's entertainment at the Young Men's Christian association hall at Newark. There was a bowling alley immediately underneath the lecture room. As Mark Twain was on his way upstairs with the major he caught a glimpse of it.

"What's going on in there—bowling?"

"Yes," replied the major, who knew his weakness, "but never mind that now. You're due on the platform."

"Run in somebody else for ten or fifteen minutes," said Mark Twain. "I shall do ever so much better after a little exercise."

And he did.

Comparatively Modern.

Friction matches are a comparatively modern invention, having been made by John Walker in England in 1827. These were rather crude affairs, however, and he improved them somewhat in 1833 by using phosphorus.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

"[illegible] of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All Who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders.

In his home at Waldengrove, N.S., no one is better known than Sergt.-Major Coon, late of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sergt.-Major writes: "I served under General French during the late Boer war in the capacity of Sergt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of badly food, hard tack and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a stage that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors [illegible] help me much, and since leaving [illegible] service I have been very miserable. Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. WHAT ARTISTS SEE

Mr. C. Lewis Hind draws a striking picture of the artist's vision in the English Review, especially of those whom he calls "The Unafraid," such as Seurat, Signac, Van Gogh, and Gauguin.

"How can I hope to illustrate the intensity of their achievement in a few pages? We who sit at home in ease constructing arm-chair theories can hardly realize their white-hot, fever-tossed mania for expression. It is well. Goya looked into gulfs. Van Gogh strained into the furnace and was scorched and shrivelled. But the flame of their lives enables us to understand why the New Movement in Art has prospered and spread, seeing how fierce were the pioneer fi[illegible].

. . . I had ended there.

But a great wind blew all the stars to flame.

"What are you so pensive this evening, [illegible]" rallied the old codger's [illegible].

"Well, I'll tell you, Phoeny," answered the veteran. "While I was [illegible] this afternoon I had the pleasure of witnessing an evangelist being bored to death by a life insurance agent, and I've been wondering ever since what the good man was saying to himself all the time it was going on."

BASEBALL PITCHING

Mordecai Brown's Hook Curve and How It Is Delivered.

Hugh S. Fullerton, writing in the American Magazine about the "Wonders of Pitching," says of "Three Fingered" Brown, the star twirler of the Cubs:

"Beyond doubt Mordecai Brown's hook curve is the highest development of the fast overhand ball which curves down and out, as all good curves do. Brown has but two entire fingers on his right hand and only fractions of the others. His first finger is cut off short, and the middle finger is crooked so that the first joint turns—almost at right angles toward the thumb. Perhaps this mutilated hand is the secret of his marvelous curves. Brown pitches the hook overhand, releasing the ball at graduated points after the hand passes the line of the center of the body in swinging. Upon the point at which the ball is released by the fingers the place of the 'break' depends, and Brown can by regulating the point of release make it either describe a wide, fast arc or, after traveling fifty feet, break suddenly at a sharp angle from its original course. If the batter retires to the back of the batter's box Brown, by releasing the ball a flash sooner, can make it break in front of the batter, almost over the plate. If the batter moves to the front of the box to meet the curve before it breaks a sudden jerk of the pitcher's wrist makes the ball break several feet in front of the plate. He controls the point of the break or curve at will, except when the ball slips, as it sometimes will do even with the greatest of pitchers. Most players who faced him in duels between batter and pitcher concede Brown's curve to be the greatest of all, but no member of the Detroit team who batted against Overall in the world's championship series of 1908 will acknowledge that Brown is better. In the game that Overall pitched, the final one of the series, his curve broke in such an astonishing manner as to surprise even himself. Overall pitched his curve with a wide, sweeping overhand swing, releasing the ball over the side of his index finger just as his hand turns downward."

HOME HEALTH CLUB

DR. DAVID H. REEDER,
Chicago, Ill.

NERVES: (Continuations of articles written for Home Health Club by H. Lindlahr, M.D.) Mechanical causes of Nervous Diseases. In the last article of this series we studied the dietetic causes of nervous diseases. We shall now consider the mechanical causes of these ailments. The nerves may be irritated, benumbed and paralyzed not only by food and drink poisons, but also by friction or pressure caused by displaced or luxated bones, muscles and ligaments.

All the nerves of the human body proceed from the brain and spinal cord through tiny openings in the bony structures of the skull and of the spinal column. When any of these bones are out of place, twisted, dislocated or luxated, they impinge upon the nerve trunks and blood vessels passing out between them, thus causing irritation of the nerves or interference with the free flow of the nerve and blood currents. According to a certain physiological law, irritation at any point along the course of a nerve is communicated to all branches of that nerve, similar to the way in which an electric current applied at any point of a network of copper wires, if not checked or diverted, will travel over all the wires connected with that system. Thus abnormal pressure upon, and consequent irritation of a nerve trunk will be transmitted to all the branches of that nerve and carried to all the cells and organs supplied by that particular nerve trunk and its branches, resulting in inflammation, pain, and abnormal function in the affected parts. In accordance with the same physiological law, if a nerve be benumbed and paralyzed at any point along its course, the nerves and its branches beyond the point of interference and all the structures depending upon them for their supply of nerve force will also be benumbed and paralyzed.

The pressure of luxated bones on nerve or blood vessels may be illustrated by the effect of compression upon a rubber hose through which water is flowing. Stepping upon the hose will stop the flow of water; in like manner abnormal pressure or impingement upon nerves or blood and lymph vessels interferes with the flow of vital currents. Thus the tissues and organs depending upon these vessels for their blood and nerve supply are deprived of sufficient nourishment, proper drainage, and of the communication with "headquarters" in brain and spinal cord. There can be but one remedy for such mechanical interference, and that consists in replacing the dislocated bones where they belong through treatment by a trained manipulator.

From the foregoing it becomes apparent how the irritation or pressure upon the nerves and blood vessels by dislocated bones, especially by the vertebrae of the spinal column, may cause all kinds of nervous diseases. Such irritation may result in inflammation of the nerves themselves and of the structures and organs which they supply, or, the constant pressure upon the nerves by the luxated bones may shut off the flow of the nervous (vital) energy, and thus cause gradual atrophy and paralysis of the affected parts. Mechanical interference with nerves and nerve action, as just described, accounts for a multitude of nervous ailments, such as chronic headaches, neuritis, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous dyspepsia, nervous heart trouble, asthmatic conditions, and innumerable other acute and chronic ailments.

Frequently patients come to us who have been treated for many years for "sciatic rheumatism." We find that one or both large hip bones are dislocated. In such cases a few thorough osteopathic treatments replace the bones, remove the abnormal pressure and tension and cure the "chronic sciatica." Other patients have suffered for many years from chronic headaches, nervousness, insomnia, eye troubles, etc. They have swallowed large amounts of poisonous sedatives, anodynes, and hypnotics. On examination we find that the "atlas" and cervical vertebrae which support the nerves which pass out between them and which supply the different parts and structures of the head, and in that way cause the nervous irritation or atrophy. When the bony lesions are corrected the nervous symptoms disappear. In a similar manner irritation or impingement upon any one of the nerves passing out from the brain and spinal cord to the different parts of the body may cause irritation, pain, inflammation or atrophy and paralysis.

Dear Doctor:—I have a brother eleven years old who has fainting spells. If he gets a little hurt or is frightened in any way, he faints. They do not last long, and his eyes are closed and deathly pale. Afterward he is pale and weak all day. We thought perhaps it was caused by worms, but one doctor says he has heart trouble. I forgot to state that his appetite is fairly good and he is bright in his studies, but [illegible] and he often [illegible] at night. DAILY SHORT STORY

A CHASE

By ELLA WHEATON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

Mrs. Greatorix was a stepmother. Not all stepmothers, any more than all mothers-in-law, are bad, but Mrs. Greatorix was at least avaricious. She had no children of her own, but a stepdaughter. Moreover, the husband and father had died, leaving $100,000 to his widow and $200,000 to his daughter, Alice.

Alice was fifteen years old when her father died and, having no other home, remained with her stepmother. She feared her father's widow and would have been glad to get away from her, but she was too young to lay plans for such a purpose.

There was a clause in the Greatorix will that if Alice was not married by the time she was eighteen $50,000 of her fortune was to go to her stepmother. If she had no children at twenty-five another $50,000 was to go to her stepmother. Why Mr. Greatorix threw such a temptation in the way of his wife to keep his daughter unmarried does not appear. The most probable solution is that it was the result of a compromise—that the wife was claiming more and finally got this stipulation out of him.

Unfortunately for the stepmother's plans Alice must go to school. At the high school when she was seventeen she met a youth of eighteen, and between them there sprang up an attachment. Roger Ashurst called occasionally on Alice, but it didn't take him long to discover that he was obnoxious to the stepmother. Opposition is an excellent incentive to love, and Roger as soon as he left the high school and went into business began to lay plans to possess the girl he found so much difficulty in courting. Besides, Alice had told him of the whys and wherefores of the case, and he saw plainly that in order to help Alice he must obtain the legal rights of a husband.

As the girl approached the age of eighteen her stepmother began to watch her very closely—so closely, indeed, that she was unable to communicate with her lover, Mrs. Greatorix intercepting all her letters. Two weeks before Alice's eighteenth birthday she was locked up in her room. But one night as she was going to bed, hearing shot thrown against her window, she opened it, and a stone was thrown in to which was attached a note from Roger stating that he would watch for her aunt to go out and when she did he would enter the house and take her away.

A couple of days after this Alice was not especially surprised at her bedroom door being kicked open and there stood Roger. Hastily putting on her hat and wraps, she went with him downstairs, got into an automobile and was starting when Mrs. Greatorix appeared, hurrying home.

A garage was located around the corner, and thither the stepmother ran, hired an auto and made chase. The fugitives had taken a broad avenue which was the most feasible outlet, and into this avenue Mrs. Greatorix ordered her chauffeur to proceed. She saw the auto in which her daughter was eloping—she recognized it by its color—just turning into a side street. For several minutes it was lost to her, but on turning into the side street she herself caught sight of it trying to pass a cab that stood in the way. While she looked the auto changed past the hack and darted on at full pace.

When Mrs. Greatorix reached the vehicle that had blocked the way her chauffeur endeavored to pass it on the right, but at the moment the hack swerved to that side of the narrow street. The chauffeur moved to the left, and the hack also turned to that side.

"Run him down!" cried Mrs. Greatorix. "He's in league with the elopers."

But when the chauffeur tried again to make a passage the hack drew out of the way and let him pass. The pursuing auto soon turned into another avenue, and Mrs. Greatorix, looking first in one direction, then in the other, saw the fugitive auto moving southward.

"There it is!" she cried. "Put on all your power."

They followed the auto twenty miles into the country, when it stopped suddenly.

"Now's your chance," she said to her chauffeur. "Don't let them get away."

But the chauffeur was obliged to slow up for the reason that the driver of the other machine got out to fix something. When Mrs. Greatorix pulled up beside him he was working with a monkey wrench. His auto was empty.

Mrs. Greatorix was so mad that she abused the fellow for leading her on a wild goose chase. He looked at her innocently, apparently not knowing what she was talking about. Then, not waiting for a rejoinder, she ordered her chauffeur to turn about and go back to the city.

Meanwhile the lovers had been married.

Mrs. Greatorix never knew their method of escape. Ashurst had not counted on her returning so soon. Expecting that she would follow, he directed his chauffeur to turn into a side street, and, seeing a hack standing by the curb, he got Alice out of the auto and into the hack only a moment before [illegible]

THEY DO NOT NEED TO FIGHT

They are not all fired with the new imperial war spirit in Australia. Replying recently to a deputation of Quakers who desired to secure exemption for their sons from the provisions of the Defence Act in regard to compulsory service, the Victorian Prime Minister said there were only two courses open to the Government. One was to leave Australia at the mercy of an enemy; the other to defend it. The voluntary system had failed, and the Government was forced to see the people were properly trained to protect their homes. The proposed training would be of physical benefit to the boys. It would render them fit to serve their country in case of necessity. The training need not mean that the young men would be compelled to fight in spite of religious scruples, but they would not be exempt from non-combatant service.

OILING THE ATLANTIC.

Proposed Plan to Smooth the Passage to Europe.

Pouring oil on the troubled waters will be much more than a metaphor if a plan offered by the United States hydrographic office is carried out. Its curious proposal is to keep the path between New York and the northern European ports well oiled so that the waves may be kept down and passengers may cross in perfect comfort.

The hydrographic office knows a lot about waves and claims that nothing is so bad for 'em as oil. Moreover, oil spreads quickly and thinly over the water, and hence the oiling can be done at small expense. A quart of cheap petroleum an hour for each ship would, they say, do the work in decent weather, and $25 per trip ought to cover it easily. With the big liners constantly passing the part carried away by the ocean currents would be restored without delay.

Maybe some day we shall have a wrecking crew to repair accidental washouts in the oil track. Meanwhile the hydrographic office will need more than crude oil to calm the storm of ridicule which this plan of theirs has awakened. Veteran sea captains claim that they have never yet seen an ocean that would hold still long enough to be oiled.—Success Magazine.

Arctic Magnetism.

The campaign for the extension of our knowledge of the magnetism of the earth is to be extended into the arctic regions during Captain Amundsen's north polar expedition, which is to start from Norway this summer in Nansen's former ship, the Fram. An American observer, Dr. Harry Edmonds, has been selected to accompany the expedition for this special purpose. Amundsen's plan is to enter the polar basin by way of Bering strait and then drift with the ice. While it is not his special object to attain the pole, he hopes that the course of the drift may take him across or close to it. The increase of geographical knowledge is his aim, and he expects to be absent about four years.—Youth's Companion.

The New Martian Canals.

In a recent bulletin issued by his observatory Percival Lowell describes his newly discovered Martian canals. These new canals are two in number and were discovered Sept. 30, 1909, to the east of the Syrtis Major, where no canal had ever previously been seen. They were most conspicuous. Not a trace of them could be found in the records of previous years. He regards the evidence as strong that the canals are not simply new to astronomers, but new to Mars. Measurement of their dimensions show each of them to be 1,000 miles long and some twenty miles wide. The Canyon of the Colorado would be a secondary affair in comparison.

King Solomon's Treasure.

In an effort to find King Solomon's treasure and the crown of David, a syndicate of Englishmen, led by the Earl of Moray's heir presumptive and a near relative of the Duke of Fife, are excavating at the pool of Siloam, on the western slope of Zion. Two members of the Turkish parliament are continually present, this being one of the conditions laid down by the authorities before permission to begin the excavation was given. Large sums of money were spent in obtaining the permit, in purchasing land and in carrying on the work. More than sixty men are engaged at a weekly expense of more than $4,000.

The Three Georges.

There are now three King Georges—George V. of Great Britain and Ireland, George I. of Greece and George II. of Tonga. The last named is now little more than a nominal sovereign, but he is still on the roll of reigning monarchs. Since the late Lord Salisbury's last international deal the Tongan archipelago in the Pacific has been a British protectorate. The Pacific King George is very fond of playing cricket.—Chicago News.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,[illegible] bushels, making a net capacity of 2,[illegible] bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 35,000 bushels each, and the star-shaped or interspace bins hold approximately 4,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of [illegible] bushels.

A Costly Bean.

The vanilla bean is said to be the costliest bean on earth. It's home is in Mexico, chiefly in Papantla and Misantla. It grows wild and is gathered solely by natives. Just as they come from the wilderness of forests the beans sell at $10 per 1,000. After they are dried and cured they are worth from $10 to $11 per pound, according to their quality. They are used extensively by druggists and confectioners and form quite an important Mexican product.

Woman's Reason.

Women have more of what is termed good sense than men. They cannot reason wrong, for they do not reason at all. They have fewer pretensions, are less implicated in theories and judge of objects more from their immediate and involuntary impression on the mind, and therefore more truly and naturally.—Hazlitt.

To Abolish Middlemen.

The city of Calgary is considering a method of the public storage of foods in order to prevent periods of shortage with consequent high prices. A consumers' league, which has been instrumental in maintaining a public market, is interesting itself in the proposition. A prepared statement of the cost of foodstuffs in Calgary shows an average for 1913 five per cent. lower than for 1905.

FIRST POSTAL TRAIN.

It Was Tried in 1864 and Proved a Thorough Success.

The first trial of a postal car service, in which mail matter is assorted while in transit, was made in 1864 on the Chicago and Northwestern railway. The scheme was a thorough success, and railway mail service was inaugurated that year on several of the important railway lines and was gradually extended all over the United States and adopted by other countries.

In 1874 the American railway mail system was thoroughly organized on a permanent basis, with eight territorial divisions, each in charge of a superintendent subordinate to a general chief at Washington.

This service was among the first to adopt a modern classified civil service, appointment of railway mail clerks having always been made for a probationary period, permanent employment being conditioned on satisfactory service and conduct and removal based on good cause only. The service has been gradually improved and new divisions organized and is now operated on practically every railway.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Thin Cutting.

When Irvin Cobb, the writer, was on the World he attended a ball game at the Polo grounds. The yard was packed. Just before the game Harry Stevens, who had the refreshment privilege, strolled by the press box and called out to a group of which Cobb was a member:

"Great crowd, eh, boys? I'll bet there's 5,000 more people here than they expected. I guess that means I'll have to go in and prepare about 4,000 more ham sandwiches."

"Well," remarked Cobb, "that will pretty nearly necessitate the cutting of another ham, won't it, Harry?"—Everybody's.

No Mourner Left.

"I ate a worm," said the little tot in the kindergarten.

The teacher, thinking that perhaps the child had really done such a thing, protested vaguely over the undesirability of the proceeding. "Why, just think," she said as a final argument, "how badly the mamma worm felt to have her little baby eaten up."

"I ate she's mamma, too," was the triumphant rejoinder that proved too much for the teacher.

A Generous Bequest.

One of the briefest and queerest wills on record is that of an old farmer who, though reputed to be rich, died penniless. His will ran: "In the name of God, amen. There's only one thing I leave—I leave the earth. My relations have always wanted that. They can have it."

The Hangman's Stone.

There is a large boulder lying in a field near Foremark, England, which is known throughout Derbyshire as the "hangman's stone." The exposed portion of the boulder rises about six feet above the surface of the surrounding field and has a narrow ditch or indentation running across the top. The mark, so tradition says, was made in this way: A sheep thief in the dead of night, while leaning against the boulder to rest, placed his booty above on the flat surface of the stone. The man had the sheep tied with a rope, and in an effort to escape the animal slipped on the opposite side, and the rope, catching under the thief's chin, choked him to death. The indentation in the rock was made by the friction of the rope while the dying man was engaged in an effort to extricate himself.

A Good Loser.

Arthur's, Almack's, Boodle's and White's were the chief clubs of the young men of fashion. There was play at all, and decayed noblemen and broken down senators fleeced the unwary there. Charles Fox, a dreadful gambler, lost £200,000 at play. Gibbon tells of his playing twenty-two hours at a sitting and losing £500 an hour. That indomitable punter said that the greatest pleasure in life after winning was losing. What hours, what nights, what health did he waste over the devil's books! I was going to say what peace of mind, but he took his losses very philosophically. After an awful night's play he was found on a sofa tranquilly reading an eclogue of Virgil.—From Thackeray's "The Four Georges."

[illegible]

A MAGIC CLUB.

Curious Decoy Used by the Native Fishermen of Hawaii.

"Leo makaudu" is the name of a decoy used by the native fishermen of Hawaii. It is made of the hardest wood to be found on the islands and is carved and rubbed till it assumes the shape of a club with a little knob at the smaller end, to which the line is tied.

The club is from one to three feet long. A village sorcerer performs certain rites over it over a sacred fire. After this is done the club is magic, and the fisherman must be extremely careful of it. If a woman should step over it or enter a canoe in which it lies the club would lose all its power and would be useless ever afterward.

Where Ears Grow Sharp.

A French balloonist has recorded the clearness with which sounds coming from the surface of the ground can be heard at a high altitude. At the height of 5,000 feet the ringing of horses' hoofs on a hard road was clearly audible. At 4,000 feet the splashing sound made by ducks in a pond was heard. The barking of dogs and the crowing of cocks could be heard at seven or eight thousand feet. These sounds penetrated through a white floor of cloud that hid the earth from sight, says Harper's Weekly. In the perfect silence of the air the investigator was startled by what seemed stealthy footsteps close at hand. It was ascertained that this noise was caused by the stretching of the ropes and the yielding of the silk as the balloon continued to expand.

Impossible.

Rae—What ridiculous, impossible things these fashion plates are! Mrs. Rae—I know they used to be, but today many of them are engraved from photographs. Rae—Well, this one can't be. Here are two women going in opposite directions, both with brand new gowns on and neither looking back at the other.—Boston Transcript.

Heading Off Polly.

"Why do you want to give your parrot away?"

"He uses such awful language."

"Who trained him?"

"Well—er—ah—you see"—

"Yes, I see. You want to give him away before he gives you away."—Cleveland Leader.

Walking In His Sleep.

"Does your husband ever walk in his sleep?" asked the preacher.

"Oh, I guess so," replied the man's wife innocently. "He got up and walked out of church Sunday while you were preaching."—Yonkers Statesman.

Under the old drill conditions, a loud voice was almost a necessary qualification for non-commissioned officers, and thereby arises a good story from one of the oldest volunteer corps.

A certain private whom we will call Blank was undergoing his course of instruction for a sergeant's certificate, and, although quick at [illegible] movements, he had a 4.7 inch voice and plenty of cheek, and he meant to get through somehow.

The day arrived for the practical examination, and Blank turned out with his comrades and took his turn.

"I want this squad taken from here and halted facing the north side of the drill hall," said the adjutant.

The movement was simple, but entirely beyond poor Blank; still, he hesitated not.

"Squad!" he yelled. "Hi, yah-y-y-[illegible] a-ho hip!"

"Great Scot!" said the adjutant, as the echoes died away in the distance. "I don't know what the dickens he said; but he's got a lovely voice, and I shall certainly pass him." And he did.

Cicero on Wit.

There are witty sayings which carry a concealed suspicion of ridicule, of which sort is that of the Sicilian who, when a friend of his made lamentation to him saying that his wife had hanged herself upon a fig tree, said, "I beseech you give me some shoots of that tree that I may plant them." Of the same sort is what Crassus said to a certain bad orator who, when he imagined that he had excited compassion at the close of a speech, asked our friend here after he had sat down whether he appeared to have raised pity in the audience. "Very great pity," replied Crassus, "for I believe that there is no one here so hard hearted but that your speech seemed pitiable to him."—Cicero's Oratory.

In the Shadow of Fame.

There are a number of former celebrities who are now running rooming and boarding houses in New York city. Many a singer, actress or writer who formerly held a place in the public eye has now settled down to the prosaic occupation of housing and feeding a small portion of that same public. Their houses are a magnet for young persons with the artistic temperament. One woman who once enjoyed a fair reputation as a violinist has five furnished apartments which she sublets room by room to aspirants for dramatic, operatic and literary honors. Reflected glory rather than physical comfort is the portion of most of these satellites, but the privilege of hobnobbing with yesterday's greatness compensates for material discomfort.—New York Press.

Ankle Bracelets.

A novel and startling fashion in women's jewelry has arrived in London from Paris. This consists in the wearing of a light anklet of plaited gold wire just above the left ankle. In some cases these "ankle bangles" are very ornate, jewels such as turquoise, coral or mother of pearl being worked in. Gold and copper with amber beads is popular, but in all cases the ornament is light and dainty. These queer [illegible] vary in cost from $5 to $50.

Leading the Leader.

A very small boy was trying to lead a big St. Bernard dog up the road.

"Where are you going to take the dog, my little man?" inquired a passerby.

"I—I'm going to see where—where he wants to go first," was the breathless reply.—Argonaut.

CITY AND DISTRICT

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

To Manufacture Ice

A well-known citizen who possesses an enterprising spirit, informed The Times on Saturday that he was collecting data with a view to establishing an artificial ice manufacturing plant. This would give the citizens ice made from pure spring water.

Scotch Vags Let Go.

At Saturday's police court three recently arrived Scotsmen were charged with vagrancy. They said they were on their way to Montreal. The cadi remarked, "Go to Montreal and if you linger in the city you will go to Toronto instead of Montreal."

The Century Club.

The recently organized Century Club, that has its headquarters in the Bank of Commerce Building, is progressing favorably. This club has for its aim the encouragement of high class literature, several well known local scribes being among its members.

Mrs. Henry's Brother Dead.

Mrs. W. Henry, of the Children's Shelter, has received a message to the effect that her brother, William [illegible], of Mariposa, had dropped dead at his home. No details of his death were given. Mrs. Henry left this morning for Mariposa.

Mr. Gillespie Caned.

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie has returned from Cornwall bringing with him a beautiful gold-headed ebony cane and travelling bag, presented by the directors of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association in recognition of his two years' services as president of the Association.

Newsboys in the Bars

A Kingston pastor has notified all the hotelkeepers there that they must not allow newsboys to peddle papers in the bars. Fortunately the newsboys of Peterborough do not invade the bars with their wares. About the only literature sold in the bars is the War Cry sold by the brave laddies of the Salvation Army.

Minden Boy's Promotion.

Lindsay Warder: Another one of Lindsay's popular young financiers, in the person of Mr. Bert Hartell, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, has been transferred from Lindsay to [illegible]. Mr. Hartell, who hails from Minden, Ont., has been in Lindsay for some time past, filling his duties with credit to himself and the bank, and also gained the confidence of a large number of friends in town, who regret to hear of his departure.

Drunk and Garrulous

On Saturday morning a local [illegible] went into a [illegible] of wet goods and remarked to the [illegible] "I want a glass of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] You will have to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a trust and guarantee [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a line of credit was established.

Kleptomaniac Let Go.

At Saturday's police Court, a woman who stole goods from the Woolworth store was up for sentence. Mr. [illegible], for the defence, [illegible] [illegible] she had suffered from typhoid fever which had affected her mind. He allowed her to go on suspended sentence.

Lakefield Man Hurt.

Lakefield News: On Tuesday last Mr. Richard [illegible] met with a bad accident. He was engaged in sawing wood with a sawing machine at Mr. Charles Tighe's residence in Douro, when his hand was drawn against the rapidly revolving saw, with the result that the end of the index finger of his right hand was cut off, and the flesh of the second finger torn off.

Lakefield-Peterborough Personal.

Lakefield News: Miss Florence Johnson of Peterborough, spent the week end the guest of Miss Myrtle Moore, Douro. Mrs. W. H. White of Peterborough, spent a few days in the village this week visiting relatives. Miss Helen Head of Peterborough spent a few days in the village last week, the guest of Miss Hazel Moode.

Port Hope's Mixed Population.

Port Hope must have a somewhat mixed population. It seems that in that town a Polack (or as the Port Hope Guide calls him, a "Pollock") was charged with stealing $[illegible] from a Galacian woman. The woman gave the Polack the money and they went to Walkerville and got married. She asked this former subject of the Czar for her money but it did not come. The Polack was committed for trial.

Mr. Pappas Referred to.

One incident connected with the recent trial of Mr. H. Clayton, manager of the local moving picture house, who was discharged after an accusation was laid of crowding the aisles, overlooked by the local press that might in justice be mentioned, was a tribute paid to Mr. N. Pappas of this city who formerly ran these places. Chief Thompson said that, whilst in control of these places, Mr. Pappas always conducted orderly and law observing methods.

Children's Aid Society Bettered.

Another chapter of the Giles theft case, was in evidence on Saturday. It will be remembered that David Johnston offered a reward of $25 for information of a valuable fur coat which was stolen by the Giles brothers. On Saturday the reward was paid to the Chief for Dr. Amys. The money will be paid to the doctor, who will give it to the Children's Aid Society.

Same Trouble at Lindsay

Lindsay Post: There was a busy session at the police court this morning. A resident of the North Ward made his debut in answer to a charge of cutting down a tree contrary to statute. The accused claimed he got permission from the Chairman of Board of Works to cut the tree, but such permission must come from the council. It will be remembered that a Water Street resident had difficulty in obtaining leave to cut down a tree that had cost him some $80 for damages done his sewer pipe.

Otonabee Raiser Won Prizes.

Mr. Frank Head, of Wallace Point, Otonabee, has returned from Belleville Poultry Show, which was held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week. Mr. Head entered seven birds in the Barred Rock class. He won first prize for the best cock and cockerel, second and third hen, second and third pullet, and also second for the exhibition pen. There were 80 Barred Rocks in the open class, and the prize list was limited to first, second and third prizes. Mr. Head won a cash prize of $3 for the best trio of Barred Rocks comprising a cockerel and two pullets.

Lindsay Bootlegger Fined

It does not pay to supply a bootlegger in Lindsay any more than it does to furnish liquor to a man on the prohibited list here. Twenty-eight dollars and seventy cents [illegible] fine and costs [illegible] upon a man at the police court in Lindsay for supplying one on [illegible] list with liquor. The accused was also placed amongst the boys who occupy seats on the water wagon as an additional incentive to keep him free from temptation. Both men are employes of a large factory.

Local Ladies at Havelock.

Havelock Standard: Mr. A. Walley of town was most pleasantly surprised on Friday, when two brothers he had not seen for over twenty years, Messrs. [illegible] and V. H. Walley of Flint, Mich., visited him. Three sisters, Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible] of Peterborough, and Mrs. Jas. [illegible] of Hastings, also arrived on the same day and the family re-union was made the occasion of many happy reminiscences.

Acceptance of Hockey Challenge.

The Oriental staff accepts the challenge of the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] at any old place in the Brock street rink, possibly the roof or the gallery, as the tonsorial artists will not be able to display the same [illegible] [illegible] cutting hockey ice as they do in the chair with sample(?) [illegible]. The shavers will be up against the same proposition [illegible] [illegible] as they are making hair grow on bald heads with [illegible]. We "Oo-r-ya" the Lawlessness [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. It has been said the [illegible] boys are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and shaving here [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a lather. Salts, Calomel and Pills act on liver and bowels like pepper acts in Nostrils—Danger!

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

PREMIER WHITNEY HAD RELAPSE BULLETIN INDICATES HE SPENT RESTLESS NIGHT; WEAKER TO-DAY

Change for the Worse This Morning Was Reflected in Attitude of Sir James' Party in Manhattan Hotel—Experts Had Long Consultation

New York, Jan. 13.—Sir James Whitney was still dangerously ill early this afternoon. There was no indication of recovery. A terrific storm of wind and snow was held to have a bad effect on the sufferer.

New York, Jan. 12.—A change for the worse this morning was indicated by the bulletin issued at the Manhattan Hotel in regard to the condition of Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario.

For nearly a week his doctors had daily reported little change, but at 11.30 to-day, after an examination of their patient, Dr. R. A. Pyne and Dr. Hermann Biggs, of New York, were compelled to state that the Premier's condition was "less favorable," and that he had spent a poor night.

The change was immediately reflected in the attitude of Sir James' party, which under the favorable bulletins that had been issued, had been able to relax a little their watchfulness. The anxious and worried look came back to the faces of Dr. Pyne and Mr. Horace Wallis, the Premier's secretary. It was decided that one or the other must remain within call of the sick room until the relapse was over.

To-day's 11.30 bulletin said: "Sir James Whitney had a poor night, and his condition this morning was less favorable."

Advise Him to Avoid Politics.

An earlier Canadian despatch said to-day:

New York, Jan. 12.—If Sir James Whitney, who is lying seriously ill at the Manhattan Hotel from the effects of heart trouble, will take the advice of many of his friends, among them members of the medical profession, he will decide not to enter politics again when he recovers from his present prostration, as his party here are hopeful that he will. This advice has been communicated to Sir James, who has so far made no promises.

OTTAWA AGLITTER FOR HOUSE OPENING WESTERNERS THERE

It is Officially Announced H. R. H. The Dutchess Will Not be Present

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—The advance guard of the members have already reached Ottawa and the deserted Parliament Buildings [illegible] were alive with activity. As usual Western members were the first on the ground. Dr. Warnock, M.P., for Medicine Hat and Mr. George H. Bradbury, of Selkirk, were the first arrivals. Dr. Chisholm, of Inverness, is already here and Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P., for East Hastings has arrived in the city. Every train is bringing in fresh arrivals and by Thursday, when H. R. H. Governor-General opens the House, it is not likely there will be many missing [illegible].

Opening to Be Brilliant.

[illegible] promise to be [illegible] brilliant. Social leaders from all parts of Canada have made reservations at the hotels. Among those who will be present [illegible] be two Lieutenant-Governors, Donald Cameron, of Manitoba, and Hon. Josiah Wood, of New Brunswick. Following the opening there will be State banquet at Rideau Hall which marks the inauguration of the social season at Ottawa. [illegible] night there will be the [illegible] at the Parliament [illegible] will be of an exceptionally brilliant character. The only damper on the proceedings will be the absence of H.R.H. the Duchess of Connaught. It is officially announced that she will not be able to be present at the opening ceremonies on Thursday or the Drawing Room on Saturday. The bulk of the social activities thus will fall on H. R.H. Princess Patricia.

The Landlady's Reply

The following conversation recently took place between a well-known comedian and his somewhat stern landlady:

Landlady—Good morning, sir, how do you find the coffee this morning.

Comedian—I have named this coffee November, my dear madam.

Landlady—Indeed, sir! And might I venture so much as to beg to inquire the reason for such a trite appellation?

Comedian—Oh, just because it is so cold and cloudy.

Landlady—You are a brilliant man; no wonder you make your audiences roar. I thought of naming it after you.

Comedian—I solicit information.

Landlady—Because it is so long before it settles.

At present the landlady is thinking seriously of appearing before the footlights herself.

LOCAL BARBERS BANQUET WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Last night the local barbers held their second annual banquet, this time in the Oriental dining room. There were about 35 of the tonsorial artists and their friends present.

The barbers certainly know how to do things. There are cranks who say that barbers throw in a certain amount of hot air whilst shaving or making a well thatched man look like a candidate for a Kingston Penitentiary commission inquisitor. This is a blankity-blank canard. There is no harder working, more respected, more intelligent looking and better conducted class than the Peterborough barbers.

After the well served menu, provided by "mine host" Tommy McDonough, was discussed, bright speeches, songs and instrumental music were the order of the night.

Mr. Geo. Campbell was chairman.

A piano had been introduced at which Prof. Woodburn presided.

The musical part of the program began with God Save the King.

Mr. John Smith, then gave a vocal selection in splendid baritone voice, which met with an insistent encore.

Bro. Gainey replied to the toast of the International Barbers' Union. There are about $80,000 spent annually in benefits. The local union is very strong.

Mr. Dan Shook spoke in behalf of the ladies.

Mr. Tom McDonough hoped that the Oriental Hotel had pleased the guests. He appreciated the fine class of guests present.

The Alderman gave a very effective speech regarding 10 o'clock closing.

The banquet closed with God Save the King.

ST. JOHNS ATHLETIC CLUB HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Last evening St. John's Athletic Club held their annual meeting in the school house at 8.30 p.m. In the absence of the president, Mr. A. Kingdon took the chair, with a good attendance of members.

The secretary read the minutes and also the financial statement which showed a balance of $7.20.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

J. H. Burnham, M.P., patron.
Hon. Pres.—Rev. Canon Davidson.
President—C. Graham, re-elected.
1st Vice-Pres.—C. Throope.
2nd Vice-Pres.—A. White.
Sec.-Treas.—W. T. Ward, re-elected.
Branch Officers—Football Captain A. V. Dallin; Harrier Captain, C. Throope, re-elected. The other branch officers to be elected later on.

Mr. A. Theobald gave an admirable speech, thanking the past officers for their services, proposing that the secretary write a letter of appreciation to W. Packwood (past secretary) for his services.—Carried.

Patronage Committee (to interest church members and others in the work of the club)—A. Kingdon, W. T. Ward, E. Tucker.

Working Committee—A. Kingdon, A. Theobald, D. Eldred.

The following committee was appointed to promote a concert to be held the latter end of February or beginning of March: A. White, A. V. Dallin, D. Eldred.

A suggestion was favorably received if sufficient funds were obtained to have a war canoe.

A toboggan party will be held on Tuesday, January 20th at Jackson Park, at 8 o'clock. All members invited.

Meeting adjourned at 10.30 o'clock till the first Tuesday in February.

FAIL TO SETTLE THE IRISH AFFAIR

London, Jan. 12.—Hope has been abandoned here of any settlement of the Irish question by consent before Parliament meets. Mr. Asquith's offer made during the past few days to Mr. Bonar Law was on Sir Edward Grey's proposal, namely: Practical autonomy for the Protestant area of Ulster and a guarantee against every sort of material aggression. Mr. Bonar Law was unable to accept anything less than exclusion of Ulster from the Bill. Mr. Asquith, voicing Nationalist and Radical sentiment, said: "We refuse Home Rule on such terms. We shall wait."

The two favorite battle cries with which the parties will meet at Westminster are: Ireland one and indivisible, and Ulsters exclusion is pending.

ONE OF CANADA'S BEST SOURCES OF GOOD FLOUR

Once more the old Canadian favorite dispensary of some of the best flour produced in the world, that of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Ltd., of Montreal, looms up. In another column of this issue appears a big advertisement of this, one of the bulwarks of the world's source of the "staff of life." This great company owns mills that have a capacity of 19,000 barrels of flour a day and the ability to turn out flour that puts many guessing as to the source of its acknowledged merit. The company's assets are of the highest order, in fact as good as the acknowledged product of their mills.

Important reductions in express rates have been ordered by the Dominion Railway Board.

PETERBOROUGH CITY COUNCIL HOLDS INAUGURAL MEETING

Mayor Buller Delivers His First Address—Committees for 1914 Nominated

Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, Mayor Buller, Mayor-elect and the new councillors for 1914, made an initial bow to their respective constituents and a few others.

Mayor Buller occupied the chair.

MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

Here the Mayor gave his inaugural address as follows:

Gentlemen:—Permit me to welcome you to your duties as members of of this City Council for this year, and especially the members new to these duties, Aldermen Saunders and Stratton. I congratulate those member who, having sought re-election, were so heartily endorsed by the ratepayers and returned by such handsome majorities.

The duties of the Council of a City of this size are always important but this year we will have to attend to work of special importance, and I am sure that we will all give our best attention and our best judgment to the subjects that will come before us.

Works for the disposal of the sewage of the city will have to be constructed. The plans for these were partly prepared last year, and it will be necessary to have them completed as early as possible and passed upon and forwarded to the Provincial authorities for their approval, so that the work may be proceeded with promptly. Great care will need to be exercised, both to construct a system that will be efficient and adequate and to keep the expenditure down to as low a figure as can be done and accomplish the necessary results.

The Hydro-Electric scheme for the city, must be carried forward to completion with the co-operation of the Hydro-Electric Commission. An application made to the County Judge for an order for possession of the Peterborough Light & Power Co.'s plant has not been decided, and the fact brought out in the proceedings that the Peterborough Light & Power Co. had purchased the Auburn Power Co.'s dam and power house after the City's legislation had been dealt with will need attention. Hydro-Electric power for light and power purposes must be obtained by the City as soon as possible and the remaining action for this purpose taken.

The street paving contract let last year was not completed when weather conditions stopped the work for the season, and the work contracted for will be completed. It will be well at the same time to consider whether further work of this character should be undertaken this year and what streets should next be paved.

Steps should be taken to secure extensions of the street railway. The ratepayers having decided that a bridge should not be built at Dalhousie street at this time a belt line across the river at that point cannot be constructed now but other belts or extensions would be useful for the people and should be feasible for the company. This question might be taken up by the Railway Committee.

There are sections of the City that should have waterworks that are now without the service, and the Council will, no doubt, be ready and willing to co-operate with the Water Commissioners so far as we can to secure needed extensions of the mains.

The assessment being the foundation for the collection of the bulk of the revenue of the City, including the moneys of the Board of Education and other bodies, is one of general interest and importance. Permit me to ask you to have immediate attention given to the question of the publication of the assessment roll. It seems to me that it should be feasible and not too extensive to have it published and if so its publication will meet with general approval.

Sanitation is a subject of great importance, and while it is one that comes largely under the jurisdiction of the Board of Health, the Council can assist in the work of securing cleanliness and pure food and other supplies, and arrangements might be made with the hospitals or the City Health Department for a free medical dispensary sufficiently organized to be of service to the people who need it and would be benefited by it. In this connection the system of garbage collection will need further consideration. There will need to be a decision as to whether the area from which the collection is made will be extended, and a change made in the law at the last session of the Legislature necessitates a revision of the method of collecting the revenue to pay the expense.

Moral conditions may not have been considered the primary interest of a municipal Council, but prevention is better than cure, and while policemen are rightly employed for the protection of the citizens, it will be our duty to take any steps we can that will conduce to the moral welfare of the City, especially in shielding and guiding those young in years.

The Building By-law should receive attention with a view to revision and

What Is It?

The usual cup of tea or coffee contains from 1½ to 3 grains of caffeine, a drug which often produces aches, ails and distress, and the habit can be quickly overcome by using well-made Postum.

One of the most pleasing features of this change from tea and coffee to Postum [illegible] absence of a sense of [illegible].

But more important is that "good all over" feeling of returning health; and it's the finest trade possible to quit tea and coffee and get well.

Postum, made of prime wheat and a small per cent of New Orleans molasses, is a pure food-drink. It is wholesome and nourishing; and has a delicious, snappy flavour, but is entirely free from the drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee.

Anyone can make a trade for the old fashioned fun that comes with health and the power to "do things." Suppose you try it?

"There's a Reason" for POSTUM

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled 15 to 20 minutes.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water dissolves instantly.

The convenience of Instant Postum is apparent, but, when prepared according to directions, both kinds are nearly the same. The cost per cup is about equal.

—Grocers everywhere sell both kinds.

WANDERLUST.

[illegible]

—Theodore R. [illegible] in New York Times.

Senator Root, former secretary of state, is given to writing little personal notes to friends when he is [illegible] of the tedium of any formal body of which he is a member. When he was at The Hague last summer as attorney in the fisheries arbitration he passed many of these missives to his associate, Samuel J. Elder of Boston, such as, "Sam, keep an eye on the clock."

There is a certain western senator who talks so much that he wearies the senate to a frazzle. One day that session this senator was making his sixth or seventh speech of the afternoon. Senator Root became absorbed in conversation with the late Senator Clay of Georgia. It was such an audible conversation as to be strictly against the rules. Vice President Sherman rapped sternly for order and at last caught Senator Root's eye, whereupon the conversation ceased.

A few minutes later a page handed a note up to the vice president's desk. It was from Senator Root and read: "If the vice president wishes me simply to be in order I will obey, but if he wishes me to listen to that speech of Senator Blank he may go to—a hotter place than Washington."—Washington Letter to Boston Herald.

The Use of Antitoxin.

The American Medicine, strongly urging a more general use of diphtheria antitoxin, says that "the time is close at hand when failure to use antitoxin will impose criminal as well as civil responsibility." It adds that [illegible] "France has led the way," says this medical authority, "and with its mortality rate the lowest of all the civilized countries of the world takes unquestionable leadership among progressive nations. Her success, however, serves to put all the other countries to shame. If France can achieve such a distinctive triumph over one of humanity's dread diseases other countries can do likewise."

The Northwest Passage.

The search for the northwest passage began almost immediately after the discovery of America. In 1583 a company was formed in London for the purpose of discovering such a passage, and from that time on for more than three centuries the quest was kept up. For many years the British parliament had a standing reward of $100,000 for the one who should succeed in finding a way around North America into the Pacific. It was only yesterday, as it were, that the work was completely done by A. Amundsen, who in 1906 succeeded in sailing through every foot of the long sought passage.—New York American.

A lady, whose husband had temporarily lost his voice, loyally appeared to make a speech on his behalf. She said a good deal of the [illegible] and then plunged into politics. Having speedily exhausted that theme, she [illegible] to her husband's health and described not only his disappointment at being unable to address them, but her own efforts to patch him up for the fray. She had tried her fomentations, she had tried poultices, she had made him gargle his throat, she had steamed his throat for him, she had sprayed his throat and made him try every kind of lozenge. "Was there anything else she could do for his throat?" And a voice said, "Aye, mum, cut it."—Tit-Bits.

Zena Dare's First Appearance.

This popular young actress, who is engaged to the second son of Lord Esher, confessed to the writer a short time ago that, like her sister Phyllis, she suffers greatly from stage fright, and that before her first appearance as a leading lady in "The Catch of the Season" at the Vaudeville, London, in 1904 she was literally petrified with fright. "First I grew hot as the hour of my debut approached. Then I grew cold. My knees shook and my teeth chattered. Then I became hot again. In fact, altogether I must have experienced every variation of temperature between zero and 100 degrees in the shade. I am perfectly certain that no criminal sentenced to death ever experienced such mental torture as I did on my first appearance in London."

Swimming for Actors.

Perhaps the most amusing of the stories in the Era Annual is the following, narrated by Mr. Edward Terry: "Some years ago, when playing at Leeds, I started a swimming competition among the members of my company, and, to encourage them, offered as a prize a silver loving cup (won, by the way, by the late Edward Lennox). The event apparently created some interest in the town, and a friend heard two men engaged in a discussion as follows: First Man: 'I say, dust to know this 'ere Terry's given a cup to 'is' swimmin' company?' Second Man: 'Aye. What's that for?' First Man: 'Oh, I suppose it's to keep them play-actors clean!'"

Pat's Retort.

A cork-legged Welsh orator named Jones was pretty successful in bantering an Irishman, when the latter asked him:

"How did you come to lose your leg?"

"Well," said Jones, "on examining my pedigree and looking up my descent I found there was some Irish blood in me and, becoming convinced that it was settled in the left leg, I had it cut off at once."

"By the powers," said Pat, "it would have been a very good thing if it had only settled in your head."

Paper machine belting, protected on the edges by leather, is being tried out in England with a measure of success. One advantage claimed for it is that it does not stretch.

Our Point of View

It seems that they begin joy riding quite early in life in Cincinnati, where an ordinance has been adopted requiring lamps on baby carriages.

—o—

A real estate company is advertising the advantages of Kissimmee, Fla., as a winter resort. The place should make a strong appeal to the newlyweds.

—o—

It has been suggested that the students of Queen's University, Kingston are to present the book of Job as a drama. If they do the audience will have to have the patience of Job to sit through the performance.

—o—

The sight of faded Christmas trees and the polished skeletons of turkeys in the garbage cans reminds us that the holiday pleasures are over and we must turn our attention to the serious affairs of life. Taking up again the white man's burden, so to speak.

SPORTS FOR THE MIDDLE AGED

Hon. W. T. White, in a recent speech before a commercial organization, suggested that provision should be made of free recreation grounds for the business man, the middle aged man who is now left to his own resources for exercise.

"I am not sure," said Hon. Mr. White, "that it would not be more valuable for nations to subsidize golf grounds than railways. I suggest golf at a modal recreation—play more, sleep more, eat less, drink less, if you like. I think more men kill themselves over-eating than over-drinking. It's literally true that a great number of our population dig their own graves with their teeth. If they would play more, eat less and sleep more, I think we would be able to achieve longevity in those who have achieved middle age."

Mr. White laid his finger upon a weakness in our scheme of things in Peterborough. We have our baseball grounds, provided [illegible] grounds for football, lacrosse and soccer, all provided free. But we have made little provision for lawn bowling, golf, cricket or any other games the men of middle age can enjoy and benefit from. It should not be necessary for men to belong to expensive clubs to receive this recreation. Recreation grounds and facilities should be provided as freely for them as for the games in which only young men can take part.

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment

"SUFFERERS FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. O. A. Tooker, of Monson, Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my druggist. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years indeed, with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed; smaller size 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

RE INSURANCE ON CITY'S BUILDINGS

Editor Morning Times,

Dear Sir,—Kindly inform your readers who carries the insurance on the Fire Hall, Public Library, Protestant Home, Isolated Hospital and Normal School. I understand all the insurance is carried by companies represented by Mr. T. E. Bradburn. How is it that this has escaped the notice of such an astute observer as Alderman Gordon, the reputed brainy member of the City Council? Who receives the insurance on the Hydro-Electric equipment?

Trusting you will give yours truly this information.

Insurance Agent.

THE POWER QUESTION.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I notice that Mayor Buller in his inaugural address to the Council, says that "the Hydro-Electric scheme must be carried forward to completion with the co-operation of the Hydro-Electric Commission." If he means that the city is to purchase the power required, well and good, but if he means that we are to expropriate the property of the Seymour Power Co., at a cost of half a million or so, then I can tell him that the ratepayers will refuse to provide the money.

Perhaps Mr. Buller will explain exactly what he means.

Freeholder.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

Petitions will be circulated in Brantford asking for a commutation of the death sentence on Wm. Taylor on the ground of insanity.

Come back to Erin, Mavourneen, Mavourneen,
And it's Killarney shall ring with our mirth.

Over the great sea, Mavourneen, Mavourneen,
Long shone the white sail that bore thee away,
Ridin' the white waves that fair summer morning
Just like a May flower afloat on the bay.
Oh, but my heart sank when clouds came between us,
Like a grey curtain of rain fallin' down,
Hid from my sad eyes the path o'er the ocean,
Far, far away where my colleen had flown.

Oh, may the angels, while waking or sleeping,
Watch o'er my bird in the land far away,
And it's my prayers will consign to their keeping
Care o' my jewel by night and by day.
When by the fireside I watch the bright embers,
Then all my heart flies away o'er the sea,
Cravin' to know if my darlin' remembers,
Or if her thoughts may be crossin' to me.

Peps What are they?

Peps is the name bestowed upon a new scientific preparation put up into tabloid or pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds and lung and throat troubles.

Did it never occur to you as peculiar that when you have a cough or a cold, or any chest trouble, you should apply medicine—not to your lungs, but to your stomach?

Look at it the other way round. Suppose you suffered from some stomach complaint—indigestion or ulceration. How strange you would think it if you were asked to take a medicine which had to be breathed in, and which went—not to your stomach, but to your lungs and breathing passages!

Peps—this novel remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles—go to the lungs and breathing tubes, direct. Peps are really pine fumes, and certain highly beneficial medicinal extracts specially prepared by a new scientific process and then condensed into tabloid form. It is like making a breathable gas solid!

You put a "Pep" on your tongue and let it dissolve. As it does so, the healing essences it contains turn into vapor, and you BREATHE them direct to your lungs and air passages!

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breathing" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peps" treatment for colds and chest troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Peps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, [illegible] [illegible], etc. Best for children, because free from opium, morphine, or any poison.

All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25.

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,900 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,200,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,196,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,924
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1908 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in due course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $8,[illegible],737.[illegible]. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephoned at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

ed to make progress on the new outfall sewer work as early as possible, so as to make work for the unemployed.

Ald. Duncan here expressed his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him in his appointment as Chairman of the Board of Works, which position he would endeavor to fill in the interests of the city as a whole. He did not expect as heavy an appropriation this year as that of last, and hoped for the co-operation of the whole Council in meeting the demands of each ward in the way of street improvements, etc., as far as possible with the funds at his Board's disposal. He would strain every nerve to secure an early start on the new outfall sewer to relieve the present labor depression.

further provision should be made for the protection of the public using the sidewalks where buildings are being erected.

The high cost of living has been brought home to everyone, and I wish to ask you to consider carefully how [illegible] regulations may be wisely amended to encourage lower prices of articles for food.

It has for many years been the policy of the Council to secure manufacturing industries of a substantial character, and we will continue to work together in that matter. If we are fortunate in securing new industries this year we should try to arrange, among the other conditions, that at times when men have to be laid off the preference will be given to men with families by retaining them at work.

It has been suggested that, especially as the Water Commissioners will have new duties, it would be well to have provision made so that the Mayor be a member of that Board. This would secure a closer touch between the Water Commissioners and the Council, and if you think it would be of any advantage to the City legislation to this end can be asked for.

It may seem that I have outlined a fairly heavy programme, especially as other important matters will no doubt come up to be dealt with, and the general work must be carried on, but I have done so with confidence, knowing that you will give serious consideration to any subject introduced with a view to benefiting the City and will take such action as you believe will advance the interest of the ratepayers.

It is the interests of the city we wish to serve and I am confident that we will work together in harmony for that purpose.

And a Bargain at That.

A little boy had got into the habit of saying "darn," of which his mother naturally did not approve.

"Dear," she said to the little boy, "here is 10 cents. It is yours if you will promise me not to say 'darn' again."

As he lovingly fingered the money a hopeful look came into his eyes and he said, "Say, mother, I know a word that's worth 50 cents."—Ladies' Home Journal.

"What I like about you, dear," said George in a sentimental tone of voice, "is that you're just yourself."

40,000 PEOPLE

Came to Live in Toronto Last Year

It Requires Nearly 10,000 New Homes to Properly Shelter the Tremendous Annual Influx of Population

The biggest problem to-day that Toronto has to face is how to supply its tens of thousands of homeseekers with suitable houses and building property.

Toronto has a population of 22 to the acre, this means that each year it requires from 1400 to 2000 additional acres to provide building sites for the natural increase of population.

A city on the American Continent is considered in healthy condition when it has not more than 5% of vacant houses. According to the report of the Toronto Police census, Toronto has over 90,000 houses—therefore it should have 5,000 vacant houses, but Toronto's increase in population is so tremendous that it is conservatively estimated that there are not more than 250 vacant houses to-day.

Dr. Hastings, the Toronto Medical Health Officer, states that the city is in need at the present time of 20,000 new houses.

With all builders active, they cannot keep up with the demand. A house is hardly half finished before it is sold.

Toronto has reached a period of expansion where small real estate holders are making fortunes.

Farm-lands that surrounded Toronto a few years ago are now solidly built-up sections of the present city.

Toronto has a world-wide reputation as a city of homes. As a rule the Toronto man's greatest ambition is to own a house of his own, and his first investment is in a house or homesite property.

It is principally this fact that makes Toronto real estate such a reliable investment.

TORONTO

Will Reach the Half Million Mark by End of Year

Toronto's population is just touching the half million mark. It has doubled in ten years, and it requires no stretch of the imagination to foresee a million population in 1923, if not sooner.

The same influences that have made the United States what it is today and built up the mighty cities of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago are now at work making Canada one of the greatest nations in the world. The 19th Century belonged to the United States, the 20th Century is Canada's. Immigration is coming into the Dominion from all parts of the earth and the best of that immigration—the English speaking new comers—are mostly settling in the cities; and Toronto is getting the cream of them all.

TORONTO REAL ESTATE OFFERS THE SAFEST—SANEST—MOST PROFITABLE INVESTMENT IN CANADA TODAY

Toronto's increase in assessment this past year shows the rapid growth of its land values. One hundred million dollars is to be spent shortly on the development of Greater Toronto. $25,000,000 in making the harbor one of the finest on this continent, $12,000,000 on the Esplanade viaduct, $4,000,000 on the new Union Depot and railway improvements, $4,000,000 on Drainage of North Toronto, $50,000,000 by the C.P.R. and G.T.R. on line extensions and additional shunting facilities.

The building permits alone for six months amounted to the immense sum of $15,000,000.

The time to purchase Toronto real estate is now while these developments are going on, for when they are completed, the land values in the city will have reached the highest point in the history of Toronto and substantial profits can be reaped by those who had the wisdom to invest early.

WE ARE THE LARGEST REAL ESTATE FIRM IN THE DOMINION

The Dovercourt Land, Building and Savings Company, Limited, has its finger on the pulse of Toronto. It has studied the growth of Toronto for years—it has foreseen the time when the city's expansion would cause land values to rise quickly to their normal level.

We have opened up subdivision after subdivision, developed them and built them up. Every foot of land we have sold to our clients has advanced in price, making them handsome profits. We do not abandon our clients after we sell to them. We develop their land—make it more valuable and resell it for them when it has advanced in price. We spend immense sums in improvements—for instance, we are spending $50,000 on the development of our latest subdivision, Strathgowan, making it one of the most beautiful residence properties in Toronto. We are owners—not agents. We are land developers—not speculators. We always buy in the line of growth where the rise in land values is immediate and certain. Our clients who take our advice are never disappointed.

They profit by our knowledge of realty conditions—by our ability to spend large sums of money in purchasing and developing raw land—by our ability to resell at a profit the land they purchase from us.

A RACE FOR FAME.

How Robert Barr Managed to Get a Book to a Friend.

Robert Barr, the novelist, was one day at Euston station, London, to say goodby to Dr. McKenzie of [illegible], who was taking the steamer train for Liverpool, thence to sail for the United States. As they walked up and down the long platform together, says a writer who tells the story in London, Dr. McKenzie said jocosely:

"Let us go to the bookstall and see if any of your immortal works are there. If they are I'll buy one to take across with me. If they are not I'll tell all your friends on the other side that your supposed British reputation is a sham."

The two walked to the bookstall and examined it carefully, but nothing with the name of Barr was found.

The novelist was annoyed and would have entered a protest, but the doctor claimed that that was against the rules of the game. Time was short, and Dr. McKenzie took his place in the train. Mr. Barr bade him goodby and then made direct for the bookstall to give the dealer a piece of his mind, but as he glanced casually at the array of books in the most prominent place he saw a row of one of his novels.

The whistle had sounded. The train was in motion. There was no time for paying anything, so Mr. Barr grabbed his book and ran like mad up the long platform. The energetic railway officials thought he was a belated passenger and determined to throw him into the train. Doors in the moving carriages were flung open, and officials yelled frantically, "Jump in anywhere!"

It took great agility, but Mr. Barr succeeded. Dr. McKenzie was leaning out of his window, thinking from the outcry that some one had been killed, when Mr. Barr came alongside and said politely, if breathlessly, "Mac, allow me to present you with a token of esteem."

Panting, but triumphant, Mr. Barr strolled back to the bookstall.

"Didn't some one steal a book from you a moment ago?" he asked.

"Yes," said the indignant stallkeeper, "and he's bolted off to America with it!"

"Why don't you telegraph a description of him to Liverpool? It will be found before the train is there," suggested Mr. Barr sympathetically.

"Description! I didn't see anything but his back and his legs."

"Oh, well, let it go!" said Mr. Barr airily. "It was a good book, for I wrote it myself, so I'll pay for it." And he laid down the money.

An Unreasonable Friend.

Several young artists in Philadelphia are telling a story on another wielder of the brush who is a fellow member in a little club. One of the rules of the club is that each member must keep his finished paintings up to a certain number. The artist of whom the story is told is noted for his indolence. He keeps up to the requirement regarding the number, but never exceeds it. But for his distaste for work the artist probably would be very comfortably fixed financially, as he has considerable talent. As a matter of fact, he is usually on the edge of penury. Several days ago, when his exchequer was unusually low, a friend visited him in his studio. The friend looked at several of the paintings, while the artist lay on a couch, smoking a pipe.

"I like this," the friend finally said, pointing to one of them. He named a good price which he was willing to pay. The artist looked at him dismally.

"Aw, don't do that," he said. "If you do I'll have to paint another."—Philadelphia Times.

The "Silent Admiral."

For the first time in his life Sir Arthur K. Wilson, First Sea Lord and chief expert adviser to the Admiralty, has entered into the public controversy regarding the strength of the navy. A man who prefers deeds to words, "Tug" Wilson, as he is popularly known in the service, is [illegible] as being without equal as a strategist and tactician. He is one of the very few naval officers who have earned the coveted V.C. This was at the Battle of El Teb in 1884, when the Arabs broke the square formed by the Naval Brigade, and he sprang into the breach and engaged the enemy with his bare fists, having broken his sword. Sir Redvers Buller described the act as "one of the most courageous he had ever witnessed." Sir Arthur is known in the navy as "the man who never takes a holiday," for he rarely goes ashore, even when his fleet or flagship visits any port. He regards every moment spent away from his [illegible] as wasted.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of [illegible] what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was [illegible] bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,570,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,1[illegible] bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and [illegible] feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 30,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 4,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

TOURISTS IN JAPAN.

Troubles of Those Ignorant of the Language and Native Ways.

All Japanese inns, of course, charge a great deal more to the globe trotting European tourist who does not speak the language, since he or she is not content to travel strictly à la Japonaise and worries the entire household with a variety of strange demands—extra quilts to sleep on because they find the floor hard, an improvised pillow, special food (the ordinary guest takes what is given him and at the hour that his host chooses), [illegible], knives, forks and spoons because he has neglected to practise eating his food with chopsticks, a bath with fresh water in it because he will not follow the custom of entering the bath as soon as he arrives, thus getting the opportunity of first bath and the water while it is fresh, and half a dozen other requirements. He reserves his [illegible] until he leaves, and after the [illegible]

AT THE AUCTION.

Man Who Knocks Down Is Always Good Natured.

Great day. Folks have come from miles around because it is not only a sale, but a social event. On a platform in front of the barn stands the auctioneer, a merry, fat, white whiskered importation from Gilesburg, twenty-four miles away.

Auctioneer—Now, my good people, I have here in my hands a half a sack of—(aside) what is this, George? (to the multitude)—a half sack of boots. We have got a lot of dead beats up our way (loud laughter), but these are live boots. Who wants 'em? Who'll give me a bid?

Reuben Yap—Five cents!

Auctioneer—Five cents. Thank you. You ain't going to bust yourself on this, are you? (Laughter.) I'm offered 5 cents for this sack of boots. Who'll give me ten?

Old Man Hawkins (squeaking)—Ten cents!

Auctioneer—Thank you, uncle. I'm offered 10 cents for this bag of boots. And they are not dead beats either. (General snicker.) Who'll give me fifteen? Fifteen?

Mrs. Dobbins is about to bid fifteen, but doesn't decide quick enough, and the words are taken out of her mouth by Bill Hoover, who says loudly, "I'll give ye 15 cents!"

Auctioneer—Fifteen cents for a sack of boots and all live ones! Who'll make it twenty?

O. M. H.—Twenty!

Auctioneer—Twenty! Make it twenty-five?

R. Y.—Twenty-five!

Auctioneer (very much excited)—Twenty-five! Make it thirty!

O. M. H. (still more excited)—Thirty!

Auctioneer (after the usual agony)—Sold to this gentleman for 30 cents. All good, aren't they, uncle?

O. M. H. (opening bag)—Them ain't boots; them's carpets.

Auctioneer—So they are, uncle, so they are. Carpets are better than dead beats, ain't they? (General titter of approval. He proceeds to the next article and the next joke.)—E. L. Leigh in Puck.

MANYUEMA CANNIBALS.

African Savages That Grind Their Teeth to Sharp Points.

The most terrible species of cannibals living are the cruel, bloodthirsty Manyuema of Tanganyika, in central Africa. Living to the west of Tanganyika, these cannibals, clothed in primitive fashion with a piece of bark cloth rudely hammered out from a neighboring tree, have an appetite for human flesh which is well nigh incredible.

They consider the most fiendish cunning in tracking down their quarry, choosing fat, well covered people in preference to those who are lean and lanky. Their favorite practice is to waylay their victims at eventide so that they may have before them a long night in which to effectually dispose of their prey by cutting it up into strips and drying it over a low fire in the woods. These dried strips of human flesh are carefully preserved for future use, and on two occasions these gruesome forest food depots were discovered and their owners killed by the Wafipa people, who inhabit east Tanganyika.

Most of these cannibals file their teeth to sharp points so as to enable them more easily to tear the flesh from the bone when they have to eat their abominable meal in a hurry.—Wide World Magazine.

A Fiasco.

The phrase "a complete fiasco" originated with a German workman, who declared that he could blow glass as well as an expert glassworker. A friend laid a wager with him to the contrary, and when the test came off the would-be glassblower found that he could produce only a poor shaped flask (fiasco). Nothing daunted, he tried again, but with the same result. The story of the workman became known, and [illegible] is used [illegible].

A Pair of Impossibles.

[illegible]

CONQUERING THE AIR.

The Chemist Is In the Battle as Well as the Aviator.

The conquest of the air is being made by the chemist as well as by the aeronaut. The advantage is with the chemist, who not only supplies the aeronaut with needful things, such as the bag and the gas, the frame of the heavier than air machine, the motor and the gasoline, but with remarkable success has also made an independent study of the air.

It is pleasant to have our theories verified. When air was liquefied and solidified, as the theory of heat predicted it would be, there was intense satisfaction in scientific circles. The first great expectations of what liquid air might do were not realized, but important uses for it are being found.

Since its constituents have different boiling points they can be separated from one another by the same methods of distillation that are employed to separate alcohol from water. Thus is obtained nitrogen, from which is manufactured a fertilizer essential to the growth of wheat, known as nitrolime or calcium cyanamide. This is prepared by passing nitrogen over heated calcium carbide.

The oxygen separated in the distillation process is not wasted, but is used, for instance, in the oxyacetylene blowpipe, the flame temperature of which is nearly equal to that of the electric arc.

The blowpipe is employed to make large rubies by melting small ones together, to weld iron and steel, to cut steel beams any desired length and to cut portholes in the sides of battleships and to do the latter so rapidly as to displace the older mechanical methods.

THE SARGASSO SEA.

If You See It Lying Around Loose Notify the Geographers.

If any one has seen anything of the Sargasso sea he will confer a great favor upon the geographers by reporting his discovery, says a writer in Success Magazine. For some time there has been a suspicion that this prominent feature of the Atlantic ocean maps and of the stories of old sailors is largely mythical.

A recent Norwegian expedition sent out to search for the [illegible] reports a great deal of sea, but very little sargasso. It is true that they discovered a place in the north Atlantic where seaweed is [illegible], but as for the [illegible] of weed and marine plants so dense that sailing vessels are held fast in it while the mariners die a lingering death of starvation, there is nothing in it. In fact, these [illegible] Scandinavians hint broadly that there has never been any such place.

If any one will kindly return the Sargasso sea to its proper place in the Atlantic ocean all will be forgiven and no questions asked; otherwise nothing can save this well known phenomenon from going the way of the sea serpent, the mermaid and Dr. Cook's great discovery.

Johannesburg's Rise and Progress.

If any one gifted with prescience a generation ago had written out the story of Johannesburg's rise and progress he would have been regarded as a burlesque Jules Verne. For a city to spring up in the center of South Africa in twenty years, to attract a quarter of a million settled population and crowd an enormous municipal development within a single decade sounds certainly more like imagination than fact. So does the arrangement by which she keeps her black domestics out in a suburb ten miles away and runs special trains for them morning and night. But one secret of the town's success rests on her [illegible] of fully 6,000 feet above the sea and her nine hours of sunshine a day in perhaps the mildest and most equable climate in the world.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Dickens' Desk.

A writing desk which belonged to Charles Dickens was sold the other day at the mart in Wellington street. This is the desk whose reckless treatment by American railway porters he bitterly laments in a letter addressed to John Forster, dated Dec. 22, 1867. "Nearly every case I have," he writes, "is already broken. When we started from Boston yesterday I beheld, to my unspeakable amazement, Scott, my dresser, leaning a flushed countenance against the wall of the car and weeping bitterly. It was over my smashed writing desk."

Among other relics of the novelist which [illegible] under the hammer is the easy chair used by [illegible] in his private office [illegible] All the Year Round.—Westminster Gazette.

Observatory Without Telescope.

The Carnegie observatory on Mount Wilson, in California, is of white canvas, like some huge ark. You look for telescopes inside, but in vain; a system of mirrors appear instead, and it is the [illegible] of these that does the magnifying instead of the usual telescope tube. Visitors are accommodated in [illegible], a little house being appurtenant to each guest. Observations have been carried on since April, 1905, and every day a photograph is taken and several other pictures by means of the spectroheliograph.—London [illegible].

A Bad Heart, Its Cause and Cure

Many Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine. Your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These sensations are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

Just read what happened to Isaac Maltons, of Belle River, Ont.:

"Three months ago I was a weak, sickly man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had sour risings and indigestion. At night I would often weaken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation.

"I consulted my doctor and used remedies that my friends advised. Nothing helped.

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite, strong heart action, and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

Your druggist or storekeeper sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Who Will Be the Next Mayor?

The Toronto Star is worrying who will succeed Sir James Whitney. The Times is a little anxious to know who will be our next Mayor, if Mr. Buller gets "Talipes equini varus" or "house maids' knee." Still, we make a shrewd guess that our worthy mayor is good for a century or so yet.

A HAPPY CHILD IN JUST A FEW HOURS

When cross, constipated or if feverish give "California Syrup of Figs" then don't worry

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it cannot cause injury. No difference what ails your little one —if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomachache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Chapped Hands

AND

Cold-Sores

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night. Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, and the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

Zam-Buk also cures chafing, rashes, winter eczema, piles, ulcers, festering sores, sore heads and backs, abscesses, pimples, ring-worm, etc., cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, sprains. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c a box.

SIR JAMES WEAKER, UNABLE TO RECOVER STRENGTH HE LOST IN RELAPSE; FEAR END APPROACHES

Slept Better Last Night But Rest Was Not Refreshing--Could Not Fight Off Restlessness That Attacked Him for More Than an Hour at a Time

New York, Jan. 13.—The inability of Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, to recover the strength he has lost in the relapse that he suffered on Sunday, and the announcement from the sick room at the Manhattan Hotel this morning, that he was weaker, gave rise to the inference in the minds of those attending him that the Premier had entered upon a phase of the heart trouble affecting him that would end fatally.

Eats Some Food, Though Weaker.

Sir James was able to sleep better last night, but his rest was of a fitful character, and did not enable him to fight off the restlessness that had attacked him for more than an hour at a time, while none of the ground he lost Sunday and yesterday was retaken.

This morning despite his weakened condition, the Premier was able to take nourishment, and apparently relished it. The strength that would result from it, however, it was believed, would only enable him to resist for a few days the death that seemed to be approaching unless a very material improvement manifested itself.

Asked if Sir James' condition had not shown a gradual retrogression since Sunday, Dr. R. A. Pyne, the Premier's political colleague and medical adviser, this morning answered in the affirmative.

Might Last Another Week.

In reply to this definite question: "Will Sir James last a week under the present circumstances?" Dr. Pyne remarked: "He might; we cannot tell. If no particular exertion is imposed upon him, his tremendous vitality and physical strength might carry him along for quite a while."

When the fact that the bulletins were giving rise to pessimism was pointed out to Dr. Pyne, he acknowledged that it was warranted, but added that he had not given up hope.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND WILL CELEBRATE FAMOUS CONFERENCE

Gathering Fifty Years Ago Which Paved Way to Confederation, to be Recalled at Midsummer Jubilee--

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—The Dominion Government has been invited by Hon. A. J. Mathieson, premier of Prince Edward Island, to take part in the jubilee of the Charlottetown conference which will be celebrated next midsummer. It was at the former Charlottetown conference in 1864 that the first steps were taken which resulted in the confederation of the provinces of Canada in 1867. The only living member of that conference is Sir Charles Tupper, and it is hoped that he will be able to be present at the jubilee celebration.

Premier Mathieson asks that the Dominion Government co-operate with the Prince Edward Island Government in making the celebration national in character. Funds, of course, will be required.

He desires the presence of the Duke of Connaught, all the members of the Cabinet as well as Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, the chief justice, and Lord [illegible].

Expect British Warship.

The Government is asked to invite the British Government to send at least one British warship to take part. It is expected that there will be a good representation of the Canadian militia, and a fleet of vessels representative of the naval, commercial and pleasure craft of the Dominion.

Premier Borden has replied that the Government will co-operate in every way possible, and the probability is that all the provincial governments will lend their aid and countenance to the jubilee celebration of that epoch-making conference.

Court Stanley, 7699, A.O.F., held their annual meeting in the S.O.E. Hall, Hunter street. Chief Ranger Bro. F. Pratt presiding. There was an exceptionally large turn out of the members. After the usual business was gone into, the Court proceeded to installation of officers, when the following officers were duly installed by D.C.R. Bro. T. Hendry:

C.R.—G. R. Record.
S.C.R.—C. Jones.
Treas.—H. McWha.
Sec'y—R. J. McWilliams.
S.W.—T. Parks.

S.B.—A. Lowe.
J.B.—H. Shriver.
Physicians—Drs. Amyo and Moir.

After the installation C.R. Bro. Record announced discussion and important matters to be taken up at our next meeting, and all members are urgently requested to be present. The D.C.R. then presented Bro. A. Brotherson with P.C.R. jewel. The Chief Ranger then called Bro. Dr. Hewitt to the front and after a short speech presented him with a handsome valise in behalf of the court, in appreciation of his 24 years as physician, which office he had to resign owing to not having time to fill same. The regular meeting was then closed.

The members then sat down to an oyster supper, after which a short speech was given by the newly elected officers interspersed with songs and recitations.

District Chief Ranger Bro. T. Hendry said he would give a trophy to the court in the district which has the largest increase of membership for the year. He also spoke a few words on the juvenile court, which has recently been organized for boys between the ages of five and seventeen, particulars of which can be obtained from any member of the court.

A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by singing "O Canada," "God Save the King," and "Auld Lang Syne."

CITY DISTRICT L. O. L. ELECTION OF OFFICERS

A LADY KNOWN HERE SAW MEXICAN FIGHT

From Her Housetop She Witnessed Also Three Mexican Spies Hanged.

Mr. Pen Alexander, the local electrician, has received a very interesting letter from his sister, Mrs. Geo. Winch, of Laredo, Texas. This lady writes to say that she has, from the roof of her house seen several battles take place across the Rio Grande between the rebels and Federal troops. She saw many men shot down. On one occasion she saw three men, presumably spies hanged from the limb of a tree.

At 7.40 in the morning the real battle began. She saw the main body of rebels under General Pablo Gonzales, consisting of both infantry and cavalry, and some of their artillery advance on the federal entrenchments on the southern outskirts of Nuevo Laredo just south of the railroad shops. Here a fierce battle followed, the federals being entrenched and fully prepared for the attack. At first a brisk rifle fire came from both sides and a battle royal raged. Later both sides brought their artillery, machine guns and Gatling guns into action and the real destructive work began. Volley after volley was poured forth from both sides and the heavy guns belched forth destruction. In this fight about twenty-five hundred on each side were engaged. During the time the battle was raging rebel reinforcements to the number of about three hundred arrived from the vicinity of Hildalbo for the purpose of getting into the fight, but when they appeared on the hilltop to the westward of the city the artillery was turned on them and about one-third of them were mowed down before they realized what happened. These retreated in confused order and were not again seen.

The battle continued from 7.40 until about 9 o'clock, when the rebels somewhat demoralized by the destructive work of the federal artillery, began to fall back.

Mr. Winch, her husband is a nephew of Mr. Harry Winch of this city. He is in the drug business, the firm being Winch and Lithgow. "Billy" Lithgow, as he was familiarly known in Peterborough, has many friends here.

GRACE IS DEAD SHOT BY HIS WIFE

Newnan, Ga., Jan. 13.—Eugene Grace died here at 1.45 this morning from the bullet wound mysteriously received in Atlanta nearly two years ago. He had suffered from partial paralysis since shortly after the shooting and has been in a serious condition for several days.

Grace was wounded in his Atlanta home in March, 1912. Policemen summoned by telephone found him in a semi-conscious condition. At the hospital he accused his wife, Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace, of the shooting. Mrs. Grace was found at the home of Grace's mother here and arrested on his accusation. Later in the same year she was tried on a charge of attempted murder and found not guilty.

At the trial Grace was brought into the court room on a cot, made a statement in which he had been shot by his wife for the purpose of securing a large amount of [illegible] which he held. Mrs. Grace claimed at the trial that her husband had been wounded in a struggle between them for possession of a pistol and that she had left him and had gone to Newnan in the belief that he was not in a serious condition. Soon after the trial Grace left his Atlanta home to live with his mother in Newnan. His death, physicians said, was due directly to uraemic poisoning which set in about the wound in his back.

GENERAL STRIKE IMMINENT IN S. AFRICA

Miners Vote Strongly to Quit Work in Sympathy With Railwaymen

Cape Town, Jan. 13.—Quiet prevails throughout South Africa tonight, but this may be the lull before the storm, as the incoming ballots from various centres make it practically certain that a general strike will be voted. The ballots received from the miners along the reef all favor a strike, and the various trades, including shop assistants, warehousemen and clerks in Johannesburg have voted similarly.

The feeling is growing in Johannesburg that the situation is becoming more serious. The Cape Town harbor workers have not been officially called out by the union, but their response will not be known until to-morrow.

A ballot by the Johannesburg branch of the Typographical Union has resulted by a large majority, in favor of a strike. This probably means that the people of Johannesburg will have no newspapers after to-morrow.

Sympathetic Strike.

If a general strike is called it will be out of sympathy for the strike of the railway employes, many of whom have abandoned their posts and laid down their tools in the railroad shops. The strike of the railwaymen is said to be due to the policy of retrenchment put into effect by the South African Railway administration, in pursuance of which hundreds of employes in Pretoria, Bloemfontein, Durban, Salt River and elsewhere have been dismissed. The strikers demand the cessation of this policy of retrenchment and the reinstatement of the dismissed men. They argue that the administration's real motive is to force wages down, as shown by the fact that some of the dismissed men have been offered other billets at reduced wages.

UP-TO-DATE HEATING PLANS FOR H. HOPE CO.

The contract for installing the steam heating plant in the new factory recently erected by Messrs. Henry Hope & Sons was awarded to Keith's Limited, Toronto. Yesterday Mr. C. B. Richardson, the company's heating and ventilating engineer arrived in town, bringing with him half a dozen expert steam fitters. About 15 additional men were taken on here and the work began in earnest.

To The Times Mr. Richardson stated that a very perfect and up-to-date system was to be installed. The work will be completed in about six weeks' time.

SARAH BERNHARDT IS ON LEGION OF HONOR

Great French Actress Given the Honor After Many Years of Waiting.

New York, Jan. 13.—From Paris comes the news that at last the name of Sarah Bernhardt has been added to the roll of fame of the Legion of Honor. Her claims have been put forward several times before, but the influence of a strong element in French society prevented the French actress from obtaining the decoration.

Among the famous women who are possessors of the red ribbon are Adelina Patti, Mme. Curie, the Baroness de Rothschild, Mme. Paquin, and Mme. Otrien, the Aviator.

150 MEN MAY BE DROWNED

Eight Steamers Speed Thro' Gale to Rescue of the Cobequid

Halifax, N.S. Jan. 13.—Groping her way to St. John through a blinding snowstorm and a fierce northwesterly wind the R.M.S.P. steamer Cobequid early this morning grounded on one of the dread rocks of the bay of Fundy, and grave fears are felt for the safety of the passengers and crew, numbering probably 150 all.

The Cobequid is hard and fast on some exposed ledge of rocks. All wireless communication with the ship has been cut off. Her forward hold is full of water and she has a bad list. In response to her call for help eight steamers are now pushing through the gale at top speed to her assistance.

WATER FROZE AS FIREMEN PLAYED HOSE IN MONTREAL

Tons of Ice Coated Grain Storehouse When Fire Was Under Control

Montreal, Jan. 13.—With the temperature 20 below zero a disastrous fire broke out in the Robertson, Oliver Grain Co. Storehouse here to-day. Owing to the extreme cold the firemen had the greatest difficulty fighting the blaze. Water froze before it reached the building, which was partially destroyed, with a loss of $50,000.

For a time the fire threatened all property surrounding the grain storehouse. Two or three other buildings were badly damaged. After the fire was under control tons of ice were coated over the building. More than 200,000 bushels of grain and a great amount of hay were in the storehouse.

Escaped Convict Shot.

Pittsburg, Pa. Jan. 13.—In a running gun fight with detectives Freeburn and Burke, William Schmeltzer, said to be one of the convicts who recently made a daring escape from the prison at Indianapolis, was probably fatally shot here to-day.

MONTREAL FIRE UNDER CONTROL BUT WAS VERY COSTLY

Notre Dame Cathedral Almost Scorched by Midday Blaze--Low Temperature Hard on Firemen

Montreal, Jan. 13.—Fire which seriously threatened the business heart of the city was subdued this afternoon only after a stubborn fight. The losses are thought to have reached half a million dollars. The four-storey warehouse of Frothingham & Workman, hardware wholesalers, was wrecked completely. Adjoining buildings caught and for a time historic Notre Dame Cathedral was threatened, flames actually breaking out at one time just adjacent to the cathedral, but were instantly subdued.

Other Fires Simultaneously.

Battling in a temperature 20 degrees below zero, firemen were not only hampered by the bitter cold, but by the fact that half a dozen fires broke out while they were still fighting. At one time only seven pieces of apparatus were left with which to combat the central fire. Nearly every fireman sustained frost bites, and so serious were the injuries and the effects of the frost and the inland revenue offices nearby were turned into a temporary hospital.

The cause of the outbreak was unknown, but the alarm was given in time to enable the clerks in the offices of the company which front St. Paul street, to get all the books and papers safely placed in the vaults before they beat a retreat.

STRIKES OR LOCK-OUTS ILLEGAL IN ALL BRANCHES OF INDUSTRY

Government to Enact Advanced Legislation for Prevention of Industrial Warfare

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—The most radical action yet taken by any country regarding labor and labor men is announced by the government for this session of parliament, which opens on Thursday. The industrial disputes act, which at present affects only those men engaged in work on public utilities, is to be extended to take in all branches of labor, public and private.

The chief purpose of the industrial disputes act, as constituted at present, is to prevent strikes and lockouts until the matter of the dispute has been under consideration by a board of arbitration and conciliation and a finding come to by the Board. Neither employers or men are compelled to abide by the decision of the board, but the effect has been that a fair examination of the case has induced harmony and agreement in a vast number of cases, and has reduced the number of strikes and lockouts in the Dominion.

Will Extend Principle.

Hon. T. W. Crothers, minister of labor, therefore, feels that a great deal of good can be accomplished by extending the scope of the act to include all labor. Private enterprises, from the point of view of both employer and workmen will be conducted under the eye of the department. In cases of dispute there can be no strike or lockout until a board of arbitration has considered the case and reported.

An important point in the new legislation will be that no employer will be allowed to dismiss or refuse to engage a workman on the ground that he is a member of a labor union nor will union men be able to refuse to work alongside a man on the ground that he is not a union man. Men or employers who do so will be subject to severe penalties.

The new labor act will be an amalgamation of the labor legislation of 1912, which referred exclusively to railways, and the industrial disputes act of 1907.

FALLON GIRL OF "SLAVERS"

Telephone Operator Calls Up Family From Drug Store--Says She Was Abducted by By Men

Boston, Jan. 13.—Hysterical from the experiences she said she had undergone during the last three days, Miss Rose A. Fallon, the pretty telephone operator who has been missing since last Tuesday, was restored to her home last night.

Her all but distracted parents and sisters, worn out from their search for Rose, and convinced that the girl had been the prey of kidnappers, were thrown into a state of joyous excitement shortly after 6 o'clock, when they heard her voice on the telephone.

"Come and get me," the voice cried. "Come down to the drug store at Dover and Washington streets. Come right away!"

There was a moment's pause, and then Miss Fallon's voice, indicating that the girl was [illegible]

[illegible] ter, with younger members of the family, started for the South end by electric car, while the girl's uncle, J. D. Fallon, and a cousin, George Fallon, left in an automobile.

The missing girl was standing in the drug store, in conversation with two officers from the Dudley street police station, when the relatives arrived.

The moment that Rose spied her sister Margaret she made for her, and there was an affectionate scene with the two as principals and several scores of passersby and patrons of the drug store as witnesses.

HENRY THE THIEF.

The Black Heart of the Greely Arctic Expedition.

STORY OF HIS EXECUTION.

The Order Issued by the Emaciated Commander and the Way It Was Carried Out—The Rifle Shot That Put an End to the Traitor.

One of the many tragedies of the Greely arctic expedition was the execution of Private Henry, who had been caught time after time stealing food from the scant store of the starving party. Henry alone was strong and active, thanks to the stolen food and to the fact that he did no labor he could possibly shirk.

Lieutenant Greely had warned and warned Henry and had punished him, but to no avail, and finally, after a particularly despicable act of theft, the commander, in fear that Henry's course would cause a general raid on the store of food and thus bring about the destruction of the whole party, condemned Henry to death.

The story of the execution, which makes a new page in history, is told in the American Magazine by Frank B. Copley, who got his data direct from the survivors of the expedition. He writes:

"All his lethargy gone, Greely dismissed the man, seized pencil and paper and, with trembling, emaciated fingers, wrote:

"Near Cape Sabine, June 6, 1884.

"Sergeants Brainard, Long and Frederick:

"Notwithstanding promises given by Private C. B. Henry yesterday, he has since, as acknowledged to me, tampered with seal thongs if not other food at the old camp. This pertinacity and audacity is the destruction of the party if not at once ended. Private Henry will be shot today, all care being taken to prevent his injuring any one, as his physical strength is greater than that of any two men. Decide the manner of his death by two ball and one blank cartridge. This order is imperative and absolutely necessary for any chance of life. A. W. GREELY."

"In the official report of the Lady Franklin bay expedition it is simply announced that 'shots were heard about 2 o'clock, and later the order was read to the general party.' The manner in which the order was executed here appears for the first time.

"Sergeants Brainard, Long and Frederick could not, as ordered, 'decide the manner of death by two ball and one blank cartridge.' Greely had failed to take into consideration that at this time the party had left only one serviceable rifle.

"The three sergeants drew lots to see who would do the shooting. When they had done so they bound themselves with an oath that the identity of the man thus chosen never should be revealed.

"Henry was at the tent on Cemetery ridge with all the other men when the time for putting him to death came. What was to take place, of course, was known only to the three sergeants and the commander. Two of the sergeants remained in the vicinity of the old hut, while the third went to the tent to bring Henry down.

"The man who went for Henry told him that he was wanted at the old camp to help carry up some more of the supplies that had been left there. Suspecting nothing, Henry readily accompanied the sergeant to the place chosen for putting him to death.

"Now, Greely had repeatedly cautioned the three sergeants to take no chances on Henry's getting away, for, although none at Cape Sabine knew the man's past history, enough of the man's black soul had been revealed to make his guardsmen feel that no crime could be put past him.

"So Brainard, Long and Frederick, cautioned by their commander and warned by their own knowledge of the man with whom they had to deal, had decided that Henry should be made to stoop to pick up something and that then he should be shot from behind. At least one of the sergeants had no more compunction about killing him than he would have had about killing a mad dog.

"But one of the other two men weakened at the last moment. To shoot a man in cold blood from behind, to send him into eternity with no opportunity to compose his soul, was too terrible a thing for him to stand. It was a mistake that nearly proved disastrous.

"Henry was told face to face that he was to be put to death in accordance with the order of the commander, and he was advised to kneel and make his peace with his God. At the same time the executioner appeared with his rifle at a convenient distance before the doomed man's eyes.

"Henry stood agape. He muttered something about something not being [illegible]. Near where the third sergeant stood an ax lay on the ground. Henry's gaze, searching the ground, encountered the ax. He sprang for it. A warning cry was raised. The sergeant who stood near the ax jumped and got his foot on it almost as Henry was upon him. There was a cry of [illegible] [illegible]

"But despite all he had been through the aim of the executioner was true. The rifle cracked, and the bullet sped, penetrating the breast of the man for whom it was intended [illegible]. Henry whirled, cried [illegible] and 'You have finished me!' Again the rifle cracked. The second bullet went through Henry's head—and he fell dead."

ATHLETIC DEVOTIONS.

Gymnastic Exercises That Impressed the Kurdish Villagers.

Everything is liable to be misunderstood, even gymnastic exercises. This truth was brought home to George H. Hepworth, and he tells his experience in "Through Armenia on Horseback." The author was stopping in a Kurdish village, and the inn possessed but one general living room.

In the morning I began my regular gymnastics, stooping until my fingers touched the floor, throwing my arms about like the spokes of a wheel, striking out from the shoulder and going through all the exercises, none of which I ever omitted. I would gladly have taken a sponge bath, but it would have been impossible to get enough water. A pint is enough to suffice a Turk.

Well, I got under way with my exercises when I saw that my audience was excited; conversation dropped into a whisper, then ceased; word passed from one to another, and one by one the occupants of the room quietly left. I feared that they were offended and wanted to call them back and apologize. Just then my dragoman entered, laughing.

"What has happened?" I asked.

He laughed the harder as he replied:

"The Kurds think you are practicing devotional religious exercises, and they retired under the impression that you would regard their presence as an intrusion."

Skinning a Sea Otter.

A full grown sea otter is from four to five feet long and perhaps a foot or more wide. When a hunter secures one he loosens the hide from the nose and head, and without cutting it lengthwise at all he pulls the skin down over the body, the hide being so elastic that this is not a difficult job. It is then stretched over a smooth board six and a half feet long, nine inches wide at one end and ten at the other end. Each end of this board is tapered to a point. Another board exactly the same size is then inserted, and the skin is stretched a foot or eighteen inches longer than its original length. A third board half the length of the other is wedged in and the skin lightly tacked at the ends to hold it in place. If any flesh adheres to the skin it is then cut off, and the hide is cured and dried in this condition. In a few days it is taken off the boards and turned fur side out, when it is ready for market.

The One to Pay.

When she was Lady Randolph Churchill, Mrs. George Cornwallis-West consented to electioneer for Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett in his first parliamentary campaign. Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett was married to the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, a very rich woman, who was nearly forty years his senior. Lady Randolph, with her beauty and charm, did splendid work for the candidate.

To a group of farmers she said one day:

"Won't you promise me to vote for Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett?"

"My lady," said a red faced farmer, with a chuckle, "we'll all vote for him if every vote 'll be paid for with a kiss."

"Thank you very much," said Lady Randolph. "Your offer is accepted. I'll send for the Baroness Burdett-Coutts at once."

Deserted Their Towns.

So late as the end of the seventeenth century the inhabitants of Ceylon were in the habit of deserting their towns. Their customs are described in the narrative of Captain Robert Knox, who for nineteen years, from 1660 to 1679, was a captive among them. He speaks of several towns as lying desolate owing to the fact that their inhabitants had forsaken them. This they did if many of them fell sick, and two or three died soon after one another, thinking that it was a visitation of the evil one. Some of them came back when they thought the evil spirits had departed.

Our Point of View

From all accounts when the Tories at Ottawa caucus the Grits cuss.

* * *

It appears that the firm of J. P. Morgan decided to quit the money trust while the quitting was good.

* * *

Woman's love for drygoods and man's love for wet goods cause about nine-tenths of the domestic discord in this world.

* * *

"Baffled and weary I come back," says a Toronto poet. We can imagine how supremely happy Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues would be if they could say the same thing.

* * *

Romance will soon be only a memory in Venice. The gondolier has got to go. Several hundred motor boats will soon be placed on the canals of that odoriferous old "Bride of the Adriatic."

* * *

The job of uplifting the stage is the biggest one the American public has ever tackled. The only thing that has been uplifted, so far as noticed, is the feet and legs of the actresses, and they can't go much higher, try as hard as they may.

* * *

Some men will eat a good meal at home of their wive's cooking, and arise from the table without a word of praise for the patient little woman who did the cooking, yet when the same fellows get a burnt meal with cold slop called coffee at a restaurant they pay the bill cheerfully and tip the waiter (female) handsomely, and smiling at the same time.

WHY NOT LOOSEN UP A BIT?

The man who wants to help the other man to help himself has no difficulty these days in finding the opportunity. This man may live in the city, in the suburbs, or out in the country, but it matters not where he lives, the other man is here without work, and if he can be given something to do that will enable him to earn a little money and save him from the despair of enforced idleness, the gift will be a blessing to the recipient and a matter of value received to the giver. It is a double-benefit, and in fact it is triple, for every idle man who suffers idleness until he loses his grip and drops his self-respect is a potential menace to the community.

It should be the concern of the citizen personally to relieve, so far as he may, the grievous conditions of unemployment that now exist. Even if the citizen, be he city man, suburbanite or farmer, shall find that he can offer only a day or two of employment, the aggregate of such offerings would help wondrously toward relief. Undoubtedly there are citizens, hundreds of them, urban and rural, who could find considerable work individually for the right sort of man; and this is the time for that class of citizen to regard the proffer of such employment if not as a duty, then as an act greatly conducive to the public good.

Why not loosen up a bit, and give the fellow a day's work, or a month's work, if possible, that he may not suffer from the lack of food and shelter? This is no plea for the lazy vagrant; it is an appeal for the man who must work or lose hope and without hope gravitate to the level of vagabondage. No one man can supply the full remedy for the present condition, but if every man would do the best he can there would be a well-nigh sufficient remedy.

Stuffy Feeling About the Nose Relieved at Once

Tells How to Cure Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Isn't it miserable to have a stuffed up feeling in the nostrils — to be scarcely able to draw a full breath. When Catarrh gets into the nose you're bound to know something is radically wrong.

A dead sure cure, and a simple one to use, is Catarrhozone; you just breathe it—that's all. You see Catarrhozone Inhaler sends healing piney vapors through the nose, throat and lungs, and these antiseptic soothing vapors are death to colds or Catarrh.

Thousands testify every year that nothing ever discovered will cure a cold, or help the throat like Catarrhozone. Mr. Everett L. Wassan, of Blair, N.B., writes:—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrhozone set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, "Catarrhozone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Catarrhozone is the greatest remedy for colds, etc., since people began to have colds. Get the dollar package and let the whole family use it. Medium size 50c; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

WHY BOTTLES KEEP WARM

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will you kindly explain why a Thermos bottle keeps its contents warm for so long?

Reply.—The power of the bottle to keep liquids hot or cold is due to the fact that the inner bottle is surrounded by a vacuum, which perfectly insulates it from outside changes of temperature.—Ed.

SUNDAY CARS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw in your paper a few days ago a letter advocating Sunday street cars for Peterborough. I forget what the writer's name was but his ideas are all right. Peterborough wants Sunday street cars. The time has gone by when the old "blue laws" observation of Sunday are out of date. We do not hang old women accused of witchcraft now. We do not now encourage the Pharisee ideas existing when men and women were compelled to go to church, speak in "yea" and "nay" and then go home after church and keep drunk for the rest of the day. There are hundreds of our citizens living at a distance from their respective churches who, in cold weather are prevented from attending church on account of cold weather and slippery pavements. A Sunday car service would enable such people to attend church.

THE ONTARIO FARMER

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It begins to look as if the government intended to bring in Free wheat, free flour, free semoline and free bi-products. How this will effect the Ontario farmer the latter has not told the press or government. He has held not meetings and promoted no discussions hence it looks as if he had no objection. If the freight rates and mill-machinery prices are equalized it will not hurt the Ontario miller. Ontario farmers are not as a rule feeding their land. Their grain is not up to the original standard. They will have to feed all their grain to cattle, etc., in future and reply upon the home-market more than ever. Ontario grain (speaking generally) stands no chance of export in any form. The Ontario farmer will do well to keep his ear to the ground or he may find himself largely sidetracked by foreign enterprise. Agriculture has suddenly come into its own all over the continent and indeed all over the world (Britain excepted). We must see to it in Canadathat we get our share of the good things as a nation and not merely as a narrow local way.

Yours,

Interested.

INSURANCE ON CITY BUILDINGS

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In this morning's issue of The Times, I observe that there is a suggestion thrown out that the insurance upon the different Public buildings had been placed in the companies represented by Mr. T. E. Bradburn. I might say that a number of the city buildings are in charge of the Peterborough City Trust, over which the Council has no authority other than the appointment of the members of the City Trust

I am having a statement prepared showing the various public buildings in the city, the amount of insurance, the insurance agent, and the name of the company. I will try and get all this information as early as possible, and submit it to the various papers as this may remove some of the difficulty, and if there is an unfair division of the insurance, there will be an opportunity to ascertain just where it is unfair.

A REFUGE.

(Written for The Times by Mrs. A.P. Calder).

Thou free happy bird, in the tall, leafy tree,
Every singing so blithely your sweet melody,
Secure from the breeze, in a warm, sheltered nest,
And soothed by soft zephyrs to gentlest rest.

How calm you look down, on the world far below
With its strife and turmoil, false glitter and show,
Aloft from the snare of the fowler you fly,
To shelter and safety, when danger is nigh.

For daily provision, belongs not your care,
Kind providence furnishes bounteous fare,
So grateful you warble, forth thanksgiving lays
To the source of the blessings that gladden your days.

Thus fain would I, too, from the world and its care,
Toil, temptation, and sin, to Jesus repair,
There securely reposing, in refuge so blest,
No peril can reach me, no foe can molest.

Misfortune by day or grim terror by night,
Nor treacherous arrow's swift venomous flight,
The troubles and trials in stern conflict meet,
Calm only is found in that peaceful retreat.

In His Smile sorrows vanish, like sun-kissed dew,
And dark clouds of gloom, wear the rainbow's bright hue,
'Neath His strong wings enfolded, unmoved I behold
Earth's vain strife for pleasure, pomp, honors or gold.

So may my devotion unwearied arise,
Like pure incense wafted, aloft to the skies,
To Him who prepares, in His infinite love,
Our home in the mansions eternal above.

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.,
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs: —

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,200,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,924
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred ...	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1906 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in due course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $8,[illegible],737.[illegible]. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephoned at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

Strange Death of Rival Stags.

Many records exist of the way in which rival stags have met their death when fighting for supremacy. Probably none is more strange than that described by Herr C. [illegible] of [illegible] in the Deutsche Jager-Zeitung. In 1908 the keepers on the [illegible] shooting in Mecklenburg-Schwerin found a fine twelve pointer lying dead, apparently from [illegible] and with both horns close together. Not far off was a smaller stag, a ten pointer, still living, but as the body was broken it was put out of its misery. On examination it was found that the antlers of the larger stag were torn out of the skull and the frontal bone was broken. The [illegible] of the smaller stag must have been broken in the struggle.

Exhaustion and Bodily Tiredness Every Day Being Turned Into Vigor and Ambition by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

From Chebogue Pt., N. S., comes the following from Mrs. H. A. Raymond: "A year ago my health began to fail, I lost appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became thin, hollow-cheeked, and had black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the charm of life had left me and when springtime arrived I was in the 'blues.' I read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and got five boxes at once.

"Within a month my appetite and color were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do this should be in every home."

RAW FOODS: A cynical statesman has said that language was created to conceal our thoughts, simply another way of saying that "all men are liars." As a matter of fact man has developed language with which to express his emotions, desires, loves, fears, hopes, joys and sorrows. It is a thing of growth and new words are constantly being born and developed while others have outlived their usefulness and pass into oblivion.

If you were to consult any standard dictionary you would find the word "raw" described as meaning unfinished. Now, can you conceive of any product ever produced by man or nature that is more perfectly finished than a luscious ripe apple or a delicious bunch of ripe grapes? Would it be possible by any stretch of the imagination to conceive that any improvement could be made by cooking it? True, we eat them baked, fried, steamed, stewed, boiled and roasted, but to the lover of true gustatory enjoyment it is, when cooked, turned into a hopelessly undone and raw state from which no manner or amount of spicing, seasoning or other devices can hope to restore it.

No, all uncooked foods cannot be classed as raw or unfinished. Nature gave to man first the herbs and upon these he grew strong and progressed rapidly toward intelligence and civilization. Then he added fruits and nuts. Famine, starvation and the climatic conditions that he found in his progress northward caused him to slay and eat flesh. Whoever invented the cook-stove and modern kitchen with its thousand and one devices for enslaving women did the most complete job ever dreamed of.

In the full vigor of young manhood and womanhood they dream, he of the beautiful queen who is to grace his home and she—well, no matter what she dreams—the facts are that she becomes a slave of the cookstove when all the time liberty is at hand.

Instead of reigning as a queen over the throne of which he dreamed she rules over a fiery furnace gilded with greasy fats, pans, plates, blood and bones, and her banner is the dish rag.

No cook ever lived that could prepare a potato in such a manner that it would supply greater nourishment than a well ripened banana and how could a potato be made more appetizing. Give one of your children, whose appetite is natural, its choice between a boiled, baked or steamed potato or a nice ripe banana and there is no question about its choice. Let it choose between a dish of shelled nut meats and the choicest [illegible] meats you can buy or between rich [illegible] dates, figs or prunes and your finest white bread, between crisp fresh radishes, lettuce, celery, cucumbers, etc., and the best spanish stew ever compounded by a Broadway chef or a loving mother and the child that has lived an active outdoor life will take nature's foods and keep well.

Let me help you to get supper tonight; give me 2 eggs, ½ lemon, 3 tablespoonfuls of olive oil, 1 cup of whipped cream, a little sugar and salt. I have beaten the yolks of the eggs very stiff, slowly added the oil and lemon, all the while beating hard and you see it makes quite a thick paste. Then to the beaten white of the eggs I added salt and sugar to taste and then last of all, the cup of whipped cream is added and all is whipped together until stiff and we have the finest salad dressing you ever tasted. Put it in the ice box until ready to serve. Meantime let me make a salad. Put it in the ice box until ready to serve. Meantime let me make a salad. There are so many things out there in your garden that I hardly know which to use.

There is a fine head of lettuce and from the nasturtium bed, a few stems and leaves, diced and serve with the dressing, or here is a fine combination, 1 apple, 2 oranges, a head of lettuce and chopped or ground nuts. I cut the apple and oranges in small pieces and serve on lettuce leaves with the nuts plentifully sprinkled over after the salad dressing is put over, delicious, refreshing, [illegible] ordinary, nourishing.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication, if same are addressed to Home Health Club, [illegible] Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor:—Having read a letter in your department of some one being badly afflicted with gallstones I will send a remedy that has been successful from Michigan to Texas. If the person can be cured this will cure them. Heretofore we have kept it private, but think it ought to be given to the public in the interest of humanity. A great many people have them and do not know what is the matter with them. The prescription follows:

To 4 ounces of Olive Oil add 10 drops of [illegible] and the juice of ½ [illegible] lemon. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon take one bottle of Citrate of Magnesia, eating nothing after taking Magnesia. On retiring about 9 p.m. take the entire dose. The lemon should not be added until ready to take. As soon as you awake in the morning take another bottle of Magnesia and eat nothing all day until supper then a rather light one. Repeat the above formula every two weeks until cured. [illegible]

DAILY SHORT STORY

DICKEY'S ATONEMENT

The Romance That Was Played After the Tragedy.

By SARAH S. KENNEDY.

Miss Delaney, who had been to Washington and seen several theatrical "stars," might tilt her nose as she pleased, but the fact remained that the entertainment given by the "Smithville Thespians" was a success. Miss Delaney said the performance was lacking in "artistic finish," but Smithville went and paid its money without regret and laughed as it had not laughed in years. True, the intention of the Thespians was not to make people laugh, for in their self admiration they had essayed a tragedy. But from tragedy to comedy was an easy step with Dickey Holt in the cast. Something was always sure to happen to Dickey.

That which befell him this particular night seemed trivial in its nature, but was farreaching in its consequences. He quite forgot that afternoon to purchase a pair of long hose to wear with the knee breeches of the colonial costume in which he was to enact the heavy villain and at the last moment bribed the maid from the girls' dressing room to surreptitiously borrow a pair for him. These he donned so hurriedly that he failed to notice the owner's name worked in bright silk just below the knee. But there were opera glasses in the house, and soon the audience knew what he did not. The applause accorded him was as unexpected as it was gratifying, and he looked compassionately at John Moore, the "leading man," who thought to sway all the honors. But in the most thrilling scene of the second act, where his villainy was denounced, there came an awful moment.

"You are a penniless impostor!" stormed John, giving the lines as they were. "Why, the very shoes in which you stand are not your own!"

And then—before Dickey could make his grandiloquently scornful reply a small boy in the front row rose and cried excitedly:

"And neither is the stockings his, for they've got my sister Belle's name on 'em!"

After that a permanent return to pompous tragedy was impossible. Even John Moore's imposing voice and Jennie Lane's well simulated tears failed to keep the spectators in awe. Dickey's stockings were the "stars of the goodly company," and every time he appeared he was greeted with shouts and applause. Though the delighted audience went out into the night regretting no penny spent for tickets, behind the scenes Dickey had the whole troupe about his ears. But the only criticism that hurt him was Jennie Lane's. With Jennie he had long believed himself in love, and it hurt him when she said:

"You quite spoiled most of my part, and you made my poor little sister Belle more miserable than I can tell you."

The next night he called upon her to make his peace and found John Moore in the parlor ahead of him.

"Oh, I have quite forgiven you," laughed Jennie, "but Belle has vowed vengeance against you, and if you are wise you will go out yonder on the porch and pacify her. You used to be quite a hero in her eyes."

So Dickey left John with Jennie and went miserably out to where Belle, aged sixteen, swung in a hammock and pouted. He had known and petted her in days gone by, and he thought soon to smooth her ruffled plumage. Instead he found her obdurate and full of reproaches. However, he must pacify Jennie's sister. So Dickey spent the evening by the hammock. The next time he came it was the same. John sat with Jennie, and he was banished to the porch and Belle. That young lady had framed an elaborate program of reparation for the humiliation to which she had been subjected. He must bring her bonbons and flowers and sing to her in the summer moonlight to his mandolin. Dickey undertook these things in a spirit of penitence and martyrdom. Night after night he sat on the porch and strove to be amiable while inwardly he was fuming against John. He sometimes wondered why nice girls like Jennie had to have small sisters.

During the second week of his enforced repentance he made a discovery. Belle had lengthened her dresses and twisted her braids into a knot on top of her small head, and with these personal changes there had come also a touch of coquetry to her manner that made her the most delightful companion. He found he was fretting less over John's advantage, but now and then the old jealous thoughts would come.

"Are you not almost placated?" he asked laughingly one night.

Belle answered with spirit: "Do you think six boxes of chocolate and three bouquets would atone for all that laughter in the dress circle and those catcalls from the gallery. No, indeed!"

Dickey acknowledged that she was right and went on playing the agreeable, and as he was so much pleasanter as merely to sit himself to get all the [illegible] out of the new role. It was really surprising how quickly time passed in Belle's presence. As she swung in the hammock with [illegible] about her she made him tell her all about his hopes in his profession and never doubted but that he would achieve his ambitions. Sometimes she talked of Jennie and wished, with a languishing glance into Dickey's eyes, that she were like her sister. "It would be so lovely to have a man like Dickey in love with her." [illegible] [illegible] and wondered that he had never known it before.

After six weeks of [illegible] Belle sighed prettily and said she supposed he had spent quite enough time [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] went away with an odd sense of something lost tugging at his heart. The next evening he came, intending to go into the parlor and begin his rivalry with John, but somehow the lonely little figure in the hammock drew him aside, and he spent the evening as he had spent the preceding ones—in the moonlight.

"Goodby," he said at parting. "Tomorrow I really must break into John's game and recover my lost ground."

She sighed and then laughed so quickly that Dickey could scarcely separate the two. He stood confused for a moment, and when he recovered himself he found that he was still holding her hand and that she was watching him shyly. He went away with his brain in a whirl. In his efforts to soothe her feelings had he made the child love him? Far into the night he sat smoking and thinking, and in the morning the queer feeling was still in his breast, and Blackstone lay open but unread before him all day. In the afternoon as he left his office there was a commotion at the nearest street corner, and a runaway horse dashed into view, dragging a dogcart in which sat two girls, Jennie and Belle. The quick turn about the corner sent the cart careening on one wheel, and almost as Dickey recognized the occupants they were spilled in the dust. With a cry Dickey rushed forward and, passing one prostrate form, caught the other in his arms with words of solicitous endearment. But the figure drew resolutely away.

"This is not Jennie. This is"—

But Dickey only held her the closer. "Not Jennie, but the girl I love, the only girl I ever really loved! Let John take care of Jennie. Are you hurt, dear?"

There was a contented sigh against his shoulder. "I haven't any pain now, not even in my heart, which has often ached at your indifference."

"John and Jennie are to be married in the winter," she told him later.

"I'm glad of it. We'll dance at their wedding," he laughed. "But, dear, I'm only a poor young lawyer, and"—

"And I'm again too young to marry, so I'll wait a whole year for you, and if you give up smoking and send me only one box of chocolates a week you can save no end of money."

And so it was arranged, and when Miss Delaney next spoke of the lack of artistic finish to that theatrical performance Dickey stoutly declared the "finish was the finest on earth" and held to his point.

CHRISTMAS DISAPPEARANCES

Mysteries in the Festive Season in Britain's Annals

The festive season of Christmas has its mysteries no less than the other seasons of the year, and some of the most inexplicable concern the whereabouts of people who then suddenly became "missing."

Some turn up, or are ultimately discovered, having been the victims of loss of memory or mental balance; but the majority, alas, are never heard of again, leaving relatives in an agony of suspense as to what fate has overtaken them.

To the latter order belongs the case of a Liverpool gentleman named Robinson, who on Christmas Eve, a few years ago, went into a tobacconist's shop in the centre of the town to buy some cigars. He most certainly must have come out again, for the salesman who served him distinctly remembers seeing him leave with his purchase under his arm.

But so far as anybody else was concerned he was never seen after entering the shop, and to-day his disappearance is as great a mystery as ever. For his family Christmas is anything but a festive season, reminding them as it does of the great sorrow which at this period first came into their lives.

They still entertain the hope that sooner or later his whereabouts, or, at any rate, his fate, will be made known to them, though down to the present all efforts to trace him have been without avail. He could not have more completely disappeared if the earth had opened and swallowed him up.

Only the Christmas Eve before that a Manchester professional man went to one of the local theatres with his wife and her sister. During the performance he went out to see a man, and was absent for about twenty minutes. On his return he was amazed to find that the two others had vacated their seats.

After waiting some time for them to come back, he made inquiries of the attendants, who, however, had not noticed them going out. Expecting to find them at home, he proceeded there only to meet with disappointment. They did not arrive that night, and, indeed, have not arrived yet.

Where they are, or what was their fate, he has never been able to ascertain, though he has spent a good deal of money in endeavoring to find out. It was known, however, that he did not get on very well with his better half, and it may be that she took the opportunity to escape from an unhappy alliance.

On the last Christmas night of the nineteenth century Miss Tryphena Mawdsley mysteriously disappeared from her parents' home at the Plaza Hotel, Wigan. There was no reason that could be assigned for her mysterious disappearance, which, needless to say, caused quite a sensation and the greatest anxiety.

She was only twenty-two years of age; and in the hope of discovering her whereabouts, or learning her fate, a description of her, and what she was wearing, was circulated far and wide.

There was a curious sequel to the sudden disappearance of two Blackburn girls the very same Christmas. They made it up between them to leave home, and left accordingly on Christmas Eve. After visiting various towns in Lancashire, they presented themselves at an orphanage on the eve of the new year, and represented themselves as homeless orphans.

They were accordingly admitted, but after they had been in the institution several days the superintendent happened to come across a newspaper description of the missing couple. As the result, before many hours had elapsed they were restored to their friends. Why they had been guilty of such a silly escapade did not transpire.

A Bird's Curiosity.

Professor Guy A. Bailey, a member of the faculty of the Geneseo State Normal school, relates a little incident which might be doubted were it not for the fact that he has the proof to show for the story. Mr. Bailey was on Temple hill with his camera attempting to get a picture of a horned lark. The lark evidently thought that Mr. Bailey was providing it with a bird house, as it hopped on to the camera, back into the trees and then back on the camera again. The bird repeated this performance several times, refusing to remain in the trees long enough to be snapped. Finally Mr. Bailey left the camera where he had located it, went and got another camera, and when he returned he secured a splendid picture of the bird perched on camera No. 1. Curiosity got the best of the bird and the result was a good picture.—Geneseo Cor. Rochester Herald.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of [illegible] what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was [illegible] bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of [illegible] bushels, making a net capacity of 2,100,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and [illegible] feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately [illegible] bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

Rough on the Pianos.

Once in the company of President Diaz I spent a few nights in the Mexican earthquake zone as the guest of the governor of the state. As a measure of precaution the plaster ceilings of our sleeping rooms had been replaced with strips of matched boarding. "If a trembler should come in the night, amigos," remarked my host as he was bidding me good night, "wait for nothing, but make straight for the patio. I think these boards will hold until you get from under cover." And that evening, when I took the governor's wife out to dinner, she had remarked sadly: "We are so banished here in the hot lands. It is impossible even to have music, for no sooner do I have my grand piano tuned than an earthquake comes along and tips it over."—E. Alexander Powell, F. R. G. S., in Everybody's.

Origin of the Opera.

The opera, like nearly everything else interesting in the world of mind, had its origin in ancient Athens. The earliest librettos were by Sophocles and Aeschylus, such as the "Agamemnon" and "Antigone," a band of flutes and lyres constituting the orchestra, the dialogues being musically declaimed and the choruses sung to the best music of the time. Thus do we have the germ of all later developments in the line of opera.—Exchange.

TOLSTOY WANTED BLOOD.

His Quarrel With Turgeneff and the Reconciliation That Followed.

Raymond Recouly in the Paris Figaro gives the following account of an early encounter between Tolstoy and Turgeneff, which shows the Russian sage in a different frame of mind from the one in which the world has since come to know him:

It was on the estate of his friend, the poet Fet, near Yasnaya. Turgeneff was among the invited guests. The hostess inquired after his daughter, who was being reared in France. Turgeneff spoke highly of his English governess. "With a truly British exactitude," he said, "she requested me to fix the sum which my daughter might spend for charity. And now she teaches her pupil to mend the ragged clothes of the poor."

"And you consider that a good thing?" asked Tolstoy.

"Certainly," replied the other. "It brings the benefactor into direct contact with the persons whom he is helping."

"On my part, I think that a well dressed child who handles dirty and ill smelling rags is playing a hypocritical and theatrical farce."

"I must ask you not to speak in this way," exclaimed Turgeneff, with menacing looks.

"Why should I not say what I am convinced is the truth?" remarked Tolstoy.

"You think, then, that I am educating my daughter badly," and, while Fet was interceding, "If you will talk in that way I shall box your ears." Then he left the room, begging his hosts to pardon his abrupt departure.

Tolstoy also went. At the neighboring station he wrote to Turgeneff demanding an apology. He ordered pistols and tried to provoke his rival to a duel. Turgeneff's answer, very dignified, brought the apology demanded by Tolstoy. He closed by saying that he thought it best that two men with such opposite tempers should henceforth break off all relations. Tolstoy, carried away by his anger (it was in 1861), declined to be satisfied with such an answer. He felt that he had been gravely offended. He demanded reparation by arms. He therefore repeated his provocations. His friend Fet, who attempted to pacify him, succeeded only in drawing from him this vigorous reply: "I beg of you henceforth not to write to me any more. I shall return your letters unopened, the same as I do with Turgeneff's." After these occurrences Turgeneff returned to France, where he passed the greater part of his time. Some months later, on reflection, Tolstoy regretted his violence. Seized with remorse, he sent Turgeneff a letter asking his pardon. "I find it exceedingly painful," he wrote, "to think that I have made an enemy of you."

Turgeneff forgave, as one may imagine, but the complete and definitive reconciliation took place much later.

THE CLANRICARDE PLAQUE.

A Famous Specimen of the Sixteenth Century Goldsmith's Art.

One of the greatest cinquecento jewels in the world is the Clanricarde plaque, owned by Lord Clanricarde, who is known as the "hermit peer" and who claims direct descent from the kings of Connaught. He guards with jealous care this precious example of the goldsmith's art, keeping it safe from possible thieves and the common gaze in a bank vault, to which he goes occasionally with great secrecy to feast his eyes upon its magnificence. Some years ago, by royal request, he lent it to an art exhibition in London, where it was admired and coveted by some of the greatest connoisseurs of Europe.

THEY EAT NO BREAD.

Places Where the Poorer People Have to Use Substitutes.

There are regions wherein the poorer classes of peasantry eat little or no bread. Baked loaves of bread are practically unknown in many parts of southern Austria and Italy and throughout the agricultural districts of Roumania.

It is said that in the village of the Oberstelermark, not far from Vienna, bread is never seen, the staple food being sterz, a kind of porridge made from ground beech nuts, taken at breakfast with fresh or curdled milk, at dinner with broth or fried lard and with milk again for supper. This dish is also known as heiden and takes the place of bread not only in the Austrian district named, but in Carinthia and in many parts of the Tyrol.

In northern Italy the peasants affect a substitute for bread called polenta, a porridge made of boiled grain. Polenta is not, however, allowed to "granulate," like Scotch porridge or like the Austrian sterz, but is boiled into a solid pudding, which is cut up and portioned out with a string. It is eaten cold as often as it is hot and is in every sense the Italian's daily bread.

A variation of polenta called mamaliga is said to be the favorite food of the poorer classes in Roumania. Mamaliga is like polenta in that it is made of boiled grain, but it is unlike the latter in one important respect—the grains are not allowed to settle into a solid mass, but are kept distinct, after the fashion of oatmeal porridge.—New York Herald.

FREAKS OF NATURE.

Two Queer Rock Formations on the Island of St. Helena.

There are at least two queer freaks of nature on the island of St. Helena—or, rather, four, for one of them is a group of three figures—known the world over as the "Devil's Nose" and "Lot and His Daughters." Any one who is able to study the island as it is and not run wild over the Napoleonic legends which have clustered about that "seabound rock" since the days when the "Little Corporal" was housed there in his living grave will find much that will repay for investigation, time and study.

The quaintest of the natural formations are the oddities above alluded to. The first of these imitative forms is a rocky promontory which has been known by names which signify Old Nick's nasal projection since May 21, 1502, when Juan Castella and his men sighted the island just in time to see the devil disappear beneath the waves in the best harbor, leaving his nose as a reminder of what might happen should the venturesome Spaniard seek to take possession of his Satanic majesty's favorite haunts.

"Lot and His Daughters" are three conical rocks which can only be conjured into representing a man and two women by a strong play of the imagination. According to the views of some writers they are weather worn statues of colossal size, probably the work of some aborigines of the island. Their gigantic size, however, would seem to preclude this idea. When or by whom they were dubbed "Lot and His Daughters" no authority has ventured to say.

CONJURING BIRDS.

Trick Sparrows of Hongkong and One of Their Feats.

The famous Chinese conjuring birds are Java sparrows. At almost any corner in Hongkong astute old Chinamen may be seen putting the birds through their tricks for the benefit of strangers.

Each birdcage has a sliding door, and just outside this is a pack of little cardboards, each containing a picture, and a small pot holding half a dozen grains of rice.

When the stranger, pursuant to the suggestion of the owner, hands over the customary coin this is placed with the pack of cards at the cage door. Then the owner will undo the fastening of the door. The bird, eying the coin, then the cards, then the coin again, as if he thought his performance too cheaply valued, descends from his perch, opens the door with his beak, hops outside, draws a card from the pack and passes it to his master. He receives in reward one grain of rice.

The man takes the little picture from the case received from the bird and hands it to the stranger to inspect. He then returns it to the case, accompanied by the tiniest flat slip of bamboo, and shuffles the case up with the rest of the pack. The bird descends and selects a case, and the stranger opens it, to find the identical one containing the bamboo.

How can this be accounted for? The only possible way of explaining is that the bamboo slip is slightly scented.—Exchange.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IS YOUR LAXATIVE

Best Liver and Bowel Cleanser and Stomach Regulator in the world—Work while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

Yesterday morning several of the local hotels had to serve customers ordering draught beer with bottled ale as pipes conveying the amber fluid from hogsheads in the cellar to the taps were frozen solid.

Yesterday's Drunks.

At yesterday's police court Alexander Baskin pleaded guilty to having too much of Peterborough's bottled hilarity. He was fined $2. A blacksmith was assessed $10 for having dallied too long and frequently with the booze. The magistrate handed out to him a well timed and well deserved caution as to the evils of that glass too much.

A Cheap Farmer.

Yesterday morning a near by farmer, one of the class that has been holding up the poor of this city for 45 cents a dozen for eggs and 18cents a pound for poultry, had a load of produce on the market square. With a brisk wind blowing and the mercury down to 31 below zero this man unhitched his horses and gave them a bunch of hay from his sleigh instead of taking the steeds to a hotel or barn.

Firemen Kept Busy.

Yesterday morning at 10 o'clock the firemen answered a call to the Children's Shelter, corner of Charlotte and Stewart streets. There was no damage. At 11 o'clock they were again called out to the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company's woodshed on Aylmer street. An over-heated box on the line-shaft of the machinery started a fire in some sawdust. A few pails of water extinguished the blaze.

Mr. Brown Improving.

The many friends of Mr. John Brown, ex-reeve of North Monaghan, who has been laid up in Nicholls Hospital, suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia, will be pleased to learn that he is improving. It is believed that the crisis has been passed and that his rapid recovery may now take place.

Cox, formerly of Peterborough, from the position of President of the Canada Life Assurance Company, and of the appointment as his successor of Mr. E. W. Cox, his eldest son, and for some years past General Manager of the company.

Bad Half Dollars Going.

Citizens should keep a sharp lookout for counterfeit half dollar pieces which are in circulation at different points in Ontario. The coins are fairly good imitations of the genuine, but a close observer would soon detect something wrong. They have a smooth feeling similar to lead. The milling on the edge is not good, and the King's head is tilted back rather more than is the case on the genuine issue. They are dated 1912.

A Distressing Case.

Yesterday a citizen informed The Times that he came across a distressing case of poverty. A family consisting of father, mother and four little children were discovered in the south end of the city, without fuel of any kind, and very little food. The father was out of work and is laid up. He at once relieved their immediate wants, including a load of wood. A number of kind-hearted citizens contributing.

Yesterday's Cold Spell.

Yesterday's temperature somewhat resembled that of Alaska. During the night previous the mercury sank to 37 below zero. At 7 o'clock it had risen to 33 below which is the coldest spell we have had for two years, when the mercury sank to 34 below. Many citizens had their water pipes frozen and the plumbers were kept constantly on the jump. It is somewhat surprising that in a majority of cases where pipes running to kitchen boilers froze, it was almost invariably the hot water pipes that were most affected.

GIRLS! THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Bring back its gloss, lustre, charm and get rid of dandruff—Try the moist cloth.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine, and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

SHOE PRICES MAY SOON SOAR

New York, Jan. 13.—In the opinion of speakers at the annual convention of the National Shoe Retailers Association. Which closes with a banquet to-night, the retail price of shoes may soon reach $10 per pair.

"Pure shoe laws" already adopted in twenty-five States, and several measures of the same nature now pending in Congress were given as the chief causes for increasing the prices of foot wear. Both speakers and a majority of the 300 delegates present denounced the legislation which would cause all shoes not made entirely of leather to be stamped "adulterated" or "substitute leather."

The shoe retailers were told that if all shoes were made of all leather, 2,000,000 more hides per annum would be required in this country alone, and with hides practically in control of the larger packing houses it cannot be foreseen to what height shoe prices might soar.

VOL. XLI, NO. 12 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, JAN. 15, 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

CONDITION OF ONTARIO'S PRIME MINISTER REMAINS UNCHANGED

No Evidence of a Gain—He is for the Time-Being Holding His Own.

Bulletin, New York, Jan. 14.—The bulletin issued at 11.30 a.m. to-day by Drs. Biggs and Pyne relative to the condition of Sir James Whitney, read as follows:

"Sir James Whitney's condition remains the same as yesterday."

After a sleep of 11 hours Sir James Whitney was, for a while, much brighter mentally this morning.

Dr. Hermann Biggs, of New York, and Dr. R. A. Pyne, the Premier's Cabinet colleague and medical adviser, were unable to conclude this morning a favorable sign and their bulletin this morning indicated that little more than a halt in the retrogression in the patient's state, which came Sunday, could be registered.

The doctors could not say whether the cessation of the sinking, which had been noted marked a beginning of the [illegible] towards an improvement. At one o'clock there was no evidence of a step forward.

Sir James fell asleep at eleven last night and did not awaken until late this morning. His doctors who usually begin their morning tests about 9.30 did not disturb him. When the Premier awoke, he recognized Lady Whitney and the doctors and asked what day it was. After being told, he relapsed into a silence, passing into a delirium, emerging from it at intervals when the members of his party entered or left the room.

WIFE WORTH $1 HUSBAND $6,000

Strong Contrast in Two Judgments Given in B.C. Supreme Court.

Vancouver Jan. 14.—John Simpson was yesterday awarded one dollar in the Supreme Court for the loss of his wife when the steamer Chelohsin went down a year ago off Vananda Harbor. This reward is in strong contrast to the verdict given in same court previous day, when a woman was given $6,000 for the loss of her husband in the same disaster.

Albert Tropt, a rancher near Tofield, Alta., formerly of Creemore, Ont., shot himself.

TOUGHEST KID JESSE COLEMAN IS IN TOILS

Lancaster, N.Y., Jan. 14.—Jesse Coleman of this village, also of several other neighboring places, including Rochester, Buffalo and Elmira Reformatory, is in trouble, so a report from Rochester informs his friends, if not "admirers" here—the latter including the police of this place. Jesse Coleman is well known here and is styled "the toughest kid in Western New York." He started his lurid career of wrong doing here. His friends assert that he is a kleptomaniac—and others stoutly assert that he is the champion liar and slickest hotel beat and sneak in the business. To-day he is to be arraigned in Rochester police court for the alleged theft of an overcoat—and thereby hangs this o'er true tale. Coleman has posed in Buffalo and elsewhere as an actor, a newspaper man and other characters for which he is poorly equipped. He is now behind the bars in the Flower City for the second time in as many months.

Scion of a respectable family, he chose the career of a charlatan in preference to opportunities offered to him by his parents, he said at the conclusion of his story. Here are a few of his escapades as recounted by Detectives Andrews and Signer of the Rochester force:

Picked the pocket of a man in Lancaster, N.Y., and was sentenced to the State Industrial School at Rush for larceny.

Paroled from that institution after several months and was picked up in Buffalo on a charge of violating his parole.

Escaped from the school after being sent back and returned to his home in Rochester.

MORAL ADVERTISE

Burlington, N. J. Jan. 14.—Mrs. Beatrice Gordon, widow put an "ad" in a paper for boarders. A man in Homesville, Neb., read it and Mrs. Gordon has been advised that she is the missing heir to an estate of several hundred thousand dollars.

FOUR WERE INJURED WHEN TWO GRAND TRUNK TRAINS MET

Hamilton Flyer Ran Into Stalled Train in Toronto Yards—Injuries Are Slight

Toronto, Jan. 14.—Miss Mary Porter, of Barrie, severe bruises to the side and face.

Robert Raycroft, of Sarnia, a scalp wound.

James Bailey, chef, University avenue, city, severe cut under eye, abrasion of face, and wrenched shoulder.

William Barnett, assistant chef on diner, bruised and injured leg.

Toronto, Jan. 14.—The failure of the train crew on the Grand Trunk North Bay train to give the necessary protection to their train, is said to have been the cause of a rear-end collision in Toronto terminals at John street yesterday afternoon, in which four people were slightly injured, when the Grand Trunk Hamilton train, No. 88 crashed into the standing North Bay train.

The North Bay train was held up at the bridge waiting for the semaphore before entering the Union Station.

The stalled train was hidden from the view of the Hamilton train by clouds of steam that were blowing across the tracks. Before the Brakeman on the North Bay train could get to the rear of his train the Hamilton crashed into it.

Coaches Telescoped.

The engine of the Hamilton train ploughed halfway through the dining-car on the rear of the North Bay train, also caused two passenger coaches to telescope for a distance of six feet.

The passengers on the North Bay train were more or less frightened and shaken up, but only four people were injured and none of them seriously. Dr. Gordon Rice, Grand Trunk surgeon was called and attended to the passengers.

The three men who were hurt were in the diner, while Miss Porter was in the car behind the baggage car. The sudden jolt threw the light coaches up against a heavy baggage car, causing them to buckle up.

PURR OF WIRELESS HEARD FROM THE MISSING COBEQUID

Gives Faint Hope to The Searching Ships in the Bay of Fundy

St. John, N.B., Jan. 14.—The faint purr of the "S.O.S." call from the missing steamer Cobequid was picked up at several points in the Bay of Fundy at 10 o'clock this morning and revived hope for the safety of the vessel and 120 people on board.

The wireless was not sufficiently strong or continuous to give the location of the vessel, but indicated that she had survived a tempestuous night, and that there was still a chance for her passengers and crew.

The Canadian Northern Liner, Royal George, caught the cry of distress three times and heard the Lady Laurier replying and ask for the location of the Cobequid, but no response from the Cobequid could be made out. The Lady Laurier went out from Halifax yesterday to take part in the search and ought to be near the wreck to-day.

The wreckage washed ashore at Yarmouth consisted of cabin fittings, doors, a ladder and a signboard worded "double propeller, keep clear."

CANADIAN WHEAT FOR NEW ZEALAND

Montreal Jan. 14.—It will only be a short time until New Zealand imports her wheat from Canada, instead of growing her own crop, said J. B. Clarkson, of Christchurch, New Zealand. New Zealand is suited for live stock ranching and dairying rather than wheat growing, so there is no reason why in return for these products Canada should not send us her wheat.

Mr. Clarkson leaves for Winnipeg shortly where he will meet the Winnipeg Board of Trade. "The plan to be discussed," he said "[illegible] the approaching of the Dominion Government with a view of having them subsidize a special steamship company operating between the two Dominions, and serving to encourage this exchange of of agricultural products."

NAVAL BILL PROBABLY OFF PROGRAM FOR PARLIAMENT

House of Commons Opens To-morrow, the Last Time the Duke of Connaught Will Officiate

Ottawa, Jan. 14.—The third session of the twelfth Parliament of Canada will open to-morrow when his Royal Highness the Governor-General will summon Canadian legislators to a consideration of the program of business which the Government has prepared. From the social standpoint the opening on Thursday, and the drawing room on Saturday night following, will it is expected, equal in magnificence anything which has gone before. The fact that this may be the last occasion upon which the Duke of Connaught will preside will attract a large attendance to both of the more or less social events of the opening. It is expected however that the event will lose some of the attractiveness from the fact the Duchess will not be present in the Red Chamber when the legislators are summoned to listen to the speech from the throne. Her somewhat delicate condition of health is the reason

Just Dog Tired

How often one hears this expression from tired mothers with either domestic or social cares. Backaching pains darting through your body like bolts of hot lightning. Head aching and back rotten. This means only acid poison; no matter what happens mother must be at hand from morning till night, pain or no pain. Sanol will help you, mother. At all druggists. Manufactured by Sanol Mfg. Co., Winnipeg.

Got in Wrong

Jones observed an old lady sitting across the room.

"For mercy's sake!" he remarked to Robinson, "who is that extraordinarily ugly woman there?"

"That," Robinson said "is my wife."

Jones was taken aback, but moved up front again.

"Well," he said persuasively, "you just ought to see mine!"

CONGREGATIONAL MEETING OF ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Review of the Year's Work Shows That the Church Has Prospered

The annual congregational meeting of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church took place last night in the lecture hall of the church. There was a good attendance of church members and adherents.

After devotional exercises, conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. Pogue, Mr. James Connell was voted to the chair. The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and adopted. The report of Session was presented by Mr. Shook. The total membership is now 1010. Family worship was commended as specially desirable in view of the needs of our young people.

Mr. Crane presented the Board of Managers' report.

Mr. Keyes gave the Sunday School report. The school comprised four departments: the primary, intermediate, Bible class and Chinese departments. Seventeen members of the school had joined the church during the year.

The financial report of the Sunday school was given by Mr. Fisk. Three hundred dollars had been expended for school purposes, and nearly five hundred raised for missions.

Mr. Patterson gave the report of the Missionary Committee. $5,072 had been raised, which by vote of the meeting was allocated as suggested by the Toronto Board. Five thousand eight hundred dollars was promised for 1914.

Mr. Moore read the Ladies' Aid report. At eight meetings there had been an average attendance of only eleven. Three hundred and seventy-one dollars had been raised.

Mrs. Harstone gave the report of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society. There were 126 members. The average attendance was 27. Two useful members, Mrs. Geo. Bebie and Mrs. Wm. Taylor had been called home during the year.

Mr. McLean gave the Guild report. There had been an average attendance of 30. Mission study was pursued during the winter, for the summer a tennis club had been formed and had paid its way.

The Fraser Mission Band report was presented by Mr. Cowan. The average attendance was 19.

Mr. Allan gave the choir report. There were thirty seven members, but more bass voices were needed.

Mr. Medill and Mr. Keyes addressed the church as a deputation from the Sabbath school, urging the inadequacy of the present building. After an interesting discussion, in the course of which someone mentioned that a building costing about twenty thousand dollars was needed, Messrs. Medill, Keyes and Crane were appointed a committee to investigate and report.

Messrs. W. H. Hill, Medill and McLean were re-elected auditors.

Messrs. Logan and [illegible] were re-elected representatives to the Laymen's Missionary Council.

Messrs. Keyes, Connell, Ferguson and [illegible], the retiring members of the Board of Managers, were re-elected. Messrs. H. Patterson and J. A. Johnston were elected to fill additional vacancies.

HIS GIRL FRIENDS.

Mark Twain Dearly Loved Children as Playmates.

THE ANGEL FISH SOCIETY.

A Delightful and Touching Story About Little Margaret, One of Its Members, and the Genial Humorist—A Pretty Compact and a Quaint Letter.

Like many another great man, Mark Twain was fond of children. He never outgrew childhood, and he always chose young playmates where they were to be found. He formed curious societies of these girl friends. Back in the nineties, when he was living in Europe, he created a club which was to consist of one (only one) girl in each country of the globe, the duty of said member being to write occasionally to the chief officer, who faithfully replied to these random and far faring messages. Of course these little girls were swept into womanhood presently, but even to the last years of his life the member who signed herself "[illegible]" remained faithful to the law.

Another club of girls, little girls, became one of the chief interests during his final years. It had its beginning in Bermuda during one of his frequent visits to those happy islands. It was called the Angel Fish club, after a gorgeous swimmer of those waters, and he gave to each member an angel fish pin as a society badge. It was a [illegible] club, and on his return to America he elected other members, enough to make twelve in all.

His home at Redding, Conn., Stormfield, had been originally named Innocence at Home, and as Angel Fish headquarters Innocence at Home it always remained. Members with their parents visited him there, and the billiard room, where the [illegible] likely to spend most of their time knocking the balls about, under the chief member's instruction, was called the Aquarium, and gay prints of many Bermuda fishes were hung along the walls to carry out the idea. Each member had the privilege of selecting one of these as her patron fish and of identifying it with her name.

It was in Bermuda one day when he was walking along the beach with one of his angel fish members that he picked up a small iridescent double shell, delicately hinged together. He separated it and handed his companion half.

REGARDING THE BABY.

Nephew Asks His Aunt to Explain the New Arrival's Words.

Stevensville, Wis., May 2.—Dear Aunt Eleanor—Am somewhat worried about Ruth Carr today.

She raised the first rumpus incident to her young life this morning when nurse bathed her before she (the baby) had her breakfast.

Knowing, as we do, that from time immemorial it has been held by all savants as almost fatal to health to breakfast first and then bathe immediately afterward, this tendency on the part of our daughter is a source of the greatest anxiety to Margaret and myself.

I wish, dear aunt, you would kindly advise us.

Is it not altogether likely, however, that, being, as she is, an unprecedentedly remarkable baby, an absolute reversal of the ordinary and accepted usages may be the very thing necessary to her successful rearing?

Any advice from you on this point will be thankfully received.

I know that you are the merest heretic in anything savoring of—I can't just now recall what that bunch calls itself, but it's a cult, and they imagine they have been on earth before in the guise of Emperor Constantine or Julius Caesar or Napoleon or Guy Fawkes or chipmunks or rabbits and things of that sort. But when a baby aged ten days and weight eleven pounds comes across at you with such remarks as "wuggidgy" and "woogogly" how can one help speculating as to whether she may not in some former incarnation have acquired quite a little smattering of Volapuk or Esperanto?

Far be it from me, however, to judge. I'm af. nephew,

EBENEZER.

"That," said a distinguished author, pointing to a little red headed impossibility aged six who was standing on his head in the middle of the drawing room during the musicale—"that is my second edition."

She was the lady of his choice, and he took no pains to conceal it. "I'll bet you don't know what day tomorrow is," she announced suddenly. "Why, Tuesday, of course," he answered, in a puzzled tone. "Oh, I don't mean that kind of a day. I knew you didn't know." "What do you mean?" he replied helplessly. She pretended to be hurt. "It will be my birthday." "Congratulations, Alice! Congratulations!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "And how old are you?"— "That's for you to find out," she answered, laughing. "Well, I'll bet you I know." "You do?" "Yes, and I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll send you a rose for every year of your life. How will that do?" At the florist's he found the assistant unoccupied. "Send Miss C[illegible] eighteen of your best roses tomorrow morning. You know the address. Eighteen. Your best. Understand?" The boy understood. Half an hour later the proprietor was looking over the order book. "What did Mr. G[illegible]ham order today?" "Eighteen roses, sir," answered Willie. "Eighteen! He's a pretty good customer. Throw in a dozen more."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Our Point of View

[illegible] Cook's welcome in London was so frigid that it probably reminded him of his experiences in the Arctic regions.

It is no violation of confidence to say that the number of people who are worried about their income tax is much less than those who are worried about the income.

The Globe says the art of [illegible] is dying out and we are inclined to believe that if prices of food continue to rise the art of eating will suffer a like fate.

—o—

Now comes the story that a New York man has invented an odorless whiskey. This will be good news for those who swore off on New Year's day and are already suffering from an aggravating dryness.

If the price of leather continues to advance it will only be a question of time when a leather medal will become a valuable bit of jewelry to be handed down as an heirloom in the family.

While we are criticising feminine fashions it is well to remember that men are already wearing green hats with a feather and a bow in the back. Furthermore, it is announced that hair ribbons for men is the latest Parisian fad. What we are coming to is what we would like to know.

THE PUBLIC DINNER.

It is one of the signs of the [illegible], to be taken for what it is worth, that criticism is [illegible] upon the public dinner habit. [illegible] as the criticism is [illegible], is because the dinner had [illegible] exploited too much and instead of being a [illegible], freed [illegible] alliance with schemes of various kinds and devoted to [illegible] promotion, as well as the satisfaction of an appetite, [illegible] fallen under suspicion, owing to the way in which it has been employed to promote personal projects.

The dinner habit may need [illegible] some way, according to the mood and [illegible] of the times. The public dinner has been an institution [illegible] a great many centuries and [illegible] it will continue to [illegible] its place, even if it is at [illegible] something of a bore to a [illegible], at least, of those who [illegible] the habit.

[illegible] the great cities [illegible] most [illegible] constitution and the best of temper to follow the course of dinner giving that is practiced or one must have nothing else to do.

Nevertheless there are great occasions, and there ought to be such, wherein the sentiments of leading men expressed at a dinner company find first utterance and not infrequently lead to results of importance.

SOMEWHAT STARTLING.

Professor Dean of the Ontario Agricultural College, seems to be a pessimist who "views with alarm" the commercial morality of Canada. Here is what the professor recently said to his students, young men about to enter into the battle of life: "It is doubtful if an honest man can successfully compete under present conditions of trade." The lecturer in his remarks is understood to allude to the fact, or to the alleged fact that there is no such thing as commercial freedom, which implies competition in trade to-day, that practically all trade is in the hands of combinations, and that in order to succeed the young man must by hook or crook secure admission within the circles which control business and prices from one end of the country to the other. We wonder whether the commission which now is supposed to be looking into the matter of the high cost of living will discover whether the statement of Professor Dean is true in substance or in fact.

Strengthens the Throat, Assists Public Speakers

CATARRHOZONE IS THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE AGE FOR WEAK THROAT, HOARSENESS, Etc

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit is no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him, and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throat-weakness or catarrh.

WARD NAMES

Suggestions from correspondents regarding names for city suburbs.

HE LIKES THE IDEA.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I like the idea suggested by The Times, that the city suburban districts should have nice, distinctive names. The Fifth Ward is now referred to as East City. Why should this part of our fair town be made to look like an orphan, by referring to it as "East." If the other sections were referred to as "North," "West," and "South," it would be all right. Why not give the different sections distinctive names, such as some of the larger cities do. Toronto has its Parkdale, Rosedale, Riverdale, Deslands, High Park, etc. We have a couple of old names that has been associated with the city since its incorporation as a town. In the North we have Auburn—a name that has been made famous by Goldsmith's poem. Then there is the good old name, Ashburnham—a name that has been known from the time it was incorporated as a village. For the West side we have the new and very appropriate name, Victoria Heights; North we have Jackson's Park. Why not change it to the good old Irish name Vale of Avoca.

South we have the district of Browntown and Byersville. How would one of the following names do for this section: Electradale, Willowdale, Riverside or South Drive? By giving the different sections of the city distinctive names, it would make it much easier for a stranger to locate himself.

Perhaps other citizens may suggest names more appropriate than any of the above.

REMEMBER THE POOR.

Now winter is come, with its cold, chilly breath,
And the verdure has dropped from the trees;
All nature seems touched with the finger of death,
And the streams are beginning to freeze.
When wanton young lads o'er the river can slide,
And Flora attends us no more;
When in plenty you sit by a pleasant fireside—
Then you should remember the poor.

When the cold feathered snow does in plenty descend,
And whiten the prospect around
When the keen cutting wind from the north shall attend,
Hard chilling and freezing the ground,
When the hills and the dales are all candied in white,
When the rivers congeal to the shore,
When the bright twinkling stars shall proclaim a cold night,
Then remember the state of the poor.

When the poor harmless hare can be traced to the wood
By her footsteps, indented in snow,
When the lips and the fingers are starting in blood,
When the marksmen, a-cock-shooting go;
When the shy robin redbreast approaches the cot,
And the icicles hang at the door,
When the bowl smokes with something reviving and hot,
That's the time to remember the poor.

When a thaw shall come and the waters increase,
And the rivers shall insolent grow;
When the fishes from prison obtain a release;
When in danger the travelers go;
When the meadows are hid with the proud swelling flood,
When the bridges are seen no more;
When in health you enjoy everything that is good—
Can you grumble to think on the poor?

Soon the day will be here when a Saviour was born,
All the world should agree as one voice;
All nations unite to salute the blessed morn,
All the ends of the earth shall rejoice,
Grim death is deprived of his all-killing sting,
And the grave is triumphant no more,
Saints, angels, and men hallelujah shall sing,
And the rich shall remember the poor.

TEN BELOW AT THE FALLS

Niagara Falls N. Y. Jan. 14.—Ten degrees below zero was the official temperature registered here this morning at 7 o'clock. This was the coldest day in this section in at least six years. The frigid temperature was driven before a brisk west wind and few ventured out unless compelled to do so. It was the first time in many years that pedestrians watch ed each others ears as they walked along and not a few [illegible] were [illegible] and given a snow bath. Strange as it may seem no [illegible] has yet spanned the gorge below the Falls. There is but little floe ice in the Upper River, which accounts for the non-appearance of the bridge.

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,200,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,934
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1908 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in due course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the goodwill from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $[illegible]. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, [illegible] of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense at any point in Canada, in the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephoned at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

Women's Ailments Caused by Neglect

Proper Treatment Will Quickly Bring Back Robust Health and Good Spirits.

Women are on the whole more sickly than men. One reason is that their system is more complicated; another and more important reason is they put off measures of relief too long. At the beginning, constipation is the cause of nine-tenths of women's ailments. The blood becomes weakened and polluted — the nerves suffer and a run-down condition takes root.

Because of their remedies of action as a system regulator, no medicine for women can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The kidneys quickly respond to the remedial action of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the result is as you would expect—pain in the back and side, shortness of breath, and bad color disappear—the functions of the body then operate normally, congestion and pain are prevented and perfect health returns. Thousands of happy women say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the greatest and best blood-purifier, the finest complexion renewer, the most certain regulating medicine known. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers, 25c. per box, five for $1.00, postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

Written by
DR. DAVID H. REEDER,
Chicago, Ill.

TYPHOID FEVER AND ITS HOME TREATMENT: At this season of the year there are nearly always more cases of typhoid fever than at any other time, and for that reason it is in order for the Home Health Club to discuss the subject again. With proper home treatment typhoid becomes one of the least dangerous of fevers. In the first place, the regular hydrotherapeutic treatment for fevers, as I have often described it, should be thoroughly carried out, and then the question of diet and massage will constitute all of the necessary remaining treatment, with the exception that enemas of about one-half gallon of warm water, containing one tablespoonful of salt, should be given every night until symptoms of diarrhoea appear; then either stop them or give every other night until the typhoid discharge appears, after which the principal danger is past.

Nearly every symptom of tympanites, hemorrhage, and fever can be almost entirely prevented by a strict adherence to the fasting principle. Absolutely no food, liquid or solid, should be given until the bowel discharge above referred to has appeared (usually about the seventh or ninth day), and then it must be given in very small quantities and slowly increased. Give all the pure water the patient wants at any and all times.

It is well to remember that no accumulations, either of a healthful or unhealthful character, can take place in the system except by the consumption of food, water, or air. When the bright sunlight is admitted into our dwellings it reveals accumulations of dust, filth, or cobweb, unnoticed but for the introduction of light. Just as when "the creature" we call a disease germ has found lodgment in our human being, and forthwith kindles a big fire, we may know, but for the presence of material with which to build such fires, there would be no fever, because there is none of those materials upon which fever may feed, which are properly speaking waste or refuse from over feeding or improper living in some way. Now, although this interior fire causes intense suffering, and needs to be extinguished with all reasonable speed, yet a real service is being done for the afflicted one, because in accordance with some of the higher laws, nature is striving to "clean house" for us. We need, then, not only to secure relief from pain, but to cleanse and put into such order as will require no further renovating for a time, at least, those dwelling places where the dirt-loving bug found himself so much at home.

Opinions differ as to feeding the patient, but here reason must grasp the helm. The tongue is the correct indicator of bodily needs; and until it is no longer coated, the patient needs no food of any kind. Pure water, and that alone, will suffice every need; though, if the sufferer distinctly wishes a very little, diluted sweet milk or fresh buttermilk may be given.

Is there reason in this prescription of food? Suppose yourself carrying a heavy burden for a long and weary distance; your strength at last gives away, and you sink down exhausted. The burden you have been carrying has caused your collapse. Next, suppose some assistant is sent for, and upon arriving where you lie, at once prescribed that your burden be increased, and [illegible] go forward with it. A heavy load, such as is laid upon a poor, tired heart sometimes, might cause you to stagger along under such conditions; but, like him also, you might die suddenly from lack of breath. Would it not be wiser to lighten the burden you had borne, or, if possible, remove it entirely, and allow you to rest? Well, the burden of waste, largely unused food accumulations doubtless was the cause of your fever. Now, lay the load down utterly and leave it until all trace of the typhoid poison is gone or the mucous lining of the intestines no longer show evidence of its presence; there is no danger of starving. To the reader who does his own thinking—and members of the Home Health Club are generally such—these simple, sensible methods must appeal.

NIGHT SWEATS.—In some sickness the [illegible] night sweats will [illegible] the strength of the patient so [illegible] that all efforts to build it up [illegible] unavailing. Under the Home Health Club method of treatment a [illegible] can generally be [illegible] in one or two nights. I will [illegible] one of the [illegible] by experience. "My husband [illegible] ill, and although we usually depend entirely upon the Home Health Club Books for the treatment of everything I was so alarmed that I sent for our family physician. He is an honest as well as a skilled physician, and when he said that the case was a doubtful one I was completely prostrated with grief. When the profuse night sweats began the doctor said he could do nothing to stop them more than he was doing. I asked him if I might try the Home Health Club treatment, and he reluctantly consented, saying he was afraid a severe cold might result. I prepared the solution according to the directions given in the Book of Lectures, and sponged only a part of the body that night, and the sweating was greatly reduced, no cold. Next night sponged the entire body with it, and the night sweats were cured. My husband improved rapidly, and was soon attending to his business. The doctor was so well pleased that he copied the formula from my book for future use. The simple formula is as follows: Common vinegar, one pint; common salt, one teaspoonful; common red pepper, one teaspoonful. Mix and set on the stove to slowly steep down to one-half, then sponge the body carefully and gently, under the bed covers, so as to prevent chilling. This should be applied on going to bed at night. I have never known it to fail."

DAILY SHORT STORY

MISS HALLOWAY OF CHICAGO

And the Way She Became Mrs. Parker of New York.

By MARY WOOD.

She was so decidedly petite that even when she drew her figure to its greatest height the assumption of dignity was laughable. But her eyes sparkled dangerously as she faced the bellboy.

The bellboy was impressed. He eyed the door as if meditating escape before she proceeded to stronger methods.

"Now, see here," she exclaimed belligerently, "this is the third note I have written to the office, and I want a reply this time."

"If you would go down to the desk," the bellboy insinuated apologetically. "Mr. Parker"—

"No; I will not go down to the desk," Miss Halloway interrupted decidedly. "That head clerk Parker, or whatever name he answers to, shall come up here or I will know the reason why."

The bellboy departed promptly. "And, by the way," she called after him, "just hustle along some telegraph blanks on your way back. I have a few things to say to my father and some of his friends concerning the lack of accommodations at the Great Eastern."

"Oh, Belle, Belle," wailed Mrs. Halloway, whose ample form had collapsed in one corner of a red plush sofa, "how can you make such a disturbance? Now, if your father was only here. But the two of us alone, without a protector!" And she rolled her eyes dramatically.

"Protector fiddlesticks!" said the energetic Miss Halloway. "Have you no spirit, mother?" She began to pace the floor excitedly. "Would you be treated as a nobody—you, the wife of Thomas P. Halloway? Consider your position."

Mrs. Halloway doubtless considered her position. She was absolutely at the mercy of her daughter's scathing tongue; therefore she maintained a discreet silence.

"They must be taught the deference due to us, the Halloways of Chicago," said the girl. She was very young and possessed of the follies as well as the graces of youth.

The bellboy now reappeared, holding out a handful of telegraph blanks like a yellow flag of truce. "Mr. Parker," he averred, "he says—he's coming."

Miss Halloway seized upon the blanks and flung herself into a chair beside the writing table. "There will probably be ample time to get off the telegrams before he comes. Things don't quicken at the Great Eastern."

"But, Belle," Mrs. Halloway protested after the bellboy had closed the door in reverential fashion, "had you not better slip on another waist. Mr. Parker"—

"Mr. Parker," her daughter interrupted contemptuously, "is a hotel clerk, a servant. This dressing sack is good enough for him."

She dashed off a telegram and read it aloud reflectively:

Dear Dad—We are being shamefully treated at the Great Eastern. If things are not remedied we will change to the Grand tonight. But don't worry. I am running this affair, and you can bet on me. ARABELLA HALLOWAY.

"I think that will make things hot for the Great Eastern," she said triumphantly. She did not hear the knock at the door nor its subdued opening. Her mother's voice startled her. "Belle, here is Mr. Parker, but remember"—

Mrs. Halloway's voice trailed off into a deprecating silence. Miss Halloway straightened up in her chair with the inscrutable poise of a judge about to enter sentence.

"Mr. Parker," she said imperatively, "I have called you here to complain of the treatment to which we have been subjected by this hotel." She began defiantly enough, but the words soon stumbled over each other in her vehemence. "How dare you," she asked—"how dare you put us into this stuffy back room, at eight dollars a day room, when we have always been accustomed to an eighteen dollar suite? Do you know who we are—the Halloways of Chicago? Is not our money as good as or better than other people's?"

The clerk remained silent. And now for the first time Miss Halloway looked up—far up, and encountered the serene gaze of his brown eyes.

Mr. Parker, the clerk, was tall—unusually tall. But it was not merely his inches which gave authority of bearing; it was his self confidence, his mental poise. Intuitively Miss Halloway of Chicago realized that here was a man who would always be the master of circumstances, no matter how adverse the contrivings of fate. Her judicial complacency vanished, and shame, but checked and defiant, stood as a culprit at the bar, for a twinkle lurked in the cool depths of the brown eyes as he said coolly:

"I can agree with you, Miss Halloway of Chicago, but only in part. Your money is as good as that of other people, but no better. At the Great Eastern first come must be first served, and that," with a half bow, "is why we have been forced to give this room to Miss Halloway of Chicago."

His tone was courteous, but the girl felt the sting of underlying reproof. It was a new experience for her. All her twenty years had not discovered a person who should dare to cross her. The great T. P. Halloway himself lacked the necessary courage, or, rather, he openly encouraged her willfulness as a reincarnation of his own indomitable spirit. As for Mrs. Halloway, she was always a minus quantity on such occasions as demanded firmness. She preferred to be comfortably seated and wring her hands gently. Tears came easily and in nowise interfered with her heart action or gradual increase of avoirdupois.

Now she looked entreatingly at her daughter and murmured. "Oh, Belle, don't, don't!"

Miss Halloway did not hear. Her world seemed falling about her ears. For the first time the shameful helplessness of her own overthrow [illegible]. But woman's wit came to her aid. Her lips trembled piteously, and two large tears ran down her cheeks.

This was a new method of warfare. The redoubtable Mr. Parker stood aghast, then, as became a prudent general, threw out [illegible].

"Really, Miss Halloway," he said soothingly, "the whole thing is a trifle which we have foolishly exaggerated. In the morning you will laugh at your fancied grievances."

But still the girl's head was hidden in her folded arms, and her shoulders heaved. Mrs. Halloway sobbed, swaying comfortably back and forth. "If your father were only here!" she wailed.

Mr. Parker looked from one to the other despairingly. He was a young man. A woman's tears are sacred—to the chivalry of youth. He cast discretion to the winds and capitulated.

"Don't cry, Miss Halloway," he implored; "please—don't. I think that perhaps I can arrange the matter. A personal friend of mine has one of the suites. Perhaps for you—you, I am sure I can arrange it."

"On your word and honor?" asked Miss Halloway of Chicago.

"On my word of honor," he promised solemnly.

The girl lifted her head and laughed. She had not been crying at all. "You can stop your crying, mother," she said cheerfully; "it is all over with." She turned to the astonished Mr. Parker and extended her hand frankly. "And since you have acceded to my request," she said sweetly, "let me apologize for having called [illegible]. It is a way I have, unfortunately. Of course your promise holds good?"

"Of course," replied Mr. Parker a little stiffly. He could not avoid taking her outstretched hand. "Of course," he repeated more heartily as some magnetic influence radiated from her finger tips to his. There was added respect as well as admiration in the brown eyes. He recognized her powers as a strategist.

Miss Halloway laughed. "I was, but I would not have if you had not been a gentleman. Mamma and I are very pleased to meet you, even in this informal fashion."

Mrs. Halloway beamed upon them. Peace and harmony were essential to her scheme of things.

And peace and harmony—and Mr. Parker—attended her and her daughter for the next few weeks. Mrs. Halloway beamed, Miss Halloway was radiant, Mr. Parker was ambitious—so ambitious, in fact, that Thomas P. Halloway on his advent on the scene felt called upon to interfere.

He did not hesitate, but Mr. Parker spoke first. It is a way youth has. And he did not mince matters. He struck straight from the shoulder.

"Mr. Halloway, I love your daughter; she loves me. We are going to be married. Have we your approval?"

"Not [illegible]" ejaculated the astounded T. P. Halloway. "Why, you're nothing but a hotel clerk. My daughter"— Words failed him.

Mr. Parker was quite unmoved. "She does not object," he said easily. "Some day I shall own this hotel; then you will not object."

T. P. Halloway glared at him. "I will," he snorted. "And the sooner you take yourself off the better."

"There is little to be considered," Mr. Parker insinuated gently. "She usually has her own way."

T. P. Halloway weakened visibly. "Yes, she usually does," he repeated [illegible].

And the matter of her marriage Mr. Parker insinuated gently. She did. And that is how Miss Halloway of Chicago became Mrs. Parker of New York.

Censure and Curiosity.

"Mr. Johnson," says Mr. Miggles, "I don't want to hurt your feelings, but that story you started to tell at my house last night was one no gentleman of refinement would have told in mixed company. I feel that it is my duty to express my disapproval of such conduct."

"I'm quite sorry," says Mr. Johnson. "I should have thought before beginning it. Halfway through I realized what I was telling, and, you remember, I did stop short to end the thing at once."

"Yes, I noticed it [illegible] and everybody seemed [illegible]. How does the rest of it go, Johnson?"—Chicago Post.

Handsomest Actor on the Stage.

Although he modestly disclaims any such distinction, it is nevertheless a fact that Mr. Bertram Wallis, who is appearing with such success in "Hans Brocade" at the Globe Theatre, London, has more than an average share of good looks. A big-framed, athletic looking man, standing 6 feet 3 inches, he created quite a flutter among the matinee maidens when he appeared in the title role of the "King of Cadonia" at the Prince of Wales Theatre. "I was overwhelmed," he once remarked to the writer, "with requests from ladies for my autograph, and handsome presents—photograph frames, silver ornaments, cigar-holders, and flowers—were showered upon me. I am afraid there are some people who think that an actor is something superior to the ordinary man. As a matter of fact, anyone who knows how to use sticks of grease paint can make himself handsome on the stage."

HE ASKED THE TIME.

A Question and Answer That Changed a Clerk's Position.

How many clerks measure up to the standard of the young bookkeeper in this story from Human Life? He was employed in the passenger department of a great railroad. It was just a little before lunch. Some of the clerks were putting on their coats, some leaving for the washroom, some consulting the clock; some were still busy. Suddenly the "boss" entered. He glanced about him and then approached the young bookkeeper.

"What time is it?" he asked.

The young man kept on figuring, and the boss put a hand on his desk and repeated the question.

Instantly the other looked up, surprised to see the chief at his elbow.

"I beg your pardon, were you speaking to me?" he asked.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,[illegible] bushels, making a full capacity of 2,[illegible] bushels. There are in this new building [illegible] concrete tanks, [illegible] feet in diameter and [illegible] feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately [illegible] bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interspace bins hold approximately [illegible] bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

How to Arrange the Garden.

Put the small fruits and permanent vegetables (asparagus, rhubarb, herbs) at one end of the garden. Put strawberries around the plowable land.

Run the rows north and south so the sun will shine on both sides of every plant.

Make a path three feet wide or more along two sides of the garden at right angles to the rows. Have no path in the center. Make a path a foot wide between every five rows of small vegetables.

Put the tall vegetables (corn and pole beans) where they will not shade the small vegetables—that is, at the north end of the garden.

Use the warmest, highest and best drained spot for the earliest crops—viz., the first sowing of peas, with spinach, lettuce and radishes between the rows.—Country Life in America.

One of the most important landmarks in southern California, the old adobe house southeast of the Raymond hotel, South Pasadena, Cal., is crumbling, and efforts are being made to keep the structure intact. A MINING STOCK TIP.

When Paid to Get It, and Then He Wouldn't Use It.

"I saw the other day what was for me a new dodge for parting the unsophisticated from their cash in exchange for worthless mining stock," relates Frederic S. Isham, the author. "It happened in a little mining camp in Canada.

"A fortune teller had pitched his tent opposite a 'broker's' shop, where a certain stock—say the Victorius 'mine,' not even a prospect—was being boosted. Having nothing better to do, one or two of us strolled into the fortune teller's place.

"He was the most plausible, persuasive and mystical kind of a mortal.

"'You are going to make a great deal of money,' he said to me after impressive preliminaries. 'Weren't you thinking of buying a block of mining stock today?'

"'No, I wasn't, but I was invited to buy some.'

"He went into another trance. 'I can't quite see it, what stock you are going to buy, but it begins with a V—the Victor?—yes, that seems it or like it—almost it. I can't quite tell any more. Only if you buy it you'll be very rich—sell for ten for one in a month—Victor, or something like it, is going to 60, and'—

"At this stage the fortune teller awoke. He came out of his trance professing not to know what he had been saying. We paid him and went out. Only we didn't buy any Victor or Victorius.

"The last I heard of the fortune teller the authorities were looking for him and his pal, the broker. Needless to say, neither has been found yet. They did very well, however, while they lasted—cleaned up twenty thousand or so."—New York Sun.

Personal Honesty in England.

In his annual report the chief constable of Liverpool says that "in every relation of life there are indications that there is a general decay of personal honesty." He argues that crime, instead of decreasing, is actually increasing in England. The crimes of [illegible] against the person he thinks have lessened, but crimes against property—the crimes of civilized man—have increased. Further, he says, "There is [illegible] which is the initial stage of dishonesty, more carelessness about the honesty of the means employed in getting the better of somebody else which is the principal object of so many transactions between man and man."

Stole Bank Book.

Kingston, Jan. 9.—A 16-year-old boy walked into the Merchants' Bank, and, producing a bank book, asked the clerk to make out a cheque for $30 in his favor. He signed the check, and the money was about to be given him, when one of the clerks, who was watching and who knew the owner of the bank book, intervened. The lad was then questioned, but took to his heels. He was arrested by Constable Arniel, who found that he had stolen the bank book from a Queen's student named Pierce, who boards with the lad's mother. He signed Pierce's name. He will be arraigned in the juvenile court on a charge of forgery.

Can Cure Cancer.

Sir A. P. Gould, senior surgeon to the Middlesex Hospital, lecturing before the Royal College of Surgeons on "Cancer," said that when the biologist knew, with a knowledge akin in its sweep and accuracy to that of the astronomer, the laws that govern cell growth, he would have power to prevent, to control, and to cure cancer.

Extravagant to Buy All.

"Would you buy a Legislature?" inquired the patriotic young man, indignantly.

"If you mean a whole Legislature," answered Senator Sorghum, "I will say promptly and emphatically that I would not. It would be a needless extravagance. A little more than half the Legislature is plenty for all practical purposes."

Title of Queen Mother.

It is many years since the title of queen mother, by which Queen Alexandra will in future be known, has been borne by the widow of an English king. The consort of William IV. became, of course, at his death queen dowager, while the wives of the four Georges all died before their husbands. The last queen mother, in fact, was Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I., who lived for years after her son's restoration to the throne. For a previous instance we have to go back to Queen Elizabeth Woodville, widow of Edward IV. and mother of the infant king who was smothered with his brother in the Tower of London.—[illegible]

LIFE IN NEW YORK

How It May Run in a Deep Rut in the Matter of Locality.

LAMENT OF A MAN WHO MOVED

The Homesickness That Came With Working Uptown After Twenty Years of Routine Travel to and From and in the Downtown District.

There are thousands and thousands of men in New York city whose business has been confined to one district for twenty years or more, whose daily routine seldom deviates, who are practiced in travelling by a certain train every day in the week, who reach their offices [illegible] at a regular hour and take up their daily grind and hold to it until the hour of closing. Many of these men unconsciously get to know and make friends of people whose names they never learn. They become attached to localities in a strange sort of way and do not realize how strong is the attachment. Here is the story of one of them into whose life there has come a change through moving that startles and surprises him and throws a quaint light upon some of the city's people.

"In the twenty years that I was downtown," the man said in telling his experience, "I was in the habit, weather permitting, of taking a walk after the luncheon hour every day in some street between City Hall and the Battery. I have footed every bit of available ground in that territory. What marvelous changes have come in those twenty years! How many signs on buildings have changed in that time! How many houses have been pulled down! How many new ones have gone up, some of them towering skyward, to take the places of the landmarks?

"I got to know the lower end of town so well I could shut my eyes and make a mental picture of many of the blocks and see the names on the buildings. If I wanted any article, from shoelaces to anything elaborate, I knew exactly where to get them. If some particular dish was desired I knew where it could be served and just what it would cost.

"A great city never stands still. It is as restless as the great deep. But the man who becomes a part of it does not think until he gets away from the part of it where he has done business what the changes are. When I began my strolls there were no tunnels under the two rivers. In the years that have drifted away great bridges have been constructed between Manhattan and Long Island. It does not seem long since I used to [illegible] of the elevated system, yet so gradually did the old order pass that I do not distinctly recall when the present system was installed.

"The changes that took place in business firms were interesting. Many, many times I have seen the name of [illegible]

[illegible]

"I had to change my hour and route for coming to business. [illegible]

[illegible]

"And that makes me think. I came to know by their faces most of the passengers who boarded that train at my station. I knew where most of them got off. Now that I am in new quarters in a new section I miss all those people with whom I traveled for years. Do they miss me, I wonder?

Local Men at Lindsay.

Lindsay Post: Can the town council refuse to issue a license to a moving picture house? This is the problem which confronts the town council and which evoked considerable discussion last night. Pepper Sauce in Demand.

A local hotelman was yesterday heard saying that in the past two days he had had more calls for "pepper sauce" than he had served in any three months previously. Pepper sauce, it might be explained, is as denoted by its name, a preparation of alcohol and small red peppers that is used in draught ale in cold weather.

Local Barber's Hard Luck.

Yesterday a local barber started a very sore cheek. Whilst returning at 1 a.m. from the very successful barbers' banquet to his home this tonsorialist slipped on the icy pavement and struck his face. In this connection it might be explained that the banquet was a strictly non-alcoholic function. To add to his misfortune the barber when reaching home found that the injured cheek had been nipped by the frost.

Destitution at Lindsay.

Lindsay Warder: There appears to be more poverty in town than people are aware of this winter, or at least more has come under notice. A north ward citizen reported a case to the Warder yesterday which is pitiful in the extreme, and some charitably disposed person or the county authorities should look into it at once. The man is one of a blind man, who for many years has made a living by peddling different small wares but of late business drifted away.

Was Kept in Quarantine.

Mr. Wm. Barry, representing the Berlin Lion Brewery, was in the city yesterday calling on his numerous customers here. In conversation with The Times reporter, Mr. Barry related a laughable, but to him a somewhat tragic experience he had last December in the town of Berlin. MOTHER! THE CHILD IS COSTIVE, BILIOUS

Don't hesitate! A laxative is necessary if tongue is coated, breath bad or stomach sour

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful today often saves a sick child tomorrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that it's little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." [illegible]

NO MENTION OF NAVY AT OPENING OF PARLIAMENT

Speech From the Throne Omits it and Also the Highways Bill—Borden Waits for Reform of Senate

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—Parliament re-opened this afternoon after a recess lasting nearly seven months. In the face of snow flurries with the weather somewhat moderated, but still unusually cold, his Royal Highness and staff escorted by the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, heads bowed against the wind, and lance pennants whipping in the breeze, swept up Parliament Hill and stopped before the main door. The Governor-General's Foot Guards, muffled in their great coats, came to the salute as his Royal Highness stepped down from his motor, the band played two bars of the National Anthem, and from Nepean Point the guns roared out the royal salute.

A Distinguished Gathering.

Meantime in the Senate the crowded galleries and the packed assemblage on the main floor had waited long for the coming of the Governor-General. Never has there been a more distinguished gathering at any opening of Parliament. Her Royal Highness the Princess Patricia was accompanied by Hon. Katharine Villiers and Lady Spencer Compton. They entered the senate chamber at the back of the throne, and the Princess took her place on a chair placed to the left of the dais.

His Royal Highness then proceeded in English and well modulated French to read the speech from the throne which was as follows:

The speech from the throne was in part as follows:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate:
Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I take this public opportunity of expressing to you all my deep sense of gratitude for the comfort and support that were afforded us at the time of the serious illness of the Duchess of Connaught, by the numerous messages of sympathy that were received from Canada, and by the knowledge that the hearts of so many Canadians were with us during those dark days. I can only regret that my enforced absence made it impossible for me to fully exercise the duties of my high office during a considerable portion of last year.

It gives me great pleasure to be able to congratulate you upon the remarkable expansion of Canada's trade with other countries in the past fiscal year, during which our total far exceeded that of any preceding year.

NEARLY THOUSAND MEN ARE LIVING IN ABHORRENT STATE

H. Wilson Tells of Miserable Conditions Among the Destitute—80 Men Sleeping in Single Room

Toronto, Jan. 15.—In an attempt to discover the condition of the destitute unemployed I have made an investigation among [illegible] themselves. It needs no imagination on my part to emphasize the miserable condition of nearly a thousand men living in a state abhorrent to the average citizen. The public may be assured that my statement is intended solely to disclose the misery existing among these unfortunate men.

In my visit to one lodging house I found eighty men sleeping on forms and on the floor in a room about 60 feet by 30 feet, for which accommodation they pay five cents a night. The room was stifling hot and the men say it is like the Black Hole of Calcutta. They all complain of being verminous, and only two towels are provided for their toilet. Nearly all of them are being fed at the [illegible] [illegible] one meal a day, consisting of tea and two thick slices of bread and butter. All the men are destitute and about 50 of them are in need of overcoats, collars, underclothing and boots.

Only one married man was present, but his wife and children are in [illegible]. I found one man unable to work, [illegible] [illegible] St. Michael's Hospital [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to the Salvation Army for a [illegible] he was given an order for a [illegible] of a change of [illegible]. He is being helped by a [illegible] [illegible]. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and an unemployed [illegible].

It Was Filthy.

At a second lodging house an average of 30 men are sleeping in a room without beds.

At a third lodging house there are 30 unemployed men who pay 15c a night. The accommodation is wretched in the extreme. Six men here shared a loaf of bread for supper. One man said he had worked nine hours at sawing wood and was paid 30 cents and given a meal.

CABARET SCENES ARE NOW BEING CUT FROM THE FILMS

Montreal Movie Censors Would Now Guard City's Morals.

Montreal, Jan. 15.—Montreal is not satisfied with an attempt to put the cabarets out of business; the authorities would have the citizens forget that there is such things.

The Board of Films Censors commenced to-day to cut all scenes in films which show cabaret interiors. Coincident with the local agitation regarding the cabarets, the Board of Moving Picture Censors for the Province have received during the past few days a flood of films depicting scenes of cabaret life, mostly objectionable in nature. Many of these films have been killed and in some the cabaret scenes have been eliminated. The Censors have decided that, although there may be nothing objectionable about some cabarets, the ones shown were scarcely suitable for Montreal's morals.

A LABOR WAR IN S. AFRICA

Botha Shows Firmness in Dealing With Strike

Toronto, Jan. 15.—Botha is confronted with some of the worst strikes in the history of South Africa. He has determined to meet the situation there with firmness. He has indicated that, if necessary, it will be a battle to the death with syndicalism. The alleged lack of firmness some months ago on the part of Viscount Gladstone will not be repeated, say Botha's friends. In sympathy with the railway men, the miners continue to stop work, and the reply of the Department of Mines is that they will keep the mines running with native labor.

MEN WHO ARE LIKELY TO BE MADE SENATORS NOW

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 15.—The Government's Redistribution bill is to be accompanied by a bill to increase the representation of the Western Provinces in the Senate. At present British Columbia has three and each of the Prairie Provinces four. It is the intention to place the four Provinces on an equal basis of representation in the Upper House, and to add three to British Columbia and two each to the others.

Already there is some speculation as to who will be appointed. While in the capital the Alberta members have discussed the matter with the Prime Minister and Senator Lougheed, and several names are mentioned. Orlando Bush, of Strathcona, one of the grand old men of the West and a life long supporter of the party, is mentioned as a strong probability. Robt. Patterson, rancher, and old timer, of MacLeod, is also a strong possibility, while Dr. Brett, of Banff, is candidate either for the Lieutenant-Governorship or for a place in the Senate.

For Saskatchewan, R. S. Lake of Qu'Appelle, is considered a certainty. Mr. Lake is one of the foremost of the Government fighters in that Province, and was appointed on the Marine Commission, which became deceased last year. Other candidates are H. W. Laird of Regina, Sam Rothwell of Moose Jaw, who fought two losing fights against Knowles: Donald McLean of Saskatchewan, and Thos. McKay of Prince Albert.

For the Manitoba positions Dr. Schaffner of Souris, and Dan Sprague lumber dealer, of Winnipeg, are mentioned as being the most likely aspirants.

Canadian coast wireless stations handled 272,000 messages last year.

SIR JAMES STILL GRASPS SLENDER THREAD OF LIFE

Possibility of a Turn for the Better is Now Very Slight—He Hangs on With Bulldog Tenacity

Bulletin, New York, Jan. 16.—At 11.30 this morning the following bulletin dealing with Sir James Whitney's condition was issued by Drs. Biggs and Pyne:

"Sir James Whitney's condition remains practically unchanged."

New York, Jan. 16.—With bull-dog tenacity, Sir James Whitney is clinging to the slender thread of life. Weak and delirious he still hangs on, where men of weaker physique, and less resolute spirit would long ago have succumbed. He remains in his present state for days, and the possibility is not altogether gone, though now very slight of a turn for the better. He is growing weaker by almost imperceptible degrees, but the fund of reserve vitality is not yet exhausted.

Remarkable Constitution.

"His constitution is remarkable," Dr. Pyne remarked. "The average man would probably have succumbed to the first serious attack. Any less vigorous person would have dropped off days ago. Sir James has remarkable courage and vigor. He always has been strong physically, with a big chest and well developed muscles."

Dr. Pyne admitted, however, that his patient was slowly failing. "Each day his condition is about the same," he declared, "but his strength is slowly ebbing."

Gradually Growing Weaker.

The patient had a reasonably good night, although he awoke somewhat earlier than usual. He was not able to take much nourishment. As the day wore on he became restless, but not in such pronounced manner. His voice was no longer heard by people passing through the corridor outside his room.

MAKE WAY TO SHORE, ASHES BREAST HIGH, SAVED BY SHIP

Kagoshima, Japan, Jan. 15.—A pathetic scene was witnessed to-day on the Island of Sakura, when a group of famished, terror-stricken people were rescued from amid steaming lava and heated boulders by a boat from a Japanese warship.

A cruiser squadron arrived here to-day and launches were at once lowered whose crews searched the Island, the contour of which has been entirely altered since the bursting into eruption on January 12 of the volcano Sakura-Jima.

The sailors did not risk landing, but made a systematic scrutiny.

All was desolation and no sign of human beings was seen until evening when an officer in one of the launches noticed something being waved in the air at a short distance from the shore.

Warm Ashes Breast High.

A detachment of men were landed and after a hard struggle succeeded in making their way through soft, warm ashes, breast high, until they reached a great rock. Cowering behind they found 23 people still living, but coated with thick dust and weakened by starvation and thirst.

Among the rescued was a school master, who had borne with him from his schoolhouse the portrait of the Emperor; the village policeman, who had saved the records of the station house and the postal clerk, with a small bag of mail.

CASH FROM WEST FLOWS TO ONTARIO

People of the East Get Rich in Western Real Estate, Says a Clergyman.

Winnipeg, Jan. 15.—While proud of any of Winnipeg's achievements, Rev. Dr. S. G. Bland is not proud of the fact that the city has produced between 30 and 40 millionaires. Speaking on the "Single Tax," he said:

"I wish we had not one millionaire. I think most of our millionaires have made their money out of real estate; doubtless it would not be true to say that all the big fortunes of Winnipeg were made in that way, but many of them were. And, mark you, the thing is only beginning. Look at the stream of wealth flowing from the West into Ontario. I am amazed at the number of people in Ontario that have got rich out of the West. They do not live here; they do not come here to work. They just spend a little money here and take a lot away. Now, they do not need to work. The west is keeping them and keeping them well. Another stream of wealth is flowing to Europe and another to the United States. I think the American speculator in Canada has almost been an unmitigated curse. True, he has brought some money here, but he has taken far more away."

Dr. Bland made the foregoing statement after expounding the economic theories on which the single tax proposal rests. Land, he had asserted, ought not to be the property of individuals. Rent, the unearned increment, was God's provision for the joint expenses of communities. Allowing it to slip into private hands was the greatest cause of poverty.

SPORT EXTRA

PETERBOROUGH VS. BELLEVILLE AT BROCK ST. RINK LAST NIGHT

Travelling by special train, and accompanied by about one hundred supporters, the Belleville Intermediates, heralded as the most dangerous team the Petes have to face in this district, invaded Peterborough last night, and made a brave fight to stop the winning streak of the locals. But in spite of all the noise made by their one hundred loyal "rooters," in spite of big advance boosts, and in spite of the fact that they put up as game a fight as Peterborough has seen in a long time, the [illegible] were out to win, and they simply could not be stopped. When the excitement had died out, and the visiting team and fans were headed for their [illegible] cars, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] back home, the truth began to dawn on them that their "pets" [illegible] [illegible]—had run up against a snag in the Peterborough intermediates, and it was a bitter blow to their [illegible]. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the last few days [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of ice that could [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] anything they had. And [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of temperature, which is no way [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] sheet, certainly affected the [illegible] and even the S.P.O. sign had to be removed—there was no "standing room."

If support counts for anything, then Peterborough should land the championship—Nuf sed.

It would be hardly right to say that it was Peterborough all the way. The play was fast and furious, and of that see-saw variety that keeps the nerves on edge. Both goal-keepers were called upon to get in the way of some "red hots" and received the applause of the [illegible] crowd time and again for their brilliant work. The pace was kept up, and the fans were in a fair way to see one of the best exhibitions of hockey in the history of Brock street rink.

From the puck-off Belleville forced matters and in less than a minute Dunning put one past Tunn for the first counter. Ten seconds later Bradley slipped another past by a neat shot from the side. Parks [illegible] had trouble with his skate and the game was delayed for a few minutes. Soon after resuming on the ice, he [illegible] scored Peterborough's first [illegible] and the crowd went wild. Dunning scored on an off-side, and the [illegible] of the fans was great. However, he repeated the trick a few seconds afterwards and tied the score, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] "on-side." Park followed up and notched number three for Peterborough. The pace was furious for a while, and after a "scrimmage" in front of the goal Whalen knocked in a goal and [illegible] made things interesting for a while. Park was still on the job, however and put the blue and white in the lead again—4 to 3.

Second Half.

With a bad shoulder Bradley retired the second period and Bond was dropped to even up. With six men aside, the pace was too fast for the Belleville boys and Park and Kelly made it 6—3 in quick succession.

Dunning was penalized and with six men against five, T. Brant scored Belleville's last goal, 6—4.

In the last [illegible] minutes of the game, Park and Dunning and Kelly [illegible] [illegible] some lightning rushes and Park scored four counters. The final score was 10—4.

For the visitors, Bradley was the pick, with Whalen a close second [illegible] [illegible].

For the Petes, Kelly and Park shone at all times. [illegible] was good too, but [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] the puck. [illegible] put up his usual good game, and the whole team show the result of persistent practice and training.

The Ward Scheme Abandoned by Council, Ald Duncan Says Money for Same Might be Better Spent in Fuel and Food for the Needy

The City Fathers met in special session last night to state what legislation shall be sought for at the next meeting of the Legislature.

There were present Mayor Buller presiding, Aldermen Gordon, Stratton, Anderson, Duncan, Johnston, McIntyre, Saunders, Green, Duffus.

It was generally conceded that it would not be wise to have the Mayor appointed a member of the Public Utilities Commission. For one thing the adding of his worship would make a board of four members, thus endangering a deadlock when important matters are being voted on by the Commission. A board of three is workable where one of four is not. Then Ald. Anderson pointed out that the Water Commissioners (or Public Utilities Commission as now known) are elected by the people, and any additional member should be so chosen.

Legislation will be asked to permit of changing the name of the Board of Water Commissioners to that of Public Utilities Commission.

City Government by Commission.

Following a suggestion in the Mayor's inaugural address, Ald. Gordon moved that Legislation be asked to permit of city government for Peterborough by a Board of Commission. After a vote of the ratepayers in favor of such a measure is taken. Said Commission to be composed of three or five members elected for one or three years, one from each ward or the whole by a general vote, as the ratepayers may decide by a plebiscite vote. The Commissioners to be paid a salary, and the chairman to be called the Mayor. The operation of such a commission to commence the 31st day of December after an affirmative vote thereon is secured.

Ald. Anderson is not satisfied that city government by commission is desirable. The system has been tried out in many places and found wanting. He thought the best form of city government is by Board of Control and Council.

Mayor Buller and Ald. Johnston were both opposed to seeking legislation for such a change in civic government until a plebiscite of the people thereon is taken to learn their wishes on the question.

Mayor Buller suggested that a public meeting should be called to discuss the two forms of city government—by commission, or by a Board of Control and Council.

Ald. Johnston incidentally remarked that a council is useful in keeping check on a Board of Control for civic government.

Council in general were opposed to applying for legislation on this question until after a plebiscite vote is taken. Consequently Ald. Gordon secured no seconder to his resolution and the project was left in abeyance.

One Free Open Air Rink.

R. G. Jamieson, secretary of the Big Brothers' Club, wrote regretting that the city had abandoned the scheme for an open air skating rink in each ward—urged reconsideration of the scheme and the club offered [illegible] towards the cost of maintaining a free city open air rink or rinks.

Ald. Green favored a plot of ground in the West for a rink, and he [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a fund for maintaining ward rinks. But he would [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of $1 of the [illegible] [illegible] for such a purpose.

Ald. Gordon [illegible] of the Ward skating rinks and offered $50 towards a fund for same.

Ald. Duffus expressed himself as strongly in favor of free city rinks, even though [illegible] of the city's [illegible] are spent thereon. It need not be [illegible] to establish one in each Ward this year, but he strongly advocated provision for one or two in the city at convenient points, to help and youngsters of [illegible] [illegible] means to enjoy necessary recreation, upon which the present high cost of living prohibits any expenditure of their available money. Towards such a project he would cheerfully subscribe $25.

Ald. Anderson contended that to the little folk sleigh riding or tobogganing is as important as skating.

Ald. Duncan thought the city might spend money to better advantage by helping out the needy with wood and something to eat.

On motion of Ald. Johnston and Anderson, skating rinks for each ward will be abandoned at present, to be taken up possibly next year. The offer of Col. Clegg to supply a lot for a rink outside the Armouries to be accepted and also that the Big Brothers' Club be invited to [illegible] care and control of same as per their letter.

The Expropriation Situation.

The Power Committee met on adjournment in private session to consider application for legislation to ease the situation, from the city's standpoint, in regard to the expropriation of the Peterborough Light and Power company's property.

(Beauty Culture)

Progressive beauty specialists are rapidly adopting the new, painless method for removing superfluous hair, and the result is that the costly and painful electric needle treatment is fast being discarded. The treatment is inexpensive and very simple—just make a paste with a little of the powdered delatone and water and apply to hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off and with it comes every trace of hair. Washing leaves the skin firm and spotless. Be sure, however, that you get the real delatone.

Hooligan—"Very distant. I was me mother's first child an' Tim was the twelfth."

By MARTHA McC. WILLIAMS.

Jenny [illegible] was the beauty of the Cane Creek neighborhood. [illegible]

[illegible]

Possibly it was [illegible] Trabue's part. The result was a very pretty quarrel and the transfer of Phil's attentions to Miss Dora Meakins.

There had been no real engagement to break. That made Phil's [illegible] all the more aggravating. [illegible]

Spring came with such a [illegible]

[illegible]

It only Trabue had spoken there and then! But he was invisible until next day. The picnic crowd gathered early. Phil was the life of it, though Dora Meakins stuck to him like a limpet. He even bowed civilly to Trabue, who hung about Jenny, his eyes downcast, his look preoccupied. The end of the school term was just three weeks ahead. Before he came to that parting of the ways he felt that he must know exactly where he stood. Jenny had grown distinctly kinder. Still, there was something in her kindness that put him farther off. [illegible] A bold stroke would do it now. A year hence would be quite too late.

While the laughter and chatter were at [illegible] he drew her apart and poured out [illegible]

[illegible]

"You've got her," Lawyer Murdock said, wringing Phil's hand. Dora Meakins turned her back and went off with her head high, but Mr. Leonard Trabue stayed not on the order of his going. Nobody in Cane Creek neighborhood ever saw him again.

Changed Impressions.

"What has become of that man who talked hard times so vigorously?"

The Kaiser's Barber.

There is one man in Germany who invariably accompanies the emperor wherever he goes, whatever the occasion. His name is Francois Haby, his majesty's barber, the man who has made the fortune of caricaturists in two hemispheres by inventing for his imperial master the upturned mustache made famous by the kaiser. Once, however, his majesty in his search for absolute privacy even relinquished the services of his Figaro. This was during his visit to England in 1907. But Herr Haby was spared the pain of seeing another take his place, for the emperor shaved himself throughout his stay.

ORIGIN OF LLOYD'S.

Humble Beginning of Europe's Great Maritime Agency.

Two centuries ago a man who had a cargo to send to the Mediterranean contrived to get rid of some of the risk by inducing a friend to take an interest with him. It was necessary to write out a statement of contract to which the guarantors subscribed. This was the first underwriting. These two men happened to be frequenters of Lloyd's coffee house in London, which was a favorite place for the merchants of the town to gather to discuss business or to gossip.

Others immediately saw the advantage of the scheme which their colleagues had devised, and on the next voyage the risk was parceled out among a larger number of the patrons of the coffee house.

Out of this small beginning has grown the great European maritime agency, still bearing the name of the humble coffee house proprietor, and which not only writes risks on vessels, but rates them and publishes their arrivals at every port the world over, no matter how small or how remotely situated.—"Annals of the American Academy."

One Consolation.

During the time he acted as United States consul in Glasgow Bret Harte occasionally indulged in a day's sport with the gun, and it was during one of his shooting excursions that the humorist met with an accident which might have disfigured him for the remainder of his life, his face being badly cut through the recoil of an overloaded gun. Fortunately the doctor's skill prevented him from being permanently marked.

Writing about the occurrence to his friend, T. Edgar Pemberton, who quotes the letter in his "Tribute to Bret Harte," the novelist concluded his letter by telling of an amusing effort which was made to console him on account of the accident.

"When the surgeon was stitching me together," he wrote, "the son of the house, a boy of twelve, came timidly to the door of my room.

"'Tell Mr. Bret Harte it's all right,' he said. 'He killed the hare.'"

New Zealand's Glaciers.

The great size of the glaciers around Mount Cook, in New Zealand, has been often remarked. The Tasman is eighteen miles long, the Murchison ten miles, the Godley eight miles, the Mueller eight miles and the Hooker seven miles. Most of these glaciers have moraines of exceeding roughness, but the approaches to them are not steep, as is usually the case with European glaciers. The southern Alpine snow line is only a little over 7,000 feet. Glacially polished rocks are rare, and in many ways the mountains are singularly different from those of central Europe.

E Pluribus Unum.

The country is indebted to John Adams for its national motto, with [illegible] Englishman of note [illegible] to his house. It seems that while Adams was minister to England Sir John Prestwich, an eminent English antiquary, suggested to him a good motto to represent the union of the American colonies. Adams at once was taken with the idea, which he transmitted to Charles Thompson, the secretary of congress, who on June 20, 1782, reported to that body his design for a government seal. In this the Latin legend "E Pluribus Unum" was to be borne on a ribbon held in the beak of an eagle.

Just where Sir John got the idea is not certain, but it is a fact that the motto was in use on the cover of the Gentleman's Magazine, first published in 1730, and it may have struck his fancy by its applicability to the situation then obtaining in America.

Our Point of View

It is some satisfaction to know that it will be a long time before there is another year with the "hoodoo 13" in the date.

IS CANCER CURABLE?

Striking testimony to the value of radium in aiding [illegible] is coming these days. From London, Berlin and New York come stories of wonderful success obtained in its use. In the Middlesex Hospital, London, under the direction of Dr. [illegible], its use saved the lives of forty who were considered hopelessly diseased. It is a gratifying fact, too, that all the great surgeons who are now giving testimony to its value [illegible] of their own achievements [illegible] modest manner, and insist upon the statement being made that they are unable to predict whether or not the cancer will [illegible]. The treatment, however, [illegible] always be treated in the same way, and greater success [illegible] its use is being attained all the time. It is cheering news to the thousands of sufferers from that usually fatal disease.

THE PARCELS POST

Everything is said to be in readiness for the early inauguration of the Canadian parcel post system. Announcement of rates, size of parcels and classification of matter will not be made public until the system is definitely inaugurated. It is [illegible] to be supposed there will differ materially from those [illegible] applied to the United States, when the service was [illegible] a little more than [illegible] ago. The United States [illegible] generously extended [illegible] convenience. But it will probably be found best in this country to follow the experience of the United States. Some time must of necessity be allowed the post office system to assimilate the new business that will offer. Once that is done it will be but a matter of organization of the service and of adaptation of internal arrangements to expand the convenience as conditions warrant.

There seems for instance, no good reason why the Canadian system should not speedily adapt itself to the carrying of 20-pound parcels over the whole system, as is now possible under the parcels post of the United States. It is true the bulk of the parcels post business will probably be in parcels of much less weight, but the heavier parcels would open the way for cheap and speedy conveyance of parcels of commercial importance, and should operate to an increase of direct communication between the farm and the city household. By reason of its bulkiness and weight it will be found that much farm produce cannot be shipped in 11-pound parcels. There, however, are details that experience will open the way for acceptance. Once the system is gotten well under weigh it will be easily possible to extend its usefulness.

BRAVE LOVE.

He'd nothing but his violin,
I'd nothing but my song,
But we were wed when skies were blue
And summer days were long;
And when we rested by the hedge
The robins came and told
How they had dared to woo and win
When early spring was cold.
We sometimes supped on dewberries,
Or slept among the hay,
But oft the farmers' wives at eve
Came out to hear us play
The rare old tunes—the dear old tunes—
We could not starve for long
While my man had his violin
And I my sweet love song.

The world has ago gone well with us,
Old man, since we were one—
Our homeless wandering down the lanes—
It long ago was done,
But those who wait for gold or gear,
For houses and for kine,
Till youth's sweet spring grows brown and sere
And love and beauty pine,
Will never know the joy of hearts
That met without a fear
When you had but your violin,
And I a song, my dear.

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1912.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,300,000 bushels; 124 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,924
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,421
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,489

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1912. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased, the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1908 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in due course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1912, after writing down the value hitherto attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $[illegible]. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephoned at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

DAILY SHORT STORY

A Joke at Sea

To While Away the Tedium of a Long Voyage

By REGINALD D. HAVEN

Copyright by American Press Association, 191[illegible].

A party of travelers sat chatting on the deck of a Pacific liner, and the conversation turned upon British lords marrying American heiresses. One of the party whispered to a lady sitting next to him:

"That Englishman is one of 'em. He's going over for a multimillionairess."

"Which one?" asked the lady interested.

"The short, thick one. The other is his lordship's secretary."

Young Peterson, who made this statement, was a great wag. He did not expect it to be believed and was astonished later when one of the girls of the party said to him:

"Do you know that one of those Englishmen is an earl going over to America for a rich wife?"

"You don't mean it!" said Peterson with feigned astonishment.

Peterson winked at a man standing near to follow him, and the two went off together.

"By Jove, Charley," said the wag. "I've got something that will help to kill time and give us lots of fun besides during this long voyage. For a joke I told one of the ladies that that [illegible] of Britisher is a lord going to America to marry a big fortune and that the other one was his secretary. She took it all in earnest, told the story to the rest of the party, and it came back to me."

"Well?"

"Well, don't you see that all these women aboard—there are some high steppers among them—will be sticking to him like a bear to honey?"

"But the Englishman will hear of it and deny it."

"Suppose they do; we can say the earl is traveling incog and won't admit his identity. Besides, I doubt if he will object to sailing under false colors; he'll be treated royally."

"But the other, the secretary; it's my opinion he's a gentleman and won't consent to any such imposition."

"It's no imposition for him to play an unimportant part. Besides, if he denies the story he won't be believed."

His lordship was Thomas Sully, a bagman, or what in America we call a commercial traveler. Peterson told him of the plot, and he entered into the spirit of it at once. Nothing was said to the other Englishman, whose name appeared on the list of passengers as Arthur Craven. He was of a serious cast and not likely to have any sympathy with the joke or consent to be one of the principal participants.

Great was the amusement derived by Peterson and his friend Tomkins, whom he had admitted to the secret, at the marked attentions paid to the bagman, whose title, Earl of Camberwell, was let out by the apparently inadvertent display of an envelope that he had addressed to himself for the purpose. There were many English people on board, all of whom were very obsequious to a nobleman of their own country. Several American girls, who, though not multimillionairesses, were well supplied with funds, entered the lists for the prize.

"Ladies," the bagman protested, "I assure you you are mistaken. I am a humble British subject with no pretense whatever."

"Oh, my lord," was the response, "how can you tell such a story? Your aristocratic bearing gives you away."

"You are incorrigible," the bagman would reply, delighted.

Peterson and Tomkins, who were present when this amusing episode came out, hurried away to conceal their laughter, and when they got out of hearing exploded, then as soon as they could got Sully into the smoking room, opened a bottle of wine for him, and Peterson assured him that his noble mien was what was enabling him to carry out the joke so well.

Meanwhile Arthur Craven heard nothing of what was going on, for, being a reserved man, he kept very much to himself. Some of the ladies remarked to Peterson that Mr. Craven did not seem to be very hard worked by his master, whereupon Peterson explained that the earl had no use for a secretary on shipboard and had expressly forbidden Craven to pay him any attention whatever lest he let out the [illegible]. Craven spent most of the time reading. He did not smoke, therefore had no occasion to visit the smoking room, where he would have been astonished to see Sully vainly denying by words that he was an earl, but by his manner convincing those present that he was.

Like seeks like, and Craven, having made the acquaintance of a refined American family, found whatever companionship he seemed to need with them. Indeed, as the voyage progressed he showed greater disinclination to mingle with the others.

Meanwhile the Cunninghams—the American family he had become acquainted with—seemed to be equally pleased with him, and the voyage was not far under way before Craven and Miss Julia Cunningham, a girl of twenty-two, were seen a great deal together. [illegible] left the ship. The men are opening wine for me, and the women are feeding me on good things. But I want to get away before they find out the game we're working on them."

[illegible]

And so the ship sailed on. Every day was a repetition of another—meals, sitting on deck, constitutional walks between 4 and 6 in the afternoon and early to bed. One thing continued to enliven the voyage for Peterson and Tomkins—the attentions showered on Sully and the airs the bagman put on in support of his noble position. A number of the women found a pleasant excitement in angling for his lordship's favor.

It could not be expected that Craven should sail all the way to San Francisco without learning of his position as secretary to the Earl of Camberwell. One day when he joined Miss Cunningham on deck he noticed that she received him with an air of disappointment. It was not long before the secret was out.

"I have heard," she said, "that there is a British nobleman on board and you are his secretary."

Craven looked at her in astonishment.

"What an actor you are!" she said, with a slight coldness in her voice.

Craven said nothing. He was thinking. Finally he asked:

"And who is my master?"

"You know well enough without my telling you."

"Tell me, please."

"The short Englishman who calls himself Sully."

"Thanks," replied Craven. "And now since you have discovered that I am merely an understrapper to an English nobleman, I presume you are through with me."

"No," said the girl. "I admit I am disappointed, but I have no reason to give up your companionship."

Craven chatted about ordinary matters for a few minutes, then excused himself. Seeing Sully, who was at the time with Peterson, Craven went to him and asked for an explanation of the story he had heard. Peterson told how they had fallen into perpetrating the joke, apologized and offered to do anything in his power to relieve Mr. Craven of his share. "But," he added, "I fear no denial will avail as to the principal character, though, if you like, I think he can deny your part in it in a way that will be believed."

"Let the matter stand as it is," said Craven. "Since I have been his lordship's secretary thus far I will remain in his service during the rest of the voyage."

From that time until after the ship left the Hawaiian Islands it was observed by those who noticed Mr. Craven's attentions to Miss Cunningham that he was not with her as much as before. This was not the lady's fault. Mr. Craven, from the day she showed disappointment in having learned that he was the secretary of a very unattractive nobleman, was very chary of her attentions. Moreover, he made no further denial of the story. But as time wore on and Miss Cunningham found the days very long and the voyage very tedious without his society, she encouraged him to return to her side when she was on deck and showed by her manner that if she had not forgotten his position she ignored it.

Some time before the ship reached San Francisco it was evident to the passengers that if the earl was going to America for a wife his secretary need not look for one there, having found one on shipboard. Then all of a sudden there was a noticeable flutter in the Cunningham family, and Mr. Craven and Mr. Cunningham were seen in conference on the after deck, where there was no one to hear them. From that time till the end of the voyage, which was but a few days, there were unmistakable signs that Mr. Craven had, or would, become a part of the Cunningham family.

"What's the matter with your lordship," said Peterson, slapping Sully on the back. "You're going to America for a wife, and your secretary has got one right under your nose aboard ship."

"My dear fellow," replied the earl, "my secretary costs but a few thousands. Any woman who gets me must come down with millions."

They both laughed merrily and went into the smoking room for refreshments.

The day before reaching port the captain, as is usual on liners, gave a dinner to the passengers. When coffee was brought on he rose and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, there has been a joke perpetrated by some good fellows during you for amusement. Not wishing you to go ashore deceived, they desire me to say that the Earl of Camberwell is really Mr. Sully, and Mr. Sully has given me his word of honor to that effect.

"Nevertheless we have had a real nobleman aboard. From the first I have been aware that Mr. Craven is Baron Craven, a distinguished British traveler. He is not going to the States for a rich wife, for he is very rich himself. Besides, from appearances he has found one aboard this ship. Indeed, I am authorized to make the announcement to you."

All looked for Craven and the Cunninghams. Then it was noticed for the first time that they were not in their accustomed seats.

THEY SWITCHED THEIR VOTES

The Incident That Won Tom Corwin's First Fight for Congress

"When I saw the old homestead of Tom Corwin in the country," said an Ohio man, "I could not but recall the story told in Corwin's old home of Lebanon of how he won his first election to congress. He was a young man and already noted as an orator, but he had a hard district and little encouragement for election. He was making his tour of the counties and one night stopped at the double cabin of a farmer known to be a very fervent advocate of political policies of the opposition. Corwin talked politics carefully with the old man and his sons before bedtime, but had little hope of winning a single vote in the household. In the morning the old man took Corwin aside and assured him that every voter in the family would be for him on election day. This astonished and delighted Corwin, who could not [illegible] change of heart.

"The old man told how the opposition candidate had stopped at his house one night the week before and how the host and wife had watched the candidate go to bed. To their disgust he actually put on a nightgown like those worn by a woman. This disgusted the rugged old pioneer. Then Corwin was told how the old farmer and his wife had watched him go to bed, and as he had not bothered about a nightie they determined he was not taken to frills. Corwin could see the humor of the incident, and in every succeeding speech he told that night shirt story on the other candidate, holding him up to scorn. The result was a victory for Corwin, and he owed it all to that story of a shirt."—Washington Post.

A GRANITE BOMB

Jack Frost Hurled It Down Into the Yosemite Valley.

Delicate frost tracings on the window panes seem to be the work of fanciful and harmless spirits, but the hand that forms them is capable of greater deeds and of other kinds. Mr. J. Smeaton Chase, in "Yosemite Trails," describes an experience that must have been wonderfully impressive to the spectator. He had been spending some weeks in exploring the Yosemite valley and the "great rocks," like El Capitan, that wall it in.

Standing one day of late autumn about the middle of the valley, I was startled by a report like a cannon shot, which filled the whole valley with echoes that rolled and boomed, repeated and multiplied, in a long continued, glorious tumult.

As the deafening sound died away in sullen mutterings under the visor of El Capitan I was able to distinguish the point of attack by the long, shattering descent of a vast quantity of rock.

The night had been a cold one in the valley, and on the seven to eight thousand foot levels of the upper rim the temperature must have dropped almost to zero.

Frost, working quietly with his Archimedean lever, had just succeeded in shifting from the shoulder of the sentinel a table of fifty tons or so of granite. For over a thousand feet the boulder fell sheer, swift and silent; then, striking the cliff, it burst like a bomb, shattered into a myriad flying shards and splinters and dislodged a smother of fragments that trickled down to the valley in a stream that lasted for minutes.

Then from the spot where the boulder had struck dust began to rise into the sunny air, slowly building up and burgeoning like a summer cloud until every whit as snowy. It was the flour of granite, powdered instantaneously by the terrific shock.

POWER OF MUSIC

The Awakening That Came to Stephenson on Hearing Ole Bull

Ole Bornemann Bull, who was one of the famous wizards of the violin in the nineteenth century, had little difficulty in swaying an audience by the magic of his wonderful performance on his favorite instrument.

The great violinist was greatly admired by Stephenson, the inventor of the locomotive, although the latter had little appreciation of music in his soul. A call of some nature one day took Stephenson to Ole Bull's home. After the business on hand had been transacted the inventor arose to go, whereupon the master pressed him to remain and hear the tones of a famous violin which had lately come into his possession.

Ole Bull began to explain the marvelous construction of the violin, the perfect exactness required in each separate part. The inventor became interested in the subject. Finally Ole Bull explained how the sound waves were produced and the relation of the different parts to their production. Then, still explaining, he drew his magic bow across the strings in a burst of exquisite music.

Stephenson listened, spellbound. Ole Bull played on. When the music finally died away Stephenson burst into tears and sobbed. "There has been something in my life that was lacking, and at last I've found out what it is."

PALLET DANCERS

Long Training and a Ceaseless Grind of Hard Work Are Theirs.

The modern imperial ballet schools of St. Petersburg and Moscow are under government control, forming, with the theaters and dramatic schools, a department of the ministry of the court. Pupils, both male and female, are entered at the early age of ten years—seldom older. After the necessary [illegible] has been obtained—by no means an easy matter nowadays—a stringent examination regarding health, strength, beauty of form and natural gracefulness has to be passed before the child is finally accepted. From the time it becomes an inmate the whole of its education, secular and artistic, is taken in hand, and some years of training are necessary before it is considered ripe to appear in public.

The dancer's life is a ceaseless round of hard work. All, even great artists when at home, take regular daily lessons in addition to the daily rehearsals for the next performance, which are demanded, however old and well known the ballet. Thus an average of five to six hours' dancing a day is rather the rule than the exception, popular ballerinas in demand at charity performances and artists at home often dancing as much as eight hours in the twenty-four.

[illegible] artists are kept to design in every detail of period and subject the dresses, scenery and accessories—a task obviously requiring much knowledge and study—and often as many as 150 personages appear on the stage at the same time. Even the orchestra [illegible] ballet music, having no place in the orchestra of any other time.—London World.

THE FOURTH DIMENSION.

To Catch a Glimpse of It Just Get Delirium Tremens.

The majority of us are like brutes. We believe but in the reality of things. Science, more hospitable, acknowledges the fourth dimension and with it the constant parade before our eyes of things and events ordinarily unseen. The phenomena of delirium tremens form a case in point. The shapes which the layman believes the patient only imagines are really seen and are rendered visible through the excitation of the pineal gland, which now is the rudimentary organ of what once was peculiar vision. Alcohol stimulates this gland. The drunkard in his [illegible] sees with it the inhabitants of shapes which his own hideousness has attracted to him. For they are there, or, rather, they are here, about us in the fourth dimension, precisely as there are other shapes as gracious as these are revolting. Only ordinarily we do not see them. There are, though, those who can and do, and without being drunkards either.

Thinkers as sober as Ferrero and Babbage go a bit further. They will, if you let them, tell you that whatever occurs in the privacy of a room remains photographed in it. A mere extension of this [illegible] any that nothing has ever occurred anywhere which is not also photographed; that in the ether above us is the great picture gallery of the world. In India, at Adyar, the chief seat of theosophy, this gallery is constantly being studied. The results, occasionally bizarre, are sometimes trivial. It has been found that Herbert Spencer was Aristotle; Gladstone, Cicero; Tennyson, Ovid.—Edgar Saltus in Forum.

THE CSRE OF THE EARTH

It May Be a Mass of Steel Some 5,500 Miles in Diameter.

Various conjectures have been made from time to time by geologists as to the possible condition of the center of the earth. One of the most popular impressions seems to be that the earth's center, or core, is a flaming furnace. At a meeting of the Seismological association at The Hague Professor Weichert asserted that his studies of the varying velocity of earthquake tremors passing through the interior of the globe have led him to the conclusion that the earth consists of a central core of iron or steel, about 5,500 miles in diameter, surrounded with a stony shell 900 miles in thickness. Between the outer solid rind and the inner layer of rock, covering the metallic core, he thinks there is a layer of liquid or plastic material, lying a little less than twenty miles below the surface of the earth.

Men sometimes dream of enormous wealth stored deep in the earth below the reach of miners, but experts [illegible] that there is little or no ground to believe that any valuable metallic deposits lie very deep in the earth's crust regardless of Professor Weichert's beliefs to the contrary. [illegible] ground waters, and owing to the pressure on the rocks at great depths the [illegible] are confined to a shell near the surface. With few exceptions [illegible] below 3,000 feet. The mines [illegible], taking the world as a whole, are poorer in the second thousand feet than in the first thousand, and poorer yet in the third thousand than in the second.—New York World.

To Stop Hiccoughs.

Simple cases of hiccough are often relieved by such measures as sucking ice or taking salt and vinegar, says the New York Medical Journal. Pulling the tongue forward and holding it for some time is an effective procedure. Sometimes obstinate hiccough is relieved when the patient is [illegible] by having him hang with the arms extended and grasping some beam or pole, so that his feet do not touch the floor. With all the abdominal muscles tense, have him hold his breath as long as possible. Sneezing is very efficient in certain cases, since it is the exact opposite to hiccough, being a sudden expiratory act.

One of Mark Twain's Jokes.

Mark Twain played a practical joke on the first audience he addressed in England. This was in 1872, when his reputation was already high in that country, and the announcement of his lecture filled St. George's hall, London, to overflowing. Few if any of those present had ever seen the humorist. He came on the platform in evening dress, with the crestfallen air of a manager announcing a disappointment. "Mr. Clemens had [illegible] at Liverpool and had fully hoped to reach London in time, but unfortunately missed his train." The audience started hooting, but the boos changed into cheers and laughter when he added that, fortunately, Mark Twain was present and would do his best to fill the place of [illegible].

Bounced Through.

Sergeant Wilkins once defending a breach of promise case for a diminutive ugly little man, which case he told the defendant, after reading his brief, must be "bounced" through. And the sergeant did bounce it through.

"Gentlemen of the jury," he said at the close of a most eloquent speech, "you've heard the evidence for the plaintiff, and, gentlemen of the jury, you have admired that most bewitching lady, the plaintiff herself. Gentlemen, do you believe that this enchanting, this fascinating, this captivating, this accomplished lady would for one moment favor the advances or listen with anything save scorn and indignation to the amorous protestations of the wretched and repulsive homunculus, the deformed and degraded defendant?"

His client looked up from the well of the court and piteously murmured:

"Mr. Sergeant Wilkins! Oh, Mr. Sergeant Wilkins!"

"Silence, sir!" replied the sergeant in a wrathful undertone. "Gentlemen," he continued, bringing his fist heavily down on the desk before him, "do you think that this lovely lady, this fair and smiling creature, would ever have permitted an offer of marriage to be made to her by this miserable atom of humanity, this stunted creature, who would have to stand on a sheet of note paper to look over twopence?"

Instant verdict for defendant.—London Globe.

Notices Which Make You Smile.

There is quite a rich crop of humor, usually unconscious, to be reaped by the observant in the notices displayed in shop windows, of which the following announcement by a south end bird fancier is not at all a bad example: "Doves for sale, cheap. Eat most anything. Fond of children." Not long ago a Farringdon road butcher had in his window this notice: "Wanted, a respectable boy for beef sausages." An east end publican announced, "Billiard tables upstairs, 1 shilling per 100." A well known High Wycombe tobacconist proclaims from his shop window, "This shop is open on Sundays from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. in spite of Charles II." "Wanted, a washerwoman," ran another similar notice. "Applicants must be accustomed to rigorous discipline. Only the offers of such candidates will be entertained who have served in the army or been married for a considerable length of time."—Westminster Gazette.

Poets and Dogs.

Poets have always loved dogs. In this poets and boys resemble each other. Walter Savage Landor was devoted to his dog Giallo and Byron's epitaph upon his dog Boatswain we all remember:

To mark a friend's remains these stones arise;
I never had but one, and here he lies.

Cowper was very fond of his dog, and we know how Charles Lamb, who was a great poet, loved his Dash and how Mrs. Browning appreciated the little Flush to whom she indited a poem. The Earl of Shaftesbury kept his noble collie in his library with him at all times and Samuel Rogers always walked out with his dog. Scott declined an invitation to dinner when his dog died, saying that he could not accept on account of the "loss of an old friend."—St. James' Gazette.

A Passenger That Paid.

The late L. Q. C. Lamar, former United States senator from Mississippi and at the time of his death an associate justice of the United States supreme court, was a very absent minded and abstracted man.

One day he entered one of the old horse cars that ran in Washington years ago, walked up to the box at the end where passengers were supposed to deposit their fares, put his hand in his pocket, took out a coin and dropped it in.

"[illegible], senator," said a friend, "you put in a quarter instead of a nickel."

"Did I?" said the senator. "How very thoughtful of me!" Then he put his hand in his pocket again, took out a nickel, dropped that in and sat down with a satisfied smile.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Lord Chesterfield on Dante.

In Lord Chesterfield's letters to his son [illegible] is one[illegible] from London [illegible]. It begins:

"My Dear Friend—You have by this time, I hope and believe, made such progress in the Italian language that you can read it with ease—I mean the easy books in it—and indeed in that, as well as in every other language, the easiest books are generally the best, for whatever author is obscure and difficult in his own language certainly does not think clearly.

"This is, in my opinion, the case of a celebrated Italian author to whom the Italians, from the admiration they have of him, have given the epithet of il divino. I mean Dante. Though I formerly knew Italian extremely well, I could never understand him, for which reason I had done with him, fully convinced he was not worth the pains necessary to understand him. * * * The two poets worth your reading and, I was going to say, the only two, are Tasso and Ariosto."

Such was the verdict of one of the most accomplished men of letters of his time.—London Times.

Birthdays in Sweden.

In this country children, however much they may enjoy birthday celebrations and gifts, are quite content to have them once a year, but the fortunate children of Sweden have three birthdays in the course of every twelve months. First and most important is the real birthday, but the other two are also occasions for festivity and the presentation of small gifts. These two days are those which name the Swedish boy or girl bears. For every day in the Swedish calendar has its own special name, besides the weekly name which it bears like the days of other countries. To American ears a statement such as that made by a little Swedish girl who was asked as to the date of her birthday, "The 20th of March, 2d of May and 10th of November," has at first a decidedly strange sound.—Harper's.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of [illegible] what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was [illegible] bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of [illegible] bushels, making a total capacity of 2,[illegible] bushels. There are in this new building [illegible] concrete tanks, [illegible] feet in diameter and [illegible] feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately [illegible] bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately [illegible] bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of [illegible] bushels.

Strange Savage Accomplishment.

In British Columbia dwell certain tribes of Indians who read and write shorthand with facility. The story of the manner in which they acquired the accomplishment is a truly remarkable one.

It is stated that a Briton who visited the country of the Indians as a missionary found himself so hampered by the ignorance of the tribes, who could not read the Bible he gave them, that he set to work to teach them shorthand as the quickest means of enabling them to read and write! It seemed a doubtful experiment at first, but being based on the sound of the words there was no need to learn spelling. The priest began by teaching the more intelligent men, and then sending them to teach the others.

So successful was the undertaking that there is now scarcely an Indian, old or young, in the district who cannot read and write shorthand.

She Loved Him.

This was after the quarrel. "I can never forgive you," he cried. "Last night you said I was a lobster."

"But you know," she replied, and her tone was conciliatory—"you know how dearly I love lobster."

With a glad cry he folded her to his breast.—Philadelphia Record.

HIS QUEST FOR A WIFE.

John Newcomb Was a Close Observer and Was Hard to Suit.

The sister of Simon Newcomb, the great astronomer, tells in McClure's of their father's John Newcomb's wanderings in search of a wife, whom he had decided to select in accordance with scientific theories:

"John Newcomb stopped at farmhouses for his refreshment, and in each house, if there was a daughter of marriageable age, he tarried perhaps a day or even longer to make a study of the maiden. He always made himself 'handy' about the place, drawing up water with the great well sweep, bringing in firewood—doing anything that he could do and still keep near the daughter.

"Disappointment met him at every door. At one house the cooking was poor, at another the house was not neatly kept, at a third there was scolding or faultfinding, a want of harmony—and in all the maidens a lack of desire for learning or education. One young woman little knew by what a narrow margin she missed her fate. All was going smoothly till, when she was molding the dough for the baking pans, he noticed that a considerable portion of the dough was left in the wooden kneading trough. He asked her the reason for this, and her reply was that she left it for the house because he was fond of it. She always did this, she said; there was plenty. 'Want of thrift,' decided the young man, and he shouldered his bundle and walked on."

Told Who He Was.

Dr. Bunden, a former rector in Ditton, Kent, England, one Sunday preached from the text "Who art thou?" After reading it he made a pause for the congregation to reflect upon the words, when a man in military dress who at that instant was marching very sedately up the middle aisle of the church, supposing it a question addressed to him, replied, "I am, sir, an officer of the Sixteenth regiment of foot on a recruiting party here, and, having brought my wife and family with me, I am come to church because I wished to be acquainted with the neighboring clergy and gentry." This so deranged the divine and astonished the congregation that the sermon was concluded with considerable difficulty.

A Cure For Despondency.

A large, fleshy man with whiskers told me of a sovereign cure for despondency the other day. He had a number of girls in his employ, among them one that he knew was in struggling circumstances and supporting a sick mother on a none too healthy salary. She had come into the store and laid her purse and somber widow hat on the counter while she did something about the place. The large fleshy man got between her and the purse, and when she was not looking he slipped a five dollar bill into it and moved unconcernedly about his business. In the afternoon he noticed that she had a red spot in each cheek, and she was [illegible] asking other girls if they believed in fairies. She never solved the mystery—it was two years ago—and never will unless she reads this. But the five dollar bill was very useful in its little way, and the large despondent man felt so good for two whole days that he hip-hopped on the sidewalk on his way home.—Minneapolis Journal.

Living on Next to Nothing.

Most people do not need the evidence of recently published statistics to prove to them that it costs more to live in London than it once did. But it is doubtful if any Londoner now living was ever able to do it on £30 a year, as Boswell's poor Irish painter did. "He allowed £10 for clothes and linen. He said a man might live in a garret at 18 pence a week. Few people would inquire where he lived, and if they did it was easy to say, 'Sir, I am to be found at such a place.' By spending threepence at a coffee house he might be for some hours a day in very good company. He might dine for sixpence, breakfast on bread and milk for a penny and do without supper." Of course expenses can always be reduced to a minimum by doing without things. The question is, Which of our various expenses is unavoidable? Boswell's Irishman hinted at one. "On clean shirt days he went abroad and paid visits," says his [illegible] chronicler.—London Chronicle.

AUNT SALLY'S CIRCUS

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

Aunt Sally Davidson had reached the age of sixty-five and was living with a married daughter. She was a little, brisk old lady, and the care of two sprawling young ones and all the housework fell on her shoulders. She could walk a mile with any one, and the Monday washing was always out before noon.

Aunt Sally was noted for her patience and good temper, but there came a day in this her old age to try her soul. A circus was coming to town, and to the utter amazement of her daughter, son-in-law and all others she expressed a determination to be a spectator.

"Why, ma, you are a member of the church!" exclaimed the daughter.

"So I am, but don't members of the church want to see a rhinoceros and giraffe?"

"And your minister will preach against the whole thing," added the son-in-law.

The circus was a week away yet, and during that time the matter was brought up again and again, but Aunt Sally stuck to her resolution.

The day of the circus came at last, and after a hasty dinner Aunt Sally donned her sunbonnet and freshly ironed calico dress and hied her way to the circus grounds. One last appeal was made to her as she was ready to go. The daughter had a red flannel petticoat that had been worn only three winters. This was offered up as a sacrifice, but was rejected. Son-in-law and daughter were so angry that they stayed at home. It was believed that Aunt Sally had borrowed the necessary half dollar somewhere, but in this they were mistaken. She was going without money and depending on Providence to see her through.

We who have depended on the same thing know in advance what answer Aunt Sally got when she walked softly up to the ticket takers and, putting on her most winning smile, said:

"Will you please let a poor old woman in to see the anaconda forty feet long?"

She was, of course, laughed at and told to go home. "Home" wasn't very far with her. In walking around the big tent she saw a boy crawl under the canvas, and she lost no time in following suit. She rose up among the benches and took a seat, and if any one ever enjoyed a circus it surely was she. She didn't miss a handspring, and when the performance was over she lingered and inspected the animals until turned out. On her arrival home she was met by sulky looks, but nothing dampened her happiness. She came near going over to the minister's to repeat some of the clown's jokes and [illegible] where the [illegible] came in, but had to be satisfied with saying to the daughter:

"Mary, I want to go to heaven with the rest of you, but as sure as you live if another circus comes along I'll attend it and have just as good a time as I did today!"

Next morning the early risers of the village were treated to a rare spectacle. Aunt Sally was out on the grass in front of the house in scant attire turning handsprings or trying to. She made pretty fair work of it until her son-in-law came out and carried her into the house, where she was given an awful lecture on the enormity of her offense, but she failed to realize the enormity part.

"Look here now," she said in reply. "I'm sixty-five years old, and I've got to keep limbered up to be worth anything around the house. We've got a lot of goose grease down cellar, and I'm going to rub myself all over and keep at this handspring business. I'll soon be able to do more work."

"I'll leave the house if you do!" threatened the son-in-law.

"I'll send for the minister to talk to you!" added the daughter.

"Children, I've got to limber up or my knees will soon be like sticks. I [illegible] to disgrace nobody, and I shan't stop for the minister. I wish I could borrow a [illegible] of somebody. I think I'll go over and ask Deacon Ferguson for his old gray mare."

After breakfast off she went, and as she couldn't get the horse she came back home to arm herself with a clothes pole and attempt to walk the top rail of a six rail fence. She couldn't be coaxed in this time, and the son-in-law ran for the parson. The good man left his sermon unwritten and came on the trot. Aunt Sally waved her hand to him and fell off the fence and turned cart wheels around a large circle. Not until she was out of breath and had kicked her heels high in the air was she got into the house. Then the parson began to tell her how awful it was, but he had gone the wrong way about it.

"If I can't go to heaven and the circus, too, then I'll keep up these tricks," said Aunt Sally as she set her jaw.

"But think of the wickedness! Will I go to heaven or not?"

"You know what it says about the wicked."

"Yes, but will I get there or be kept out?"

"If you repent—"

"But I don't. I have done nothing to repent of. Parson, it's either heaven or [illegible]."

"Well, being 'tis you, yes."

And although Aunt Sally quit her "limbering" she attended three more circuses before she died, and her tombstone bears the legend, "Gone to Her Reward."

To the Point.

At a teacher's conference one of the school principals rose to propose the toast, "Long live the teachers."

And a meager, pallid assistant instructor in a hollow voice asked, "On what?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Its Resemblance.

"Did the [illegible] whose auto was in collision last night give it a [illegible] at [illegible]?"

"It sounded that way, sir."—Baltimore American.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Try this! Hair gets thick, glossy, wavy and beautiful at once —Stops falling out.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

PEOPLE FLED TO THE HILLS BEFORE A WALL OF WATER

Big Dam Burst, But 25,000,000 Gallons of Water Rolled Into the Potomac.

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 15.—Hundreds of inhabitants of the Potomac Valley fled to the hills early to-day when warned that the dam of the West Virginian Pulp and Paper Company, above Dobbin, on Stoney River, a stream which is tributary to the south branch of the Potomac, had gone out. Five hundred residents of Dobbin immediately evacuated the town, but little damage was done as the safety sluices prevented the huge mass of water from rushing into the valley. It was let out in easy stages and passed harmlessly off into the Potomac.

When the first break occurred early this morning, warning was sent by telephone for miles down the little valley.

SIR JAMES SINKS BACK AGAIN TO VERY WEAK CONDITION

Showed Slight Improvement Yesterday, But Suffered a Relapse

New York, Jan. 16.—After a slight improvement which aroused faint hopes of recovery, the slow falling in the condition of Sir James Whitney began again this morning. Yesterday he rested well, took more nourishment than he has been able to assimilate for several days, and generally seemed much better. Dr. Pyne was so pleased that he declared that three or four more days in succession would make it possible to remove the patient to Toronto. Last night however the old restlessness returned and Sir James got only broken snatches of sleep. To-day he is quite feeble.

Markedly Weaker.

It seems to be impossible for any change for the better to last more than a few hours. It is invariably followed by the restlessness which has been gradually draining the patient's strength. He is now markedly weaker than he was a week ago.

"From day to day," said Mr. Horace Wallis, the Premier's secretary, "his condition seems to be about the same, but when we look back and remember what he was like a week ago the change is marked".

The usual treatment with stimulants is being kept up. "That's about all we can do said Dr. Pyne, "in the way of giving medicines. Rest is really what is required."

Rural Parcel Delivery

Rural Parcel Delivery will be inaugurated very soon. Parcel boxes may be made and put up by letter-box subscribers in any way they see fit, or ordered from the Department on payment of cost. Pay for the carriers will increase according to the parcel business done on the various routes. The Peterborough papers are now, by Mr. Burnham's request, for the first time put on the same parliamentary ledge with the other city dailies, and not shoved under the ledge like rural weeklies. This in itself is a big ad. for the Electric City. Several hundred readers a day catch sight as they look over the papers of what they rarely heard of before. It helps to bring us to the front.

THRONE ORATION INDIGATES SHORT SESSION OF HOUSE

No Contentious Measures Outside of Redistribution Coming Up

Ottawa, Jan. 16.—Parliament was duly and formally opened with even a little more glitter and pomp than usual. The remainder of this week will be voted to a series of brilliant social functions. There was the State dinner at Rideau Hall last night, and Saturday night come the gorgeous Drawing Room ceremony in the Senate Chamber.

In the meantime the House stands adjourned until Monday afternoon, when the debate on the speech from the throne takes place. The mover of the reply to the address is Hon. H. F. McLeod, the new member for York, and the seconder Mr. J. O. Lavallee, member for Bellechasse.

Should End by May 24th.

The general feeling on both sides is that the session will be comparatively short and will be finished by May 24th. Certainly there is nothing in the speech from the throne to indicate a long drawn out session.

The actual sitting of the House of Commons yesterday afternoon did not consume twenty minutes. Before going over to the Senate Chamber to hear the speech from the throne, Speaker Sproule reported the changes in the House during the year consequent upon the death of members and the election of their successors. After returning from the Senate Chamber the Commoners were given the opportunity of meeting their new colleagues whose formal introduction was practically the only feature of the afternoon.

SENATOR GEORGE A COX HAS JOINED THE GREAT MAJORITY

One of Peterborough's former residents and in his time one of the best known citizens of Peterborough, has passed away in the person of Senator George Albertus Cox, who died at his residence, yesterday morning, 439 Sherbourne street, Toronto.

The late Senator was one of Canada's big men.

Senator Cox was of English descent, his family having come to the United States from England in 1818. He was the son of E. W. Cox, by his wife Jane Tanner, and was born in Colborne, May 7, 1840, and if he had lived till next May, would have been 74 years of age. He began his business life as an operator of the Montreal Telegraph Co. in that place.

He came to Peterborough in 1858, at the age of 18 years, and then began his thirty years' residence of Peterborough, to whose substantial growth and prosperity he so largely contributed.

To the activities of the late Senator, Peterborough owes in no small measure the location here of the C. G. E. Co. and the Quaker Oats Co.

In 1871, Mr. Cox contested the representation of the riding of West Peterborough, with the late W. H. Scott, for the Legislature. He won, but the election was set aside, and the following year he was defeated by a small majority. He contested West Peterborough for the House of Commons, with the late James Stevenson, a warm personal friend, fellow church member, and business associate. He was unsuccessful, but by the slender margin of only 16.

His splendid work in connection with the reorganization of the former Midland division of the Grand Trunk Railway is too well known here to require full description.

He was, whilst here, a strong supporter of Charlotte street Methodist church.

In 1862 Mr. Cox was united in marriage to Margaret Young, daughter of the late Daniel Hopkins, of Peterborough, who died on January [illegible], 1905. To this union were born five children, Mrs. A. L. Davis, Fred W. Cox, deceased; E. W. Cox, President of the Canada Life Company; Mrs. A. E. Ames and Herbert C. Cox.

In 1888 Mr. Cox removed to Toronto, after a residence of 30 years in Peterborough, occupying a fine residence on Sherbourne street. Mr. Cox took his second wife, Miss Stirling of Toronto, who survives him. The date of the funeral has been fixed for Monday morning, January 19th.

OPERATOR WAS A HERO

Stuck to His Key Until He Heard The Rushing of Flood Waters.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 16.—Reassured that the worst of the flood, which swept down the Stoney Creek and Upper Potomac valleys yesterday as a result of the breaking of the great dam of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, at Dobbin, W. Va., is over, the hundreds of refugees who fled to the hill upon the first warning, began to return to their homes early to-day. The valley is getting itself together and counting the damage from the flood. Although thousands of persons were imperilled, no lives were lost so far as has been ascertained.

The telegraph operator at Scholl is being lauded to-day as a hero.

He stuck to his post until he heard the noise of the onrushing waters, flashing a warning in all directions. It was feared he had been lost, but he turned up safely at Cumberland later in the day.

THE TEETH OF TIME

Prof. Coleman, of Queen's University Delivers Interesting Lecture at Normal School.

On this subject, Professor Coleman, of Queen's University, delivered an exceedingly interesting and instructive lecture last evening in the Normal School. A large number of students and others were present.

The teeth of time that leave their marks on the surface of the earth, were, so the Professor said, the oxygen and carbonic acid gas of the atmosphere, rain drops, frost, snow and flowing water. Stereopticon pictures showed the marks of these grinders on our own Rocky Mountains, on river gorges in Yukon and Deltas Alaska as well as in all parts of the old World. The Coliseum at Rome, the Matoppo Hills of Rhodesia, and the Egyptian Sphinx alike were called in evidence to declare how Father Time bites at this old world which he is tearing up bit by bit.

STRONG PUBLIC OPINION IN FAVOR OF A POLICE WOMAN

The Women's Council has handed the following letters to The Times for publication. It will be seen that a strong and nearly unanimous feeling exists in favor of the appointment of a police woman for Peterborough. A partial canvass of the business men of the city discloses the fact that they are practically all in favor of the proposal, while the medical men, nurses and other professions are also favorable.

To the Secretary of The Womens' Council:

Dear Madam:—I have been requested to tell you that at their meeting last night, a motion was put, and carried unanimously, "that the Peterborough Medical Society heartily endorse the Women's Council in their efforts towards the appointment of a Woman Police officer in this city."

G. B. MANN,
Secretary to Medical Society.

To the Convenor of of The Moral Reform Committee, of the Local Council of Women:

The above resolution was passed by the Teachers' Club at their meeting held on Saturday evening 14th, 1914.

Resolved that the Secretary of the Teachers Club, consisting of the male members of the staff of Public schools Normal School, City and County Inspectors, and Collegiate Institute, write to the Convenor of the Womens Council, stating that we as a Club are thoroughly in sympathy with the efforts of the Womens Council to secure, for reasons set forth in their petition to the Police Commissioners, to secure the services of a Police woman for this city, also that in our opinion the police force is not at all adequate in number to the needs of this city.

D. A. McKAY,
Secretary to the Teachers Club.

To the Moral Reform Committee of the Womens Council of Peterborough:

Dear Madames: The following resolution was passed unanimously at the Ministerial Association this morning: "That in view of the present conditions of the city, the police commissioners are urged to increase the number of our police force, and that the Women's Council be upheld in their desire to have a police woman as part of the permanent force."

Secretary.

A very successful evening was brought to a close by the singing of "God Bless Our School," and the National Anthem.

FORTY-FIFTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING OF THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

Steady Progress Made Throughout Year—Liquid Assets 46.66°. of Total Liabilities to the Public

TRIBUTE TO BANK SYSTEM OF DOMINION

MR. E. R. WOOD.

Mr. E. R. Wood president of Dominion Securities, a former resident of Peterborough, at the annual meeting in Toronto on Thursday, handed out the following bouquet to Canadian bankers:

"It is, indeed, a tribute to the Canadian branch bank system, and highly creditable to those in authority, that our chartered banks have so successfully come through this trying year.

"Across the line a number of bank failures have occurred, though general financial conditions in the United States have been less acute than ours. Serious financial crises, with resulting heavy losses, also took place on the Continent.

"Canadian banks, on the other hand not merely have a clean record for 1913 in this respect, but a generally stronger position all round.

"This should be a source of satisfaction to our country as a whole, contributing, as it does, to the stability of our commerce and credit at home and abroad. Notes of warning and caution were sounded a year ago by the executive heads of all our leading banks, who, during the past twelve months, undoubtedly have done all they could to guide their customers in the right direction, and to extend to them the maximum accommodation consistent with the demands upon their own resources and the protection of their depositors during this critical time."

The Forty-fifth Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of The Royal Bank of Canada was held January 8th, in the Board Room, at the Head Office of the Bank, 147 St. James Street, Montreal.

On motion of Mr. Wiley Smith, seconded by Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., the Vice-President, Mr. E. L. Pease, was requested to take the chair.

Mr. C. E. Neill acted as Secretary of the Meeting, and Messrs. C. R. Hosmer and A. Haig Sims were appointed scrutineers.

The minutes of the last Annual General Meeting were taken as read, and were confirmed. The Secretary was then called upon to read the annual report of the Directors, as follows:—

H. S. HOLT, President.
E. L. PEASE, Vice-President.

VICE-PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

The adoption of the report was moved by the Vice-President, Mr. E. L. Pease, who spoke as follows:

We regret extremely that our President, Mr. Holt, in consequence of illness, is unable to preside at this meeting, but you will be pleased to know that he is rapidly convalescing, and will shortly be out again.

The financial statement which we have the pleasure of presenting to you to-day, shows that although the past year was one of great strain and anxiety, we have been able to maintain a strong liquid condition, and at the same time produce satisfactory profits. These were equivalent to 18.53 per cent. of our capital and 8.87 per cent. of capital and surplus combined. Out of these profits the usual dividend of 12 per cent. has been paid, $250,000 has been written off Bank Premises, $100,000 transferred to the Pension Fund, and the balance carried forward to Profit and Loss, bringing that account up to $1,015,119.

BALANCE SHEET.

I will refer briefly to the important items of the Balance Sheet.

Cash on hand, at call, and on short notice amounted to $65,000,445, or 34 per cent of our total liabilities to the public. These reserves do not include Canadian call loans or investments, amounting to $26,775,000, which we regard as secondary reserves. Call loans in Canada and elsewhere decreased during the year $4,150,000; current loans in Canada and elsewhere increased $2,500,000; and cash increased $1,800,000. Investments stand at less than the market value on November 29th last. The writing down of securities, while unprofitable, increases the financial stability of the bank. With the next swing of the pendulum values will improve. Bank Premises stand at $4,783,000. Deposits have been well maintained. Those bearing interest increased $1,237,000, and demand deposits are practically unchanged. Bills payable amount to $900,000, a decrease of $1,850,000 as compared with the previous year. Our total Liquid Assets amount to $72,355,000, being 46.66 per cent of our total liabilities to the public. Total trade assets, excluding the valuation of bank premises, exceed our liabilities to the public by the sum of $20,783,117.

BANK PREMISES.

With the object of rendering available for commercial requirements a portion of the funds invested in bank premises, the bank has during the past year sold certain of its properties to the Globe Realty Corporation, Ltd., a company organized and controlled by the bank. The value of these properties was fixed by independent appraisal, 60 per cent of the appraised value has been paid to the bank in first mortgage bonds, secured upon the same properties, and the remaining 40 per cent in shares of the company, which shares have been entirely written off. The bonds will be sold without any liability, direct or indirect, on the part of the bank.

The properties sold will continue to be occupied by the bank under lease from the company, and the rentals which are not higher than we have charged the branches in the past, will provide for the interest on the bonds and a sinking fund sufficient to retire them at maturity in twenty-five years, when the bank will become the

THE HINKLE CONCERT A GREAT SUCCESS

Last night the Grand Opera House was well filled by Peterborough lov[illegible] ers of high-class music. The even[illegible] was known as the Hinkle concert, but the local Conservatory of Music Orchestra contributed very largely to the enjoyment of all present.

Mr. Rupert Gliddon is to be con[illegible] gratulated in his successful endeav[illegible] to educate the public taste to high class music.

Without making any invidious com[illegible] parisons, Miss Florence Hinkle, of New York was the star attraction. The clear bell-like notes of her rich and highly developed soprano voice thrilled every member of the [illegible] audience.

Mr. Leo Smith, the celebrated cellist, who has been heard here [illegible] again met with an outburst of applause.

The program included: Verdi's "[illegible]" overture, "William Tell," "Peer Gynt," Suite by Grieg. Selections from "Faust" by Gounod.

The magnificent Conservatory Orchestra in these selections demonstrated a high degree of training and ability.

IN LOVE AND WAR.

All Is Fair, He Said, and His Sweetheart Agreed.

By KATE M. CLEARY.

Doris was singing as she came flying down the wide stairway and out into the warm brilliancy of the young day, for it was midsummer, the time of suns, of fragrance, of romance.

And Doris seemed the veritable spirit of it all—at least so thought the young fellow watching her from his seat under the great elm. But it was not till she was quite close to him that she was aware of his presence. The gay little chanson she had been lilting ceased, and the pretty, startled color deepened in her soft cheeks.

"Bon jour!" she cried blithely and paused in her Atalanta-like flight. "Mercy! What a morning to be poring over a book! Why, instead you should"—

"I know!" He had risen and was towering before her, straight and stately, a man with an air that was more that of a soldier than a student. "You think I should prefer to cultivate Dame Nature."

There was a quizzical flicker in the gray, black lashed, black browed eyes that met her accusing gaze.

"If you will put down that book you may walk with me as far as the abode of Mrs. Matilda Parsons, who is expecting me this morning to write her monthly letter to her son in the Philippines."

"The permission is tempting," confessed John Jardine, "but there is Freddie"—

"Oh, if you prefer Freddie's society to mine!" The little chin with the dimple went up in the air.

"But I'm paid to teach your brother, Miss Ware," he hastened to explain.

"And not to accompany me. I quite understand." And then, with much dignity of demeanor, "Good morning, Mr. Jardine."

"Good morning," he replied ruefully. But the quizzical smile was dancing again in his [illegible] eyes as Miss Ware flashed upon her [illegible] of her [illegible] and turned [illegible] away only to [illegible] when she had taken a few steps and look back over her shoulder with eyes full of infinite reproach.

"There's that dog at Brown's and—he might bite. And—and it's hard to get over the pasture stile alone. And"—a pitiful quiver in her voice clinched the sincerity of her assertion—"I am afraid of snakes—and there may be snakes. Freddie saw one last summer."

There was no questioning the triumphant truth of the final declaration. Nor was refusal longer possible. Conquered, John Jardine found himself walking along the avenue, adjusting his long stride to the gait of Miss Doris Ware, who, now that she had her own way in persuading the most stubborn individual with whom she had ever come in contact, was radiant and bubbling over with merriment.

Since six months before their acquaintance began the little flirt, [illegible] had vainly tried all her graces and fascinations on the sober and stately instructor of her [illegible] young brother. It had seemed so natural since she was a schoolgirl in short dresses to have admirers by the dozen that the difficulty she experienced of bringing Jardine to her feet piqued her and made her more than ever determined to make him capitulate. She would have opened her pansy purple eyes very wide indeed and have been honestly amazed had any one accused her of being heartless. She would have said that no one meant to be serious. Anyhow all knew—for it was an open secret—that she was not free. Her marriage had been arranged—oh, ages ago—by parents and lawyers and solicitors and that kind of people. It was purely a marriage of convenience. But it appeared to be very convenient indeed and quite satisfactory all around.

Some day, when she was old, very old—perhaps twenty-four or thereabouts—Lord Lonington would come sailing over the sea and wed her and take her back over the billows to a magnificent historic old home in Europe, and she would be a great lady and lead a good and beautiful life and be happy forever and ever, which, as her heart had never been touched and she was only a wild and winsome little maiden, seemed quite right and natural.

Only of late she had begun to wonder why her eyes would droop when suddenly encountering those of the man beside whom she now walked, rattling on in light, inconsequent fashion. She was furious when she found her cheeks grow burning hot at the moment of a chance meeting. What was he to her that her heart had come to beat more quickly when in his presence? Defiantly she summoned all her bright audacity to conceal this strange new unrest.

Homeward bound an hour later, they secured their mail at the village. In the green gloom, gold pierced, of the forest pathway the girl sat down to read her letters. Leaning against a tree, grave and silent, Jardine stood watching her.

"Oh," she cried out suddenly and turned very pale, "he is coming! His lawyer writes he is coming! Oh, I didn't think he'd come for years and years!" There was downright dread in the eyes that looked piteously up at her companion. "Lord Lonington is coming."

He nodded. "You've never seen him?" he asked. "He is old, I suppose, and ugly and altogether detestable?"

"No—oh, no! It was all arranged. But they say he is young and [illegible]. He is very rich, of course. I didn't think I'd mind—and now." She was [illegible]. The tears [illegible] over and fell down the cheeks from which the rose bloom had faded. "He will be here today, and I—soon I will have to marry him."

"You poor little thing!" The compassion in his voice thrilled her—that and something more. "Don't you know—you do know, my darling—that you are going to marry me?"

Then he had her in his arms and was holding her close in their strong and sheltering embrace.

For an instant or two she did not resist. The sweet shock of it all, the sense of being protected, more than all the ecstatic knowledge of her own heart, overwhelmed her. His kisses were on her cheeks, her lips, and his passionate words in her ears.

"No, no!" she cried and drew away. "It isn't right! I must marry Lord Lonington. It was all arranged long ago. I never objected. I didn't know"—

"That—so, I shan't touch you again unless you come to me. You didn't know that you were going to fall in love with me!"

Her color came back with a rush.

"Is this," she faltered—"is this—love?"

He laughed, a low, contented, joyous laugh.

"I will answer that only with you in my arms. Come!"

She hesitated. Aware of a bewildering sense of happiness, she still hesitated. But his eyes compelled her. She took a step forward, and again his arms infolded her. It was with dread of the battle to be pending her that Doris Ware heard the first dinner bell that evening. But it was a determined young lady who held her head high and went down the stairway to meet the English nobleman whom it had been decided should make her his wife. Would her always indulgent father be furious to learn she was to marry a penniless tutor? Would her weak, ambitious mother weep and protest? What matter! She would have him whom she loved—loved—loved!

"Go in!" Her parents, standing at the foot of the stairs, kissed her. "Go in, and God bless you both! He is waiting. Go to him."

Then the slender figure, all in snowy draperies of clinging lace, was walking up the room.

"I am sorry to have to tell you, Lord Lonington"—she began, but the words she would have spoken were never said.

The tall, handsome man in evening dress had her held tightly to his heart, and the arms that closed around her were those that had been her refuge that morning in the forest.

"John," she whispered. "John!"

"Cedric John Jardine [illegible], Lord Lonington," he corrected her. "Beloved, I've won you! I've served for you, if not so long as Jacob served for Rachel, as faithfully. It's [illegible] fair, sweetheart, in love and war!"

SEVEN AGES OF BASEBALL

All the world's a ball field
And all the men upon it merely players.
They have their innings and their put-outs,
And one man in his time makes many plays.
At first a kid on the diamond. At first the kiddie
Batting the ball about the vacant lots.
And then the "semi-pro" with fierce ambition
Some day to be as great as Honus Wagner.
And then his club, and then the minors—
The minor leaguer—soon by scout discovered,
Bought and given a tryout; then the major—
The major leaguer—idol of the bleachers,
Quick on bases, snappy and sure in fielding,
Seeking the slugger's reputation
Even against "Three Fingered" Brown;
then—good—bench warming!
His leg goes bad, his arm or eye or something.
He bats 'em out before the game and coaches,
In sweater clad, at first or third. The papers
All say he "can't come back." The sixth age shifts
To minor leagues again, and there he is.
He says he's just as good as e'er he was,
But even here too fast's the company
For his bad leg or arm. His manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, blasts
It on the umpire. Last scene of all,
That ends his strange, eventful history,
Is bush league hopelessness and mere oblivion,
Sans speed, sans arm, sans eye, sans everything!

Books in the Middle Ages.

When in the middle ages an author at any European university desired to publish his thoughts his book was read over twice in the presence of the authorities and if approved might be copied and exposed for sale, a practice in which the germs for state licensing may be readily distinguished. It was evidently necessary, however, to keep a strict watch over the persons employed in this business, and the statutes of the University of Paris show that the booksellers were subjected to a very severe discipline. They were obliged to keep a list of the books they sold and to exhibit their sale of charges, and they were forbidden to purchase any manuscript till it had been duly approved by the authorities and publicly exposed to view for four days.

In the Days of Wooden Huts, Thatched Roofs and Clay Floors.

The habitations of English common people for centuries consisted of a wooden hut of one room, with the fire built in the center. To this hut, if a man increased in family and wealth, a lean-to was added and later another and another. The roofs were of thatch, the beds of loose straw or straw beds with bolsters of the same laid on the floor or perhaps eventually shut in by a shelf and ledge like the berths of a ship or by a small closet.

The Saxon thane or knight built a more pretentious "hall," a large open room like the Roman atrium with a lofty roof thatched or covered with slates or wooden shingles. In the center of the hard clay floor burned great fires of dry wood whose thin acrid smoke escaped from openings in the roof, above the hearth or by the doors, windows and openings under the eaves of the thatch.

By day the "hearthmen" and visitors when not working or fighting sat on long benches on either side of the fire and, as John Hay puts it, "calmly drinked and jawed" or, gathering at long boards placed on trestles, regaled themselves on some sort of porridge with fish and milk or meat and ale.

At night straw or rushes spread on the floor formed beds for the entire company in the earlier and ruder days, when the "baser sort" were glad to share their straw with the cows.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

Our Point of View

Those who indulged in the pastime of making New Year resolutions will now take up the serious business of life, which is trying to keep them.

It strikes us that the wage increases in the East and West give rather severe jolts to the calamity which the Liberals predicted would befall the country.

SAFETY FIRST ON THE GRAND TRUNK

The Safety Committee, which is the executive body in charge of the Safety First Movement on the Grand Trunk held its first meeting in the Board of Directors' room, general offices, Montreal, January 12th, at 10 a.m. The following members were present:

Mr. H. G. Kelley, vice-president, (chairman); Mr. U. E. Gillen, general superintendent, Chicago; Mr. H. E. Whittenberger, general superintendent, Toronto; Mr. G. G. Bowker, general superintendent, Montreal; Mr. W. D. Robb, superintendent of motive power, Montreal; Mr. H. R. Safford, Chief Engineer, Montreal; Mr. M. S. Blaiklock, Engineer, Maintenance of Way; Mr. T. W. R. McRae, Claims Agent, Montreal; Mr. Geo. Bradshaw, Safety Engineer, Secretary.

This is the first meeting of the Committee since the organization of the Safety Movement. The report by the Secretary disclosed the fact that twenty-four Division, Shop and Terminal Safety Committees have been organized on the System with a membership of about six hundred. During the month of December, the members of these committees actually corrected five hundred unsafe physical conditions which might perhaps have caused injury, and cautioned employees against unsafe methods, and practices in about four hundred and eighty cases. The General Safety Committee passed upon a number of important recommendations submitted by the local committees.

The report of the Secretary, which was read at this meeting, showed the interesting fact that since the inauguration of the Safety Movement on the Grand Trunk on August 15th, 1913, injuries to employees have been reduced to the extent of 11.5 per cent. and that during the same period fatal injuries to employees on duty have been decreased 50 per cent., as compared with same period of 1912. Traffic was heavier in the latter period than in the former.

The officers and employees of the Grand Trunk are taking a keen personal interest in correcting unsafe conditions and practices and to this interest is due the favorable record above cited, which is one of the most remarkable that has ever been achieved by the Safety Movement on any Railway, and especially so in view of the short time in which the Movement has been in force.

Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

The Public is Loud in Its Praise of the Modern Direct Breathing Cure.

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bane of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Preston, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh."

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

ST. GEORGE SOCIETY HOLD SOCIAL GATHERING

The monthly social of St. George's Society was held in the W.O.W. hall last night, and in the absence of the President, Mr. A. Pitchford took the chair. Despite the inclemency of the weather the chairs were well filled, and a good program was rendered as follows:

Duet—"Carrier John," Misses D. and L. Hanson.
Solo—"When It's Apple Blossom Time in Normandie," Master H. Meredith.
Solo—"Little Gray Home in the West," Mr. Asa Haysle.
Recitation—"The Handy Man," J. John.
Solo—"The Children's Home," Miss L. Hanson.
Solo—"I Love a Lassie," A. Coleman.
Reading—"The Usual Way," Miss D. Hanson.
Pianoforte Solo—Mr. Asa Haysle.
Duet—"Carmena," Misses D. and L. Hanson.
Recitation—"Shot on Patrol," J. John.
Solo—"Till the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold," Mr. Asa Haysle.
Solo—"The Toilers," Mr. J. John.

After the program Mr. J. John put the following motion, which was seconded by Mr. R. Cooper,—That this gathering of the St. George's Society deeply regret the accident this week of Mr. W. Stocker, our esteemed President, and extend to him our sympathy and that he may have a speedy recovery.—Carried.

An announcement was made that a basket social for charitable purposes will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 27, under the auspices of the Woodmen of the World. Coffee and cake were then served and a good social evening was brought to a close at 10 o'clock by the singing of "God Save the King."

FIVE MINUTE CURE IF STOMACH IS BAD

When "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches stomach all Indigestion, Gas and Sourness Disappears

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble, has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

NEWS AND SIR JOHN SUE MAIL AND EMPIRE

Toronto, Jan. 16.—The dispute over the origin of the unfounded report as to the death of Sir James Whitney current in Toronto some days ago, has found its way to Osgoode Hall.

The sequel takes the form of two writs against the Mail Printing Company, Limited.

Sir John Willison, editor of The Toronto News and correspondent for the London Times, is the plaintiff, and the News Publishing Company of Toronto, Limited is the other.

While there are two suits the claims are the same: for damages for a libel published by the defendant of and concerning the plaintiff in the issue of the defendants newspaper, the Mail and Empire, dated the 7th day of January, 1914."

Boat Abandoned and Crew Rescued—What Mayflower Is It?

New York, Jan. 16.—The commander of the Cunard Liner Lusitania, which sailed from here on Wednesday for Liverpool, sent a wireless message to the line to-day saying that at 6.30 o'clock this morning, in latitude 42.12, longitude 58.20, the Lusitania had rescued the crew of eight men from the Nova Scotian schooner Mayflower. The schooner was abandoned and set on fire.

Marine records show that the British schooner Mayflower left Perth Amboy, N.J., on December 26, for St. John, N.B., and touched at Booth Bay, Me., on January 10th. She could not possibly have been in the position indicated by the Lusitania to-day. No other Mayflower of the schooner type is recorded.

PRICE 100 and ACCRUED INTEREST

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,300,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,196,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,924
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,421
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1906 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in due course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to [illegible], and after deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets [illegible] the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on [illegible] and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, [illegible]. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephoned at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

of the Reciprocity Agreement, which came into force on the 1st of October last. Great advantages are likely to accrue also to the West Indies through the opening of the Panama Canal, which will give access to new markets on the Pacific Coast and in the Orient. As an illustration of this a recent sale of 42,000 sacks of Cuban sugar was reported for shipment to Japan via the Suez Canal.

BRITISH GUIANA BANK.

Recent negotiations for the purchase of the business of the British Guiana Bank have resulted in their acceptance of an offer made by us, subject to confirmation at a meeting of the shareholders of that bank, to be held on the 31st January next. The bank has been in existence since 1836, and a careful examination has revealed a sound and prosperous condition. It has paid-up capital of $[illegible], and a surplus fund of $[illegible]. Its total assets on the 30th of June last amounted to $[illegible]. We have long wished to extend our chain of branches in the British West Indies to the important colony of British Guiana, not only because of its existing and growing trade with Canada, but because of its great potentialities. The vast interior, extending to the borders of Brazil, contains large areas of fertile lands and very valuable timber and minerals awaiting railway development, a project which is now receiving much attention.

UNITED STATES.

The banking and currency law recently enacted in the United States is of prime importance to Canada. The new measure is generally expected to render credit more elastic and greatly accelerate trade. I will equalize money rates of interest throughout the country, and set free for business purposes a portion of the enormous gold hoardings in the Treasury. On the principle that economic condition in the United States, good or bad, are soon reflected in Canada, we are likely to benefit from the measure.

It is a pleasing sign that upwards of $[illegible] of Canadian municipal debentures were marketed in the United States in the past twelve months, most of which were sold during the latter portion of the year. As foreign investments are exempt from the recently imposed income tax a considerable volume of American capital will doubtless find its way to Canada in the future for investment in our securities.

GENERAL SITUATION IN CANADA.

Regarding the general situation in Canada, the dominating influence at the beginning of the past year was the money market crisis in Europe, resulting from the Balkan war and the fear of a general conflict. Although the banks were alive to the necessity for extreme caution and retrenchment in Canada, it was impossible to call an immediate halt. The momentum of trade following several years of prosperity required that commitments be taken care of. During the first eight months there was no diminution of the volume of mercantile business or curtailment of railway and other general construction work, for which foreign capital continued to be freely supplied. In that period the commercial loans of the Chartered Banks increased $[illegible], while deposits decreased $[illegible]. Fortunately, however, our excellent crops, rapidly marketed, liquidated debts and brought about a reversal of the financial situation. Commercial loans on the 30th of November last compared with August last showed a decrease of $24,000,000 while deposits in the same time increased $33,000,000. We could offer no better evidence of the vitality and wealth of the country.

Throughout the year the banks exercised restraint upon their customers without unduly restricting credits. They did, however, put a ban on real estate speculation, and curbed the extravagance of municipalities. But for previous excesses in these two directions, conditions in Canada might have continued normal, as trade otherwise has remained healthy. We have an example of this in the Maritime Provinces, where prosperous conditions prevailed throughout the year, due undoubtedly to the absence of extravagance and speculation in real estate in that section of the country. Outside of these provinces a reaction is now in progress. How far it will extend it is impossible to say, but generally when pessimism prevails the turn is near. I take a hopeful view of the outlook, as the tendency is towards conservation and economy.

In view of the dearth of capital in Europe, resulting from expenditures for wars and armaments, the Canadian public would be well advised to postpone any new enterprise dependent upon foreign capital until financial conditions are improved abroad. Pending the absorption of the great mass of the European Government loans now hanging over the foreign markets, and waiting for a favorable opportunity to be floated, we cannot expect to obtain our usual supplies of money from Great Britain.

I now beg to move that the Directors' report and financial statement be adopted, and will ask Mr. Johnston to second the resolution.

SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

In seconding the adoption of the report, Mr. E. F. B. Johnston made the following remarks:

Mr. Chairman, I have great pleasure in seconding the adoption of the Annual Report. I regret that the necessity for this being done by me is [illegible] by the indisposition of [illegible] generous compensation, and I look forward with confidence to its greater growth in the future. As we anticipated, the amalgamation with the Traders Bank, has resulted in many advantages to the shareholders and to the public. It was suggested by some people that competition would be decreased, and accommodation to the public lessened, by reason of the amalgamation. This has not been the result. As I pointed out at the last Annual Meeting, there were only 15 places in Canada where both banks carried on business. On taking the returns for the period ending 30th November, 1913, we find that in these 15 places, loans to the public increased by $2,000,000. In other words, in the 15 places in which the Traders were closed, the public received from the single bank $2,000,000 more in advances than it did the year previously from the two banks. The position taken by us was, therefore, fully verified by the results.

You will be glad to know that in Ontario the arrangements entered into over a year ago have worked admirably. There has been no friction and no loss of business. The old customers of the Traders have continued on and received the same and sometimes greater assistance by reason of the increased means of doing business. The old order of things fitted into the new so perfectly, that most of the customers were never conscious that any change had taken place. No customer in Ontario entitled to consideration has, so far as we know, been refused reasonable accommodation, even with the somewhat restricted money market of the past year. The directors have spared no effort to make the amalgamation a success. In every respect, the result exceeds our most sanguine expectations. When we consider that Ontario includes 119 agencies and represents nearly one-fourth of the whole business of the two banks, it is gratifying to highly satisfactory. know that the present condition is so

I intended saying a few words about some of the figures set out in the Report. I need add but little to what Mr. Pease has stated. A bank which can provide a 12 per cent dividend on a capital of $11,560,000; write off a quarter of a million on Bank Premises account; transfer $100,000 to Pension Fund, and carry a balance of Profit and Loss, amounting to a million dollars, of which over $400,000 was earned last year, requires no apology on the part of its shareholders or management.

There are a few observations of a general character, however, which may be worth considering. I believe that next to capable management, which must always be the outstanding element of success, especially in a monetary institution, a Reserve Fund is the tower of strength in the mind of the public, and I hope to see the time when we shall have a paid-up capital of at least $25,000,000, and a Reserve Fund of $25,000,000. A large reserve does not ensure only to the benefit of the shareholders; it creates a strong safeguard in the interest of depositors, and enables the bank to give greater financial security to the public, for whatever strengthens the banking interests must give greater stability to the whole commercial elements of a nation. Banks, which are not seriously affected by business depression, help to steady all financial undertakings, and act as an anchor in times of uncertainty. Shareholders remain steady, depositors have no doubt as to their own safety, and securities of all kinds are strengthened by reason of the unquestioned character of our banking institutions. A banking system backed by a large Reserve Fund and strong cash reserves is the foundation of commercial safety and prosperity.

TRADE OUTLOOK IN PROVINCES.

We must always have in mind that banks are the great adjunct to national development. The future possibilities of the great Provinces of the West cannot be over-estimated from a banking standpoint. These Provinces constitute one of the great areas of production in the world, and as the centres of population increase, the consuming class, whether in Canada or Europe, must look to our West for a large part of their supplies. This means increased population and development in the producing part of Canada, and the banks are serving a national purpose in the help they are giving to the farmers and others who are engaged in the building of a Western Empire.

But we must not forget Ontario, Quebec, and the other Eastern Provinces. This part of Canada is forging ahead, and when we get away from the glamour of the West, we are surprised to find what magnificent strides the East is making. The aggregate production of the country from Port Arthur to the Atlantic is very remarkable, and the volume of all kinds of business is large and profitable. Statistics show a tremendous increase in national and industrial productions, and we are moving ahead so steadily, that we are scarcely conscious of our own rapid growth.

On the whole, we have every reason to look forward with hope, and to feel that we are able to maintain the confidence we have in our own country, notwithstanding the prophecies of those who are inclined to indulge occasionally in gloomy forecasts.

HOPEFUL VIEW OF OUTLOOK

Personally, I have great confidence in the vigor and elasticity of Canada and its people. Compared with many other countries, people in Canada do not know what hard times mean. The fact is that financial stringency in Canada is generally caused by over-prosperity. Many business men of Canada during the past two or three years have been doing $100 of business on $100 of capital. If they had confined their business relatively in volume to the amount of capital they had invested in it, they would not be hard up. But where a man's business requires that he must borrow large sums from one source or another, he must expect difficulties, and if we have another condition existing, namely — investing in real estate, particularly in the West—he may anticipate trouble. It is not a common thing, as we all know, for a merchant with a small capital to borrow too much money, and unduly extend his business. In addition to this, he acquires equities amounting to imagination at any rate, to more than his whole capital, and we have the inevitable result of financial embarrassment. One naturally asks the question, why he should expend his energies, his credit and his time in looking after that which is no part of his business? The men who attend to their business exclusively, and leave stock and land speculations alone, are not the persistent borrowers, who have to borrow at all times, and from every available source.

SANGUINE AS REGARDS CANADA'S FUTURE

We may ask on an occasion like the present, What of the future? I am very sanguine as regards Canada. Let us look at some of the evidences of prosperity which are laid before us:

England stands pre-eminently prosperous. It is said by many leading economists that the year 1913 has been the most prosperous one ever known in England. The cloud cast over business in England by predictions of war with Germany has entirely passed away, and judging from reports, the relations between these great nations are harmonious. It is worth noting that in spite of war rumors, British imports have increased over £30,000,000 sterling during the past year.

As an offset to this, the decline in financial securities is to be considered, but it looks as if this danger will be averted by a termination of the existing war troubles before long.

Coming to our own country, we find a pronounced feeling of hopefulness. From every province comes the voice of prosperity. We have the messages from every Premier in the Dominion lately published. It may be taken that the messages are not so much the individual views of the Premiers as the views of the respective governments and leading men in each province. I give the messages in substantially their own language:

Ontario says that it has had a year of great prosperity, and can see still greater things ahead.

Quebec claims to have every reason to be satisfied with 1913, and looks for a continuance of the good times.

Nova Scotia tells us that the financial stringency, such as it was, has not materially affected the volume of its mercantile business, and that a large business for 1914 is confidently expected.

New Brunswick is equally hopeful and expects a banner year.

Prince Edward Island has had a large and profitable trade, and a good measure of general prosperity. The money stringency was scarcely noticed in that province.

Turning to Manitoba, we are told that in 1913 the progress and development were as rapid as could be expected, consistent with a healthy and permanent condition.

In Saskatchewan we are informed that business has turned to legitimate channels, and that unwise real estate speculation has largely declined.

Alberta is looking forward on good grounds to a new record of progress for 1914. It is predicted that the present year cannot fail to result in a continuance of material prosperity, and I think a remark made by the Premier of that province is absolutely true, namely, "that the high rate on money has not so much impeded progress as it has eliminated speculative and doubtful undertakings."

British Columbia speaks of its remarkable progress during the past year, and tells that the legitimate business of the Pacific Coast province is in a sound condition.

Taking Canada as a whole, we find that there was in 1913 an increase of $50,000,000 in the value of her products over 1912, a significant proof of her prosperity.

APPREHENDED DANGER IS PAST.

Then we see by the opinions of Canadian bankers and other exponents in the financial press, that the apprehended danger is past and that money is likely to be easier during the year. The fear that the bankers had of immediate danger would naturally cause some stringency in money matters. To show that in this respect the country successfully withstood the pressure, I need only mention the fact that the loans of the banks increased during the year, and that notwithstanding the great drain upon the resources of depositors in land investments, the deposits kept up in a most remarkable degree. This is another instance of the truth of what I have mentioned, namely—the commercial vitality of this country.

During the years 1912-13 many people were prophesying great depression. It is true there has been some contraction, which so far has amounted to nothing more than a wholesome slackening of a too rapid pace. A slight consideration will show that the cry was not well founded. Let us give you an instance of the truth of this. Toronto is not an exceptional city, but it is a very typical commercial centre. During the last two years appeals were made to Toronto citizens under what is known as "Campaigns." Within a few weeks these appeals were responded to by the subscription and payment of nearly two million dollars in the aggregate towards objects which were of a moral or religious character, this money being largely obtained from business men. The largest and most expensive buildings in the city of Toronto have been built within the last three years, and are still being built, at an outlay of millions of dollars. Huge factories, big apartment houses and fine shops are in evidence everywhere, and in the whole length of Yonge street, from Bloor to King, being a distance of about one mile, you will find fewer vacant shops than at any time in the history of the city. This is the present condition, notwithstanding the fact that properties have trebled in value, and that rents have gone up enormously by reason of the increase in the value of the land. The people who never should have been in business are being weeded out, and the active, hopeful merchant and manufacturer are taking their places. Land sales are keeping up, and I know from the details of several large syndicate holdings that payments are being met, and there are no forfeitures. The same condition applies to other large cities in the Dominion, and the leading city of Montreal, I believe, shows similar evidences of great advancement. Then take bank stocks for instance: The Royal Bank at the end of 1912 was 222; at the end of 1913 it stood at 221. Other banks maintained a good level. The liquidation of stocks has not been from investments, but from speculations, and it speaks well for the banks that their stock has fluctuated very little during the year, owing to the permanency and stability of this class of security.

I believe that the change in the tariff regulations in the United States will have a most beneficial effect upon the wealth and development of this country. Taking an absolutely non-partisan view of the matter, it must be admitted by all parties that a change of this kind must ensure to the benefit of a producing country, and particularly to provinces in the western portion of our Dominion.

I hope to see the various banks of this country continue to extend the most liberal treatment towards the public, and they have undoubtedly done in the past, and as I have no doubt they will continue to do. At the same time, I am fully in accord with the precaution which this bank took in regard to conserving its resources when there might be danger ahead. The strength of a bank must rest to a great extent on its ability to meet all probable contingencies, and the only way this can be done is to be strong at the moment when the strain upon it is likely to be greatest.

NEW TORONTO BANK.

I am glad to state that the Royal Bank has secured on advantageous terms a long lease of premises in one of the four most prominent buildings in Toronto, being on the corner of King and Yonge streets, without being called on to finance the property or building and consequently holds as tenant with the advantage of occupying perhaps the finest location for a bank in Canada.

The report was then unanimously adopted.

On motion of Mr. A. J. Brown, seconded by Mr. C. S. Wilcox, Shareholders' By-Law No. 1 was amended by increasing the number of Directors from sixteen to seventeen.

The Chairman stated that under the provisions of the new Bank Act, it would be necessary for the meeting to appoint auditors for the ensuing year and to fix their remuneration. Mr. W. H. Thorne moved, and Mr. Hugh Paton second, that two auditors be elected and that their remuneration be not more than $12,000.

Mr. Fayette Brown nominated Mr. J. Marwick, C.A., and Mr. G. R. Hale Sims nominated Mr. S. R. Mitchell, F.C.A., both of the firm of Marwick, Mitchell, Peat & Co., of Montreal, New York, Glasgow, etc. Upon a ballot being taken, Messrs. J. Marwick and S. R. Mitchell were unanimously elected auditors.

It was moved by Mr. Alex. Paterson, seconded by Mr. C. R. Hosmer, that the thanks of this meeting be presented to the President, Vice-Presidents and Directors. Mr. W. H. Thorne responded.

Mr. E. F. B. Johnston K.C., moved and Mr. Wiley Smith seconded a vote of thanks to the General Manager and staff of the bank, to which the General Manager responded.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The following Directors were then elected for the ensuing year:

H. S. Holt Hon. W. H. Thorne
E. L. Pease Hugh Paton
E.F.B. Johnston, K.C. T. J. Drummond
Wiley Smith Wm. Robertson
Hon. David MacKeen A. J. Brown, K.C.
Jas. Redmond W. J. Sheppard
G. R. Crowe C. S. Wilcox
D. K. Elliott A. E. Dyment
C. E. Neill

At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Directors, Mr. H. S. Holt was unanimously re-elected President, Mr. E. L. Pease Vice-President, and Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., 2nd Vice-President, for the ensuing year.

THE TROLLEY IN JAPAN

Japan has been invaded by the trolley. Shades of the samurai! From [illegible] until the [illegible] are [illegible] one may now trolley around Tokyo and from there to Yokohama. No other trolley system on earth offers a more tempting and diversified program for its guests than this trolley ramble, for instance, which visitors to the Japanese capital are now taking at a cost of less than 50 cents. From any corner of Tokyo the trolley deposits one at the Shinagawa suburb, where the rural lines have their city terminus. The equipment is made up of heavy high powered cars, quite similar to those used in the same service in the United States. The different devices about the cars bear the names of patentees and manufacturers familiar to those who overhaul the rolling stock of any American company.—Travel Magazine.

TO KEEP SKIN HEALTHY YOUTHFUL, WRINKLELESS

Now that the social season is here, be especially careful to keep your skin in fine condition. You know how conspicuous complexion defects appear under the bright light of the drawing or ball room. Also how very evident are some makeups when similarly illuminated. I have myself discarded cosmetics entirely, using a process which gives far better results, and which leaves no trace on the skin. At night I spread on a thin coat of ordinary mercolized wax, washing it off next morning. This gradually absorbs the devitalized particles of surface skin; just as gradually the more youthful skin beneath comes forth, providing a complexion as clear, smooth and delicately tinted as a young girl's. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's and try this remarkable treatment.

Remember, too, that wrinkles, even the finer lines, are not easily concealed in a brilliantly lighted room. You can quickly eliminate these hateful lines by bathing your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz. dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. And your face won't look sticky, as after using pastes.—Aunt Sally in [illegible] Books.

WEST POINT UNIFORMS.

Cadets Must Sacrifice Comfort For the Sake of Looks.

"It is true," said a retired army officer in a discussion of West Pointers with the Washington Herald, "that many West Pointers acquire a figure of perfection of symmetry and a carriage the name of manly grace, but these are due not to any [illegible], but to the systematic drills and exercises that make the cadet, to a certain extent, an athlete. At the outset these young fellows are put through what are called the 'setting up' exercises, their object being to straighten the body and develop the chest. One might suppose that it would require a great amount of such exercise to make any marked showing, but three long hours of such exercise daily will soon produce beneficial results in the most stooped forms.

"The cadet uniform is also a great help in this direction. The dress coat is tight, very tight. The shoulders are heavily padded in order to give them a square effect. The chest is made thick, so that there will be no danger of wrinkling. And in size a new dress coat seems always to be designed for a boy several times smaller than the one who is to wear it. A new dress coat, in fact, is always a source of suffering to its owner. When he first puts it on it buttons readily about the neck, but seems to lack about six inches at the waist. The owner may squirm and wriggle and attempt to reduce his waist to a minimum circumference, but his maiden efforts are never sufficient to button the new dress coat. Experience is a great teacher, though, and the young fellow laughingly requests one or two of his friends to lend their assistance, and he finally succeeds in buttoning the coat. All this for the sake of looks. Comfort has no place in the makeup of a West Pointer; it's discipline and looks."

ODD STUNTS WITH A WHIP.

Wonderful Feats by a European Master of the Lash.

"I saw a downright novelty on the bill of a European music hall," said a man who spends a bit of his time on the other side. "It was furnished by an Austro-Hungarian, who accomplished some wonderful things with a whip.

"One of his stunts was to take a long lashed, stout handled whip in each hand and, with orchestral accompaniment, proceed to crack or snap them at a terrific rate. The sound made by his whips in this manner is graduated from a noise like a rifle report to the soft click of a billiard ball. It makes a curious sort of music and serves to show how he can regulate the force of each stroke.

"Another feature of his performance is achieved with a vicious looking whip with an abnormally long lash. It is provided with a heavy handle of medium length. This is his favorite toy, and what he can do with it is really wonderful. He first gives an idea of what fearful force may lie in a whiplash in the hands of an expert. There is a large frame shown, over which is stretched a calf or sheep skin. This is marked with dots of red paint. The man with the whip steps up and, swinging the lash round his head, lets fly at the calfskin. With every blow he actually pulls a piece out of the leather, leaving a clean cut hole. These pieces are distributed among the audience to show that there is no trickery about the performance.

"After this he takes a frame with three shelves. On these there are a dozen or more of medium sized apples lying very close together and provided with large numbers. Any one in the audience may designate which apple he wishes struck, and the unerring lash snatches it out like a flash. A still more difficult feat is the snapping of coins from a narrow necked bottle. A piece of silver about the size of a half crown is put over the neck of the bottle, which stands on the edge of a table. The whip artist, without appearing to take any sort of aim, sends the long lash whizzing through the air and picks off the coin without jarring the bottle, much less breaking it."—New York Press.

Wagner as an Acrobat.

Ferdinand Praeger related an incident of a visit to Wagner at his Swiss home. The two men sat one morning on an ottoman in the drawing room talking over the events of the years. Suddenly Wagner, who was sixty years old, rose and stood on his head upon the ottoman. At that moment Wagner's wife entered. Her surprise and alarm caused her to run to her husband, exclaiming: "Ah, Richard, Richard!" Quickly recovering himself, he assured her that he was sane and wished to show that he could stand on his head at sixty, which was more than Ferdinand could do.

Berlioz smiled and was silent for a moment. Presently he said, "Give me your album." Instantly he was provided with writing materials. Then he wrote, "Opavrou [illegible]."

"What does it mean?" asked Mme. Patti, puzzled.

"It means, my child, 'bring the pate,'" answered Berlioz [illegible].

Rough on the Pianos.

Once in the company of President Diaz I spent a few nights in the Mexican earthquake zone as the guest of the governor of the state. As a measure of precaution the plaster ceilings of our sleeping rooms had been replaced with strips of matched boarding. "If a trembler should come in the night, senor," remarked my host as he was bidding me good night, "wait for nothing, but make straight for the patio. I think these boards will hold until you get from under cover." And that evening, when I took the governor's wife out to dinner, she had remarked sadly: "We are so handicapped here in the hot lands. It is impossible even to have music, for no sooner do I have my grand piano tuned than an earthquake comes along and tips it over."—E. Alexander Powell, F. R. G. S., in Everybody's.

Origin of the Opera.

The opera, like nearly everything else interesting in the world of mind, had its origin in ancient Athens. The earliest librettos were by Sophocles and Aeschylus, such as the "Alcestis" and "Antigone," a band of lutes and lyres constituting the orchestra, the dialogues being musically declaimed and the choruses sung to the best music of the time. Thus do we have the germ of all later developments in the line of opera.—Exchange.

Choice of Three.

"You'll have to do one of three things," declared the very portly conductor.

The ticketless passenger looked up insolently and said, "Well?"

"Show yer ticket, pay yer fare or git off," answered the very portly conductor.

The insolent passenger leaned out of the window.

"And you, too, my friend," he said coolly, "will have to do one of three things."

"Well?" queried the portly conductor confidently.

"Walk more," retorted the passenger, "eat less or bust!"

And by the time the fat conductor had recovered the train had left the station.—Buffalo News.

He found his hair was leaving the top of his head and took his barber to task about it.

"Well, look here," said the man, "I don't mind drinking another bottle, but this must be the last."—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

Kingston Showing Growth.

That Kingston is growing, and growing rapidly, is illustrated by the big increase in the number of building permits taken out for the erection of dwellings this year as compared with a few years ago. An increase of approximately 150 per cent. is shown in the last four years. This year to date there have been 162 building permits taken out, while in 1910 for the whole year there were only 70 dwelling built.

Self-poisoning is one of the most common disorders with which people are afflicted and it expresses itself in so many different ways that, in order to describe them all without too much trouble, it was auto-intoxication.

Self-poisoning is caused almost wholly by wrong eating, usually eating too much, but in many cases, by eating several things at the same meal that are chemically incompatible.

Some of the symptoms of self-poisoning are anaemia, languor, that tired feeling, mental dullness, headaches and a lack of interest in things and a general falling below mental and physical par.

When we take more food into the stomach than the body can use, Nature's first method to get rid of it is to decompose it. This produces what is called [illegible]

[illegible]

The remedy for auto-intoxication is a moderate quantity of simple food, copious water drinking, and the total elimination of all stimulating and sedative articles such as coffee, tobacco, liquor and drugs of all kinds.

No greater mistake can be made than to seek a remedy in drugs or take stimulants, when one is anaemic or "run down." By this process we merely throw an additional poison upon the self-poisoned body.

Origin of the Coat of Arms of the Earl of Leinster.

Most of the wild animals have a place in heraldry, and many strange and impossible creatures, such as griffins, dragons and unicorns, have been favored as emblems of daring and valor. But the donkey and the monkey have not been so used, except in one instance, where the monkey has been admitted to the ranks of titled nobility. The story of this adoption is told by Mr. Curtis in his book, "One Irish Summer."

On the Leinster coat of arms are three monkeys standing with plain collar and chained; motto, "Crom-a-boo," "To Victory." This is the only coat of arms, I am told, that has ever borne a monkey in the design. It was adopted by John Fitzthomas Fitzgerald in 1316 for romantic reasons.

While this Earl of Leinster was an infant he was in the castle of Woodstock, which is now owned by the Duke of Marlborough. The castle caught fire. In the confusion the child was forgotten, and when the family and servants remembered him and started a search they found the nursery in ruins. But on one of the towers was a gigantic ape, a pet of the family, carefully holding the young earl in his arms. The animal, with extraordinary intelligence, had crawled through the smoke, rescued the baby and carried it to the top of the tower.

When the earl had grown to manhood he discarded the family coat of arms and adopted the monkeys for his crest, and they have been retained to this day. Wherever you find the tomb of a Fitzgerald you will see the monkeys at the foot of the effigy or under the inscription.

ROUTED THE SINGER.

Tosti's Encounter With a Persistent and Peppery Stranger.

"Tosti used to tell an amusing little story of feminine persistency," says Harold Simpson in his book, "A Century of English Ballads." It was during one of his busiest mornings, with a long list of singing lessons to begin through, that a knock came at the door of Tosti's flat. His valet was ill, and so Tosti went to the door himself. A lady, a stranger to him, stood on the threshold.

"'Signor Tosti?' she inquired.

"Tosti bowed.

"'Oh,' said the lady, 'I am singing your song, "My Memories," at Manchester tonight, and I want you to kindly run through it with me.'

"'Madame,' answered Tosti politely, but firmly, 'I fear it is impossible. I have two pupils with me now, and a third is waiting in the anteroom, while others will shortly be arriving.'

"'But you must!' the lady persisted.

"'I am sorry'— began Tosti again when he suddenly received a violent push backward and the lady walked into the studio.

"Tosti followed, protesting. After a long argument, which threatened to become heated, the lady snapped out:

"'Very well; I shan't sing your song then!'

"'Madame,' said Tosti, taking her by the hand, 'I am infinitely obliged to you.'

"The lady gave one look at him and [illegible]"

An Unpleasant Surprise.

A fussy passenger in a suburban trolley car suddenly discovered that he had a grievance against the road and forthwith proceeded to abuse the conductor.

The latter was a small man who persisted in saying that rules were rules and that he had no discretion in the matter.

Finally the fussy man became so very warm and seemed so determined to resort to fistic hostilities that an innocent bystander felt compelled to intervene.

"Don't lick the conductor," he said. "Lick the superintendent."

And just then a two fisted six footer who must have weighed 200 pounds at least arose from a nearby seat.

"That's a very good suggestion," he quietly remarked. "I'm the superintendent."

Whereupon the fussy man quietly slid into the nearest empty seat.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Tong Gun Men.

The accuracy of aim among the gunmen of the Chinese tongs was remarked on recently by a visitor to Chinatown, says a New York letter. "Yes," replied a man who knows his Chinatown. Write to a Man Just as You Would Talk to Him at Your Desk.

Business letter writing is no longer merely "correspondence," but "literature," and the correspondent who formerly wasted his precious breath on such banalities as "Yours received and contents duly noted" is now relegated to the "old school" class, and unless he is willing to adopt the new rules of letter writing he is likely to change not only his position, but find it necessary to change his vocation as well.

The up to date business man does not waste time indulging in the preliminaries of "I beg to acknowledge receipt" or "In reply would say," but goes straight to the subject at issue firmly, without frills, even eliminating the time worn advice, "Awaiting your early reply," and closing without the absurdity of "Begging to remain."

"Write to a man exactly as you would talk to him if he were sitting at your desk," is the maxim of one of the best authorities on letter writing in Chicago. By eliminating useless phrases having no bearing on the subject the business man not only saves his own time in dictating, but that of his stenographer in transcribing the notes. By the old method of letter writing the opening and closing of letters contained almost five lines of useless "form" matter which would average on 100 letters just 500 lines of superfluous effort.—Chicago Tribune.

Be Yourself.

Insist on yourself; never imitate. Your own gift you can present every moment with the cumulative force of a whole life's cultivation, but of the adopted talent of another you have only an extemporaneous, half possession. That which each can do best none but his Maker can teach him. Where is the master who could have taught Shakespeare? Where is the master who could have instructed Franklin or Washington or Bacon or Newton? Every great man is unique. Do that which is assigned to you and you cannot hope too much or dare too much.—Emerson.

Help For the Electrician.

If you are ever puzzled in working with electric wires as to which is positive and which is negative or whether the current is alternating there is no simpler method than the use of a potato. Cut the vegetable in half and thrust the ends of the wire into the fresh pulp. About the positive wire a [illegible] appear, due to [illegible] If the current is alternating [illegible] —Chicago Tribune.

"How?" said the friend.

Burns Was Discharged.

At yesterday's police court, John Burns was charged with indecent assault against a young woman, named Lizzie Kelly of Ashburnham. Mr. Wearing representing the Crown asked that the case be tried "in camera." Then about 60 [illegible] left and possibly passed a vote of censure because their morbid curiosity was not to be gratified.

Miss Kelly, the first witness refused to take the oath until a Bible with a cross was used. One was sent for. Mr. Gordon for the defence pleaded not guilty. She met prisoner at 8 p.m. on Hunter street. She went to Burn's house. When asked what transpired at Burn's house she declined to answer, saying "Burns can tell that." She afterwards stepped with a young man while Burns went for a cutter. The three drove out in the country. One of the men had a bottle of whiskey. She drank out of the bottle. Here Miss Kelly snapped at the Magistrate, "I guess you are trying to Wright a book!" Of course in such a case the evidence was of a character that The Times never prints. Burns was discharged.

"I was never actually sick," writes Mrs. Norman La Pierre, wife of a well known resident of Lakeview, "yet I never could get strong like other women. I ate well enough, but somehow rich and red blood I could never make. When I married I took a great pride in my housekeeping, but it kept me tired all the time. Mrs. Lachance, my neighbor, looked well —she told me her health had been made up by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I only thought of pills as a physic, but now I know that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are more, for they quickened my stomach, liver and bowels—made me steadier and stronger, gave me fresh color in my cheeks as I never had before. I sincerely believe Dr. Hamilton's Pills should be used by every woman—that's why I write this letter."

The Canadian Pacific Railway Has Done Much to Build Up Canada

Is a Strong Fortress of National and Imperial Sentiment

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the President, a Man of Great Mental Resources

The quality of imagination is revealed in the whole history of the Canadian Pacific Railway. There was imagination in the outlook of Joseph Howe, the father of responsible government in British North America, when he declared at Halifax 60 years ago:

"I am neither a prophet nor a son of a prophet, yet I will venture to predict that in five years we shall make the journey hence to Quebec and Montreal, and home through Portland and St. John by rail, and I believe that many in this room will live to hear the whistle of the steam engine in the passes of the Rocky Mountains and to make the the journey from Halifax to the Pacific in five or six days."

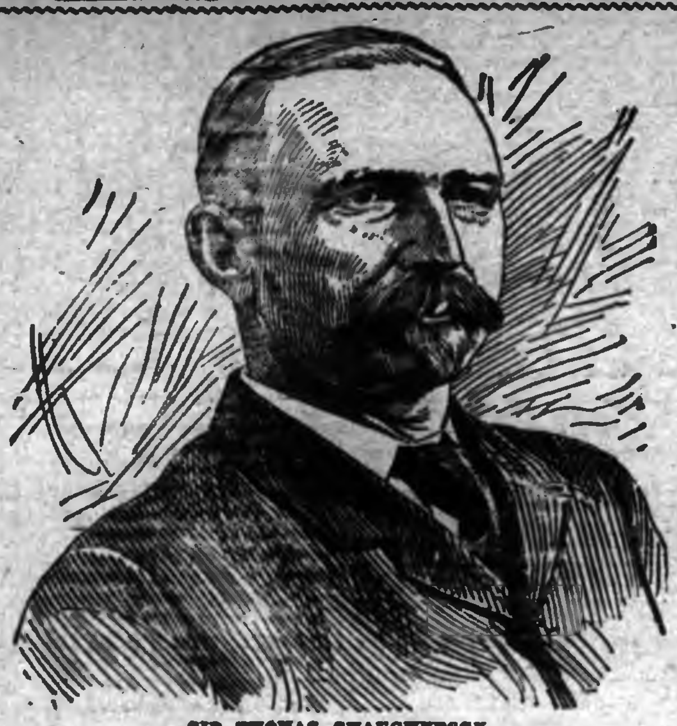
There was imagination in the statesmen who engaged with British Columbia to build a railway along the north shore of Lake Superior, across the unsettled western territories, and through the mountains to the Pacific. There was imagination in George Stephen and Donald Smith, who organized the syndicate by which the great project was achieved. There was imagination in the massive mind of Sir William Van Horne, who ruled during the difficult era of construction, and neither less power nor less vision have been displayed by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy.

Born at Milwaukee in 1853 of Irish-American parentage, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy had his early training on American railways. From 1869 to 1882 he was in the service of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, of which Mr. W. C. Van Horne was general manager. He so impressed himself upon Van Horne that he was asked to come to Canada when his old chief became general manager of the Canadian Transcontinental highway. From the office of general purchasing agent for the company he was advanced in 1891 to that of vice-president, and in 1899 he succeeded Van Horne as president. His power lies in his great knowledge of the affairs of the company and in the respect and confidence which he commands. He does not shrink from concessions in order to remove local grievances and satisfy legitimate public demands. He recognizes that the company has obligations which should be fulfilled and that the progress and prosperity of Canada depend greatly upon the adequacy and efficiency of the services which the railway provides. Thus many millions have been expended in enlarging terminal facilities in the commercial centres in double tracking, in stimulating agriculture, in building branches, in improving grades in the mountains, in irrigating dry areas, in establishing industries, and in providing additional equipment for moving the Western grain crop to the head of navigation.

Between the company and its workmen very satisfactory relations exist. The brotherhoods of railway employes are freely recognized. There is sympathetic consideration for demands for higher wages and better living conditions. There is full confidence among the company's workmen that any deadlock in negotiations between the unions and the officers of the company can be satisfactorily overcome by an appeal to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy.

The great body of shippers are as loyal to the company as are its own staff. It is not suggested that grievances do not arise or that the company is not vigilant to assure its own interests. There is continual agitation over freight charges. There are complaints from individuals and communities against its methods and policies. There are journals which constantly assail the company and [illegible] ever demand fresh legislation to curb its power and regulate its charges. But the tradition and the policy of the Company is to give prompt and efficient service and to treat passengers with consideration and courtesy. Hence, whether charges be high or low, there is appreciation among shippers of the service provided. So there is gratitude among passengers for the attention which relieves the weariness of long journeys by rail.

There is a general feeling that the company, as represented by its president and board, is a strong fortress of national and Imperial sentiment. No other enterprise has done so much to establish and maintain the credit of Canada. It has assisted materially in settling the Western Provinces. It was active in attracting immigration when the Government services were inactive and inefficient. It has kept trade within Canadian channels and developed ports on the Atlantic and on the Pacific. It has improved steamship communication with Great Britain and with the Australasian communities. It may be that all this was in the direct interest of the Company. It may be that by attracting immigration the value of its vast landed estate was enhanced.



SIR THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY,
President C. P. R.

It may be that its sea fleets were the natural complement of its land services. But it still is true that the company has been loyal to the objects for which it was created and that the genius and energy of its management have stimulated national feeling and strengthened national feeling and strengthened national self-confidence. There is no doubt that if the Company should attempt to abuse its power it could exercise perhaps a dangerous influence in Canadian affairs. But Sir Thomas Shaughnessy does not believe that the railway should control any party or that any party should control the railway. It is long since the Company depended upon the public treasury. Indeed the strength of its position is attested by its acquiescence in liberal gifts of cash to its younger rivals. Doubtless, if necessary, it could not act with vigour in its own defence, but no other consideration is likely to draw the company into the quarrels of parties.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy dislikes publicity and loves simplicity. He speaks with ease and fluency, but shuns the platform. No one doubts that he directs the administration and determines the policy of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and if the era of operation and expansion has been at least as remarkable as the era of construction, to him chiefly belong the credit and the honor.

LORD STRATHCONA IS UNCHANGED

London, Jan. 17.—It was announced to-night that the condition of Lord Strathcona showed no change.

Convention of the Conference on Safety of the Sea Will Be Signed Shortly.

BIG PUBLIC MEETING HELD TO GET PETERBOROUGH SENATOR

Many Prominent Men of Both Political Stripes Endorse Mr. James Kendry Ex-M. P. for the Position

On Saturday night a well attended meeting was held in the City Council Chamber to consider a recommendation for a Peterborough representative in the Dominion Senate. Many local merchants and politicians of all stripes of politics were present.

It might be mentioned in this connection that after the death of the late Jas. Stevenson, M.P., a letter was found in his clothes from the late Sir John Thompson, Premier of Canada, assuring Mr. Stevenson that he was slated for a Senatorship. However, Sir John Thompson died before this appointment was made.

His Worship Mayor Buller explained the object of the meeting. A deputation will be sent to Ottawa.

He referred briefly to the importance of Peterborough as a manufacturing centre. Mayor Buller was nominated as chairman and Mr. Armstrong as secretary of the meeting.

Mr. Turner suggested that the local press had backed up a senator from Peterborough and advocated Mr. Kendry for the position.

Mr. R. G. Patterson, of the C.G.E. Co., moved, seconded by Mr. W. H. Dunsford, that Mr. Kendry be Senator for this county. He gave cogent reasons why Peterborough County should have a representative in the Senate and why Mr. Kendry is the right man for the job. Carried unanimously amid great cheering.

Mr. G. M. Hayes strongly advocated the motion.

Mr. Howden, reeve of Monaghan, also strongly endorsed the motion.

Mr. George [illegible] also supported the motion.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., next supported Mr. Kendry's nomination in no uncertain words. There should be no politics in nominating a Senator, but Mr. Kendry is the right man.

Mr. Travers thought the meeting had chosen a worthy man.

Mr. [illegible] read a motion from the local Board of Trade advocating Mr. Kendry's nomination for a Senatorship.

Mr. E. A. Peck, spoke in feeling terms of the late Senator Geo. A. Cox. He moved a vote of sympathy to the relatives of the late Senator.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE WEATHER.

SUFFRAGETTE CAUGHT AFTER TEN MONTHS

London, Jan. 17.—Phyllis Brady, the well known militant suffragette, after evading the police for ten months, was arrested and brought before the police court at Chertsey, Surrey, to-day. The magistrate committed her for trial at London sessions, on a charge of arson. She is believed to be one of the suffragettes who set fire to the residence of Lady White, widow of the late field marshal Sir George White, at Englefield Green Surrey on March 20.

NO ACTION WAS TAKEN RE POLICEWOMAN

The local Police Commissioners met on Saturday afternoon when a delegation of the Women's Council, some thirty-one strong was heard. They advocated the employment of a woman policeman on the local force. They presented some strong arguments in favor of their contention. No action was taken, but the subject may receive further consideration.

It might be noted that Portsmouth N.H., some time ago appointed a female policeman on their force, but have recently abolished the office.

MINISTERS BUSY PREPARING FOR A BIG FIRE OF QUESTIONS

Provincial Cabinet Meeting Regularly and Each Member Getting Department Affairs in Shape

Toronto, Jan. 17.—By this time next month it is confidently expected that the Ontario Legislature will be in full swing. There is nothing in the deliberations of the Cabinet to indicate that the formal opening this year will be postponed beyond the usual date in the second week in February.

The provincial Cabinet these days meets regularly under the stress of business to be completed for the assembling of the members and each minister is rounding the affairs of his department into shape. In some of the larger administrative offices, such as that of the lands, forests and mines, this constitutes a serious task and one calling for an abundance of energy both on the part of the minister and his staff. One of the greatest incentives to bringing everything up to date is the influx of questions which comes with the opening of the house and the vast amount of material called for in "returns" by the opposition.

The appearance of the legislative chamber, too, would indicate the preparation for immediate use. The giant chandeliers are undergoing a final furbishing-up and the minor details incident to accommodating the first day crowd are in the hands of a staff of assistants.

It is understood that any thought of a cabinet reorganization until the close of the session will not be entertained by the Government. The health of Sir James, it is conceded, would not permit of his appearance in the house even if his return to the city were possible within a few days. On this understanding it is probable that Hon. J. J. Foy, acting premier, will take charge of the administration during the sitting of the house.

The session of 1914 will be known primarily as one of business.

LOCAL TURF CLUB WILL SEND DELEGATE

On Saturday the Peterborough Turf Club received the following letter. Mr. J. M. Brooks, President of the local Turf Club told The Times that a Peterborough delegate will be sent to Orillia. The date of the coming meeting is to be settled later.

Orillia, 12th January, 1914.

J. M. Brooks, Pres.,
Peterborough Turf Club.

Dear Sir,—No doubt you have noticed the great interest being taken all through Canada in the Light Harness Horses and the magnificent animals that are being imported, raised and developed here.

One big draw back in this North-Western District has been a lack of organization or co-operation among the Societies and Associations. It has been suggested by more than one that the Orillia Turf Club should take the matter in hand and endeavor to get as many of the Associations as possible to send a representative to Orillia at a convenient date to arrange a circuit of race meetings like those held by The Canadian Racing Association, and others. By getting together and arranging a Circuit we would be able to get much better horses, larger entries, and could entertain the public much better and put the racing game on a much better footing.

If your Association is interested I would like you to write me at once, and if sufficient interest is taken I will call a meeting at an early date.

Yours truly,
DR. JOS. C. MOORE,
Sec'y Orillia Turf Club.

MEETING OF AUTO-CLUB

Important Matters Engage Attention of Motor Car Owners

A meeting of the Peterborough Automobile Club was held on Saturday afternoon in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. There were present Messrs. R. W. Travers, President, in the chair; A. E. Coulthard, G. K. Rockham, G. C. Wainwright, Canfield Ald. Duffus and Ald. Green.

A delegation was appointed to attend the annual meeting of the Ontario Motor League, which takes place to-day in Toronto. The delegates were requested to urge that some of the "better roads" money should be spent in improving the highways between Peterborough and Port Hope.

During the discussion which followed, it was suggested that a strong effort be made to have the fines, which amounts to thousands of dollars, spent on the roads in the district where said fines are imposed.

The taxing of autos according to horsepower and reciprocity in auto licenses between Canada and the United States, was also favored.

Mr. G. C. Wainwright moved, seconded by Dr. Amyes,—that on January 31st, a meeting be held to change the date of the annual meeting. If practicable the annual meeting might be held on that same evening.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

SIR JAMES IS SLIGHTLY BETTER DECLARE DOCTORS AFTER TESTS

First Test of Patient's Heart is Repeated, so That Gratifying Result Could Be Confirmed

New York, Jan. 17.—The results of the tests made by Dr. Hermann Biggs and Dr. R. A. Pyne on Sir James' heart, which revealed the fact that the Premier was slightly better, came as a great surprise to those attending him. They had inferred from the fact that the patient spent a rather restless night that he was not improved.

In order that no false impression should be given out the tests were repeated, the second one confirming the first.

It appears that Sir James had successfully resisted the relapse that began last Sunday and which called for such a demand on his reserve strength. Whether the patient's march in the right direction would be maintained was a matter his doctors refrained from talking about, though they were palpably pleased with his condition.

At 4.30 Saturday afternoon Dr. Pyne stated that the improvement noted in Sir James' condition had been maintained. He said the Premier had taken his nourishment well at lunch time and seemed considerably refreshed

AMERICAN GIRL MURDERED IN ROME

Girl Writes That Her Mother Would Like to Marry Him.

Rome, Jan. 17.—Advices from Sassari, Sardinia, state that the body of Miss Ellen Giles, a writer and artist of Philadelphia has been found here. She had been killed by a revolver shot, and it was at first reported she had committed suicide, but further investigation led the police to believe she had been murdered.

Miss Giles had been studying the historic monuments and customs of the people. She appeared to be well supplied with funds, $100 in Italian money being found in her pockets.

RAPID FIRE BUSINESS SESSION WASTE HALF WEEK AT START

Parliament Really Begins on Monday With Debate on Address--Social Affairs Occupy Time of M. P. and His Wife During First Week

Ottawa, Jan. 17.—What was to have been a hurry up business session began rather lamely by wasting a full half week at the start. Parliament heard the speech from the throne, and forthwith adjourned until Monday. No doubt the delay was the result of agreement, and may not have been unconnected with the big state dinner at Government House on Thursday night. Saturday night will be given up to the annual drawing room, to be held by their royal highnesses in the senate chamber. Thus social rather than business affairs occupy the attention of Mr. M. P. and his wife the first week of the session.

Yet there was some grumbling from members of the house who arrived here from the far east or the far west perhaps Monday or Tuesday, and have been compelled to loaf ever since. They can see no reason why it takes the house of commons from three to five days to settle down to business. Even Ontario members are beginning to ask why the house cannot do business in a more business-like way. Thus J. A. Macdonald Armstrong, of North York, who rises not later than 8 a.m., is unable to see why the house should not convene before 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Sooner or later Parliament will meet like any other collection of Canadian business men at reasonable hours in the day time, and cut out the night sittings, at least to a large extent.

Parliament really begins on Monday next, with the debate upon the address. There is always the formal moving and seconding, by government supporters, fresh from the people; and then the opening gun of the parliamentary battle is fired by the leader of the opposition. This gives the prime minister who follows, an early opportunity to make the real speech from the throne, outlining the position and the policies of the government. By the second day the debate finds a wider field, and many members discuss what has happened during the recess, the economic conditions of the country, and needed legislation. Then the discussion may contract to partisan charges and recriminations. It is apt to finish dully, no matter with what dash or brilliancy it may have begun.

PASSENGERS OF COBEQUID GAVE UP HOPE OF LIFE

Women and Children, Crouching in Bitter Cold, Prayed For Help

Yarmouth, N.S., Jan. 16.—Ripped from stem to stern the Royal Mail steamer Cobequid was abandoned on the rocks of Trinity Ledges to-day when her captain and eleven members of the crew who were chosen to remain with the ship as long as possible were taken off. Cared for in the hotels of Yarmouth are sixteen passengers and eighty members of the crew rescued last night.

Hour after hour these passengers were huddled in little staterooms while the sea dashed over the Cobequid, driving her hard against the rocks. Sister of Charity Baptista who was Miss Anne Bauld, of Halifax, was among the passengers, and to-day told of their suffering and terror as they waited in the darkness.

The Sister's Story.

"It was early Tuesday that the Cobequid went ashore," Sister Baptista said. "A terrible gale was blowing and we could scarcely see half the length of the ship.

"The shock of the steamer striking the ledge was felt by every passenger on the boat. It was between 6.30 and 7 o'clock. Everyone rushed from the staterooms, and the women and children were immediately gathered forward in the Captains cabin. We could hear the high seas breaking over the ship, and the roar of the blizzard. The wireless operator was sending out his appeals for aid.

Ship Broke in Two.

"Then the boilerrooms were flooded. We could hear the crash above us as the pilot house, lifeboats and companionway were swept away. The Cobequid seemed to give a terrible lurch, and then settled back somewhat. It was then I guess she was literally broke in two.

"It was intensely cold. There was but little heat, and fires were built in buckets. Over these little blazes tea was made, and the officers and members of the crew did everything possible to make us comfortable. As Tuesday and then Wednesday went on and no help had come, we began to believe the ship was doomed.

The Dead Sea Is Spreading.

The Dead sea is encroaching upon the land about it so rapidly in this decade that whole forests of trees which formerly grew at some distance from its banks are now partially submerged. Maps of the sea made twenty years ago show an island near the northern extremity of the lake which was not found during a recent survey, and it is supposed that this has been lost in the rising waters. The Turkish government sold the mining rights on the shores to a syndicate for about $250,000, and if the sea for some unknown reason continues to rise these holdings will be almost unattainable.

Cards For the Puppies.

A novelty in Paris is the lap dog visiting card. Poms and pugs which go visiting with their mistresses in fashionable circles have their own tiny pasteboards tucked away in little pockets of their outdoor coats. Such dogs have two sets of cards, which are duly left on other dogs at the houses where they are calling with their mistresses. One card gives the dog's real name and its own, while the other records its pet name joined to the family name of its owner. Cards are left according to the pedigree of the dog visited.

Australia and Our Canal.

The advantage of the Panama canal to Australia is thus referred to in a Melbourne paper: "It means that in another three or four years we shall have to rearrange our mail service to Europe and our whole oceanic transportation service. The Suez route to Britain will go by the board—must go—because the Panama canal will shorten the journey to and from Britain by several days and thus put all users of the new route in possession of an incomparable economic advantage over users of the old."

The Cabal.

The term "cabal" as applied to secret factions of any kind had its rise in England about 1667, being first applied to the cabinet of Charles II. and formed from the initials of the cabinet members' names—Lord Clifford, Lord Ashley, the Duke of Buckingham, Lord Arlington and the Duke of Lauderdale—C. A. B. A. L. Since that day it has been customary, in all English speaking lands at least, to apply the name to any secret cliques, especially in politics.

COAXING SLEEP.

Simply a Question of Will Power and Self Suggestion.

Ordinarily we do not sleep by accident or haphazard. We simply resolve to sleep, and self suggestion plays a great part in the production of sleep. We go through a variety of actions, all suggestive of a change from our normal waking condition. We undress; we place ourselves in a comfortable position; we close our eyes; we believe and expect we are going to sleep, and the result is—sleep.

One of the great preventives of sleep is the fear of not sleeping, but a writer in Harper's Bazaar says that once this fear is broken down we sleep anyhow. The insomniac worries about his insomnia, and this very worry deepens the mischief; hence the sufferer should suggest to himself again and again, "If I sleep, well; if I don't sleep, I will at least gain rest by keeping my mind calm and my body relaxed."

In a word, our chances of getting sleep increase if we assume the external physical attitude which corresponds to sleep if we relax every muscle and let it stay relaxed, if we breathe lightly and regularly, if we call up the imagination of a sleeping person and talk and think sleep to ourselves, repeating silently and in a quiet, dreamy fashion such a formula as this:

"There is no reason why I should not sleep. Therefore I can sleep. Therefore I will sleep. My mind is at peace. Sleep is coming. I am getting sleepy. I am about to sleep. I am asleep."

FELLING BIG TREES.

The Great Waste That Comes With Making Up Their Beds.

In logging operations the felling of one of the big trees requires much skill in order that it may not be broken in the fall, as such an accident means perhaps the loss of fully [illegible] owing to the value of the wood. As yet, however, the old method prevails of cutting it part of the way through with the crosscut saw worked by two men, the ax being used for an incision on the opposite side, the trunk being felled by means of wedges.

In felling the tree, a number of smaller ones are frequently cut down to form a bed on which it may fall so that it will not break on account of its weight. Here is a great waste since the felling of a fir 150 tons in weight may require the sacrifice of a group of other trees which at maturity would equal it in size. In the "clearings" may be seen thousands of the young trees which have been cut down merely for "beds."

Undoubtedly a mechanical system could be utilized in the work, such as a portable power derrick, the top of which could be attached to a tree by the block and tackle system, thus allowing the trunk when cut through to be lowered gradually by means of ropes of steel cable without the timber being injured and the crushing of the smaller trees near it.—W. A. [illegible] in Cassier's Magazine.

A Noted London Spot, the Scene of Many Famous Occurrences.

Tower Hill is perhaps both the most important eminence and the most notable spot in all London. Few of us think what great persons have quietly lived there and what others, equally great, have wept and died upon it.

To it, or rather to Great Tower street, came Rochester to pursue his trade as an Italian fortune teller, while the befamed Buckingham often walked thither to consult a conjurer, a shrewd, farseeing rogue, who, when Felton bought at the cutler's shop on the summit of the hill for a shilling the knife with which he killed the duke's father, may have known for what purpose it was required.

William Penn was born on this hill in a house close to London wall. Forty-four years later—that is, in A. D. 1685—a poet lay dead, choked by a crust which starvation had urged him to devour too greedily, in an upper room of the Bull tavern. This was the ill fated Otway. At the time when the son of the muses lay dead Betterton, the celebrated founder of the stage after the restoration, was wringing tears from the eyes of the public, not for the famished dead, but at his own fictitious sorrows in "Venice Preserved."

It was in Great Tower street that Peter the Great used to pass his evenings drinking hot pepper and brandy with his boon companion, Lord Carmarthen.—London Standard.

Strange Feats of Eye and Hand.

An expert who prided himself upon the smallness of his writing sent the president of the French academy a grain of wheat on which he had written 221 words. A Polish poet wrote all of Homer's "Iliad" on a piece of paper which could be rolled up small enough to go into a nutshell.

In the sixteenth century a man named Mark offered to Queen Elizabeth a gold chain of fifty links. The chain was so fine it could not be seen unless it was put on a sheet of white paper. To prove its lightness Mark tied it to a fly, which flew away with it. The most curious fact in this matter, which required so extraordinary a facility of touch for making this ornament, was that Mark was a blacksmith, accustomed to all kinds of heavy tools all day long.

A Spaniard, Joseph Fabi, made a carriage as large as a grain of wheat. Under a magnifying glass it was possible to see the interior fitted up with seats, every detail being carried out to perfection.

A London Fog.

Six thousand tons of coal, it is said, are in suspension in the London atmosphere every day during the winter months—enough to encourage any fog—and 2,000,000 chimneys, all burning soft coal, are throwing off incessant volumes of soot laden smoke. These are the things that scientific people talk about when they try to explain fogs. And then they go on to tell us that fogs are expensive, that they cost London £5,000,000 a year, that a single day's fog causes the metropolis to consume enough gas and electricity in excess of her ordinary requirements to supply a town of [illegible] population for twelve months and that fogs [illegible]—London [illegible].

A PLEASING PARTY FROCK FOR A YOUNG GIRL

For young girls, fabrics and designs are chosen with the principal aim towards simplicity. Extreme styles, over rich materials or old colors should have no place in her wardrobe. The simpler drapes and the double and triple tunic with few trimmings are favored.

For the afternoon or dance frock, crêpe de Chine is youthful and the printed silks or bordered crêpes are smart and becoming.

Number 8168 is a simple, pretty frock for a girl of sixteen; it has a pompadour blouse, a one-piece skirt with a one-piece slightly draped tunic. A bordered crêpe is used in white with a border design in blue. The guimpe is made of shadow lace.

This dress may be copied in size 16 with 4⅝ yards of 36-inch material.

In 8120 we have an extremely smart little tailored frock. It is suitable for hard finish serge, ratine or one of the popular plaid materials. As illustrated old blue ratine was cleverly combined with a softly colored plaid.

There is a one-piece skirt with a double tunic and an effective blouse with a [illegible] set-in sleeves and broad, pointed revers.

To make this frock in size 36 it requires 4¼ yards of 36-inch material.

WATCHED OVER BY SATAN.

Superstitions That Twine About the Mandrake Plant.

The little plant the mandrake has a wealth of tradition centering round it such as is seldom found in floral lore. Quite an insignificant little plant with a spindle shaped root often divided into two or three forks and rudely resembling the human form, it is doubtless from this latter fact that it has derived its name. Langhorne in the latter part of the eighteenth century tells us to

Mark how the rooted mandrake wears
His human feet, his human hands, while it was once believed that a person pulling up a mandrake would instantly fall dead. This was said to be because the mandrake had a human heart at its root and when pulled it would scream in such a fearsome manner as to terrify the hearer to death or else induce madness. Shakespeare alludes to this where he says:

And shrieks like mandrakes torn out of the earth,
That living mortals, hearing them, run mad.

And again in "King Henry VII," where Suffolk, asked by Queen Margaret whether he has not spirit to curse his enemies, replies:

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent as bitter, searching terms
As curst, as harsh, as horrible to hear.

From time immemorial the mandrake has been associated with enchantments and has ever been believed to be one of the most powerful charms of witches. Mr. Conway in a paper on "Mystic Trees and Flowers" states that "by popular superstitions in some places it is said to be perpetually watched over by Satan, and if it be pulled up at certain holy times and with certain invocations the evil spirit will appear to do the bidding of the practitioner." — Westminster Review.

The Holland Primrose.

There is a plant in Holland known as the evening primrose, which grows to a height of five or six feet and bears a profusion of large yellow flowers so brilliant that they attract immediate attention, even at a great distance, but the chief peculiarity about the plant is the fact that the flowers, which open just before sunset, burst into bloom so suddenly that they give one the impression of some magical agency. A man who has seen this sudden blooming says it is just as if some one had touched the land with a wand and thus covered it all at once with a golden sheet.

The Cassowary.

The cassowary is a natural boxer and the only bird, except perhaps the ostrich, whose method of defense and attack in warfare is the forward kick—straight out, like a man—is calculated to arouse envy in the breast of any save a crack athlete. Another peculiarity of this bird is his ability to perform a sort of war dance over any particular object, a bit of rag, a stick or a stone, that attracts his attention.

Foiled the Bloodhounds.

The futility of hunting fugitives with bloodhounds when the trails of those sought lead across the modern cities' thoroughfares was demonstrated recently in Oak Park, a suburb of Chicago. Many robberies resulted in an addition to the police force of two bloodhounds. Tests were made of the dogs' ability to follow trails, and all proved successful until the person making the trail took to an alley street. The scent was immediately lost, according to the police, and the dogs were unable to pick it up again.—Popular Mechanics.

Duels and Debts.

A duel in Berlin had to be postponed the other day because the creditors of one of the principals objected on the ground that they had a real and very large financial interest in his continued existence on this earth. They would not prohibit the meeting altogether, but when it did take place it had no serious consequences. Not a drop of blood was spilled. The humorous aspect of this intervention by sober, prosaic business men in an "affair of honor" has proved another blow to the dwindling institution of the code.

Disinterested Affection.

"I'm afraid, Edward, you're marrying me only because I've inherited from my uncle 100,000 crowns."

"Why, Blanche, how can you think that of me? Your uncle is nothing to me. I would marry you no matter from whom you inherited the money."—Der Floh.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bowl of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physician are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and any one seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are uneven appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitutions have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure, and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Information free. Phone Park 4220, 167 Dundas street, Toronto.

Our Point of View

Now that the house of J. P. Morgan has withdrawn from the Money Trust many persons are wondering how much coin was left in the trust.

—o—

Mothers are no longer permitted to teach in the New York schools. Which means that more New York fathers will have to work for a living.

—o—

The Toronto Globe says that Toronto faces the new year full of confidence. But we regret to remark that a large number of citizens faced it full of something else.

—o—

Commenting on the rumor that the Hon. Bill Taft would be appointed chief justice a contemporary remarks that he would add weight to the Supreme bench. Quite true. Nearly 300 pounds of it.

—o—

A New York judge rules that it is an act of disorderly conduct to ask a Kentucky gentleman to have a drink and then tender him grape juice. It is worse than that. It ought to be indictable as inciting a riot.

—o—

Twenty-five thousand persons were beheaded in one Chinese province last year, yet a loud howl has been raised because a dozen or so Grit office-holders have been decapitated in Ottawa.

—o—

It is estimated that 674 persons were killed by automobiles at street crossing in Canada and the United States last year. Moral: Cross the street on a tightrope.

—o—

The pictures of Sylvia Pankhurst show that she is a very pretty young woman who ought to get married, settle down and rock the cradle instead of chucking cobblestones at the unhappy Mr. Asquith.

CANADA'S STRIKE LOSSES

During the twelve years 1901-12 Canada witnessed 1,319 strikes, an average of about 110 per annum. The total time lost by these strikes was nearly 9,-[illegible] days, or 29,000 years, the annual average being 750,-[illegible] days. The employees concerned numbered 319,880, and at [illegible] a day the total loss was [illegible], or an average annual loss of about $1,900,000. The Deputy-Minister of Labor, Mr. Ackland, lays stress upon the number of days lost, and argues that while our prosperity has been great during the period mentioned, it would have been considerably greater if it had not been for the strikes. But the report also shows that while our total wage-earning population in 1912 was about 1,300,000 only 40,511 or about 3 per cent., were involved in strikes, while the time loss, if spread over the whole wage-earning population, would amount to less than two days apiece. And as to the cost to the strikers, it is worth noticing this fact, that if 319,880 workers were concerned, and if the strike netted each workman an increase of only 10 cents a day or its equivalent, that would mean an increase in wages to these strikers of over $9,000,000 per year, and if we suppose that the strikes were pretty evenly divided throughout the twelve years, it would mean an increase in wages of $54,000,000 during the twelve year period, i.e., the strikers would be better off by over $30,000,000 than if they had not struck. But men should not need to strike in order to get an increase in wages.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look for Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place—Often Ruins Health Completely

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it passes rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure Catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor, so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmond J. Christine, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE LATE SENATOR.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—No doubt you have noted for his many old friends here to subscribe towards some lasting and tangible token of respect to the late Hon. Geo. A. Cox. It is well known that although Mr. Cox has lived in Toronto for many years he did a lot for Peterborough. Throughout Canada, Mr. Cox's name is almost as much identified with Peterborough as with Toronto. I would suggest placing a suitably inscribed tablet in the new Methodist Church that will soon replace the Charlotte street edifice.

SOME "FUN" WITH THE CARDS

How an Evening in the Parlor May be Sacrificed

Is there anything in the world so pathetic as the spectacle of a young man showing his favorite card trick to a bunch of girls? The slaughter goes like this—man speaks first:

"I used to know a clever trick with cards. Miss Ellen, choose a card from this pack."

"I am to choose? Which one?"

"Any one you like."

"But how can I tell when you show me only the backs and the backs are all exactly alike?"

"Just take one at random."

"Oh, is that fair? Well, here—I've got the queen of diamonds."

"Oh, you mustn't tell me what you have. I'm to tell you that, you know. Put it back and take another."

"Why can't I keep this one? I can remember it better."

"There wouldn't be any trick. You see, you are to take a card that I don't see, and then I'm to find out the one you looked at."

"Oh! Why, I don't believe you can do it! All right; I've another one."

"Look at it and put it back in the pack."

"What part of the pack shall I put it in?"

"Anywhere you wish."

"But I should think you'd want to know, so you could tell which card it is. Well—there!"

"Now I shuffle them, so. Presto! is this the card you chose?"

"Oh, I don't know. I forgot to look and see what one I took. Oh! Here's May. Now there are enough to play bridge. May, you should have been here sooner. Mr. Jones has been showing us the most wonderful card tricks!"—Cleveland Leader.

She Made Rapid Progress.

The feminine wit out even in the case of children. This was amusingly shown not long ago when little Caroline, seven years old, and her brother, six years old, were sent to school on the same day.

For a week they attended regularly, and on Saturday night the proud father called them to him. With one on each knee, he asked what they had learned in school.

"Well," said the boy, "I learned dat do wer' is round. I can count up to five and say my alferbet."

His father beamed and by careful questioning got quite a remarkable amount of knowledge out of his small son.

"I'm proud of you, Freddie," he said, smiling. "Now, Caroline, have you learned lots too?"

"Oh, huh," answered Caroline shyly.

"Well," encouraged her father, "tell us what you have learned."

"I learned the names of all the boys in Freddie's class," she answered, proudly and wept when her father laughed.—Philadelphia Times.

The Firstborn.

Young Father—I am amazed, shocked, my dear, to hear you say you intend to give the baby some paregoric. Don't you know paregoric is opium, and opium stunts the growth, enfeebles the constitution, weakens the brain, destroys the nerves and produces rickets, marasmus, consumption, insanity and death?

Young Mother—Heavens! I never heard a word about that. I won't give the little ducky darling a drop, no indeedy. But something must be done to stop his yelling. You carry him awhile.

Father (after an hour's steady stamping with the squalling infant)—Where in thunder is that paregoric?—New York Weekly.

Glances.

He would have been glad to exchange glances with her.

But a fair exchange were no robbery.

And she chose rather to steal a glance, when she thought he wasn't looking.

"Oh, woman, woman!" he murmured, but dared not reproach her openly.—Puck.

Brutal.

The Wife—I've been to a bridge party, and I have a splitting headache.

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,300,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,994
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred ...	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1908 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in due course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $[illegible]. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephoned at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

DAILY SHORT STORY

A FIRST PROPOSAL

The Way She Was Comforted After It Was Over.

By KEITH GORDON.

It was the softest of spring days, and Mowbray and Miss Farrar strolled through the greenery of the park with the languid abstraction born of the first warm weather and a friendship of several years standing. Though their eyes drank in the beauty of the scene about them—the great stretches of greensward, the trees and bushes that were bursting into the tender green of the season as into a sort of silent song—neither of them was thinking of it.

Miss Farrar, indeed, was living over other days inevitably brought back by the warm breeze and the smell of growing things—other springtimes when life meant only the beautiful possibility of love. And Mowbray was thinking of her and wondering if by any chance it would be worth while to tell her, for in spite of her unquestionable attractiveness he could not help feeling that he would find it hard to look into those calm, clear eyes and talk of love. Yet he was neither cowardly nor inexperienced. He simply had a natural shrinking from being regarded with suppressed amusement by the woman he loved. And in her apparent immunity from such emotions that was what he feared. She would in all probability only laugh her light, frank laugh and say, "Nonsense, Clark; don't be silly!"

He cast a speculative glance toward her as she walked beside him looking off into the distance with the preoccupied air of a woman whose whole mind was given to some engrossing and persistent thought.

"Let us sit for awhile," she proposed as they reached the top of a knoll where, under a solitary tree, a bench invited relaxation. Suiting the action to the word, she seated herself comfortably with her elbows placed defiantly on the back of the bench, an attitude peculiar to her aggressive moods and one which Mowbray had learned to recognize as premonitory of an intention to talk things out to a finish. He wondered what it would be this time, for he had long since dropped into his role of mentor.

He waited patiently with eyes that roved carelessly over the mansions on the far side of Fifth avenue, which in turn sent back a well bred stare, knowing that her feelings would soon reach the point of overflow. At last she broke the silence.

"Do I look to you like a person selected by fate to be distinguished among women—disagreeably distinguished, I mean?" she demanded, turning toward him with a directness which challenged a truthful answer. He regarded her in a manner intended to convey that he was making an expert examination.

"No," he admitted, "I can't say that you do—that is"— He stopped rather vaguely.

"Oh, now don't try to soften the truth," she interrupted quickly. "I'm after facts, and I am not going to lay anything you may say up against you."

"I haven't the least idea what it is about, but I am glad that there is going to be no animosity," Mowbray observed politely. Then he settled himself to listen. It was one of his virtues that he never missed his cue.

Her next words came out rather abruptly.

"I'm not especially plain, do you think?"

Her tone was deprecating, but she turned her face toward him in a manner as impersonal as if she were calling his attention to the landscape. Then she continued impartially:

"That is, I suppose I would be classed as 'fair to middling.'"

He nodded assent, with a gleam of mischief in his eye.

"To tell you the truth"—her tone had dropped into the personal, confidential key—"I'm not at all conceited about my looks, but I've always flattered myself that I am rather interesting."

The statement ended with a rising inflection which made it a question, and it was evident that she was awaiting his decision with some anxiety.

"Rather interesting! I think we may say," he agreed suavely.

"And I'm sure I'm affectionate and fairly good tempered and—and"—

Mowbray encouraged her by a nod.

—"and domestic."

"I shall have to take your word for that."

"Well, I am domestic. I know I am! So I want you to explain to me"—her voice was growing tumultuous—"but first promise on your honor that you'll never tell—how it is that I've reached the age of thirty-three without ever having had a proposal."

Mowbray threw himself back and roared, while her arms came down off the bench and she dropped her face upon her hands and sat looking at him with the puzzled air of a pupil at the feet of a master.

"When you've done laughing," she began with dignity.

"Pardon, dear, a thousand pardons!"

He had never called her that before, and there was something in his voice which bespoke a new hope and confidence, but she was too engrossed in her pursuit of self knowledge to notice.

"I forgot to say that I'm sensible. Men always like that, you know. Anyway, they pretend to."

She flushed in a way that suggested that she had her doubt of their pretending. With a mighty effort her companion swallowed his mirth and prepared to face the situation with her.

"Is it because you haven't wanted any one to ask you?" [illegible] diplomatically.

"No, indeed!"

"And no man has ever told you that he loved you?" he [illegible] in a thoughtful tone [illegible]

"Well now I didn't [illegible] just that, you know!"

There was a faint [illegible] of a blush on Miss Farrar's [illegible], but her glance [illegible] was [illegible]

"Men have told me that they loved me—several of them! But that's not a proposal, you know, any more than it's a purchase when I say that I adore a string of pearls at Tiffany's!"

"A-a-h!"

The ejaculation was full of enlightenment. Mowbray was beginning at last to understand things that had always puzzled him, as his next question showed.

"Would it be impertinent to ask how you have received these declarations?"

"Why, I just listened. You see, it's embarrassing. It makes one feel so terribly conscious."

"What about the man?" Mowbray asked quietly. "Doesn't it occur to you that perhaps he might need a little encouragement—that perhaps he might be a trifle conscious too?"

For a moment there was silence between them. The point of view was utterly new to Miss Farrar, and she was obviously impressed by it.

"I never thought of that," she admitted slowly. "I thought that sort of thing was so [illegible] a man's [illegible] matter." She laughed a bit ruefully.

A squirrel darted swiftly across the grass and, turning its head jauntily to one side, fixed a bright, inquiring eye upon them. Then, with a [illegible] of its tail, it scurried away.

"I have it," said Mowbray. "I have it! Learn from the squirrel! Lightness, airiness, coquettishness! Don't you see what I mean?" And he looked at her tenderly.

But she was not to be diverted. "I am curious," she assured him. "There's always a reason for everything, and there must be a reason for this. There's Alice Nixon. She's not so awfully pretty. I heard her say that she had had nineteen proposals!" Miss Farrar's voice was touched with awe. Then a skeptical thought seized her. "Still—she's from the south," she added, and her tone implied that an allowance should be made for the fact.

Mowbray bit his lip.

"Then there's her sister—just an ordinarily nice girl—follows with fifteen. Marion Pierce owns up to a dozen, and Beth Garrett—dear, homely Beth—acknowledges six! I asked her because I specially wanted to find out. Perhaps you can imagine how queer it makes me feel."

"What do you say upon such occasions?" demanded Mowbray, watching the squirrel that was again eying them from a distance.

There was a palpable pause before Miss Farrar replied. But at last her straightforwardness prevailed.

"Sometimes I shake my head and look rather shocked. Then they think that I disapprove of such conversations—think I'm noble, you know! At other times I laugh and say, 'I have never had one!' in a tone which implies just the reverse."

She finished this confession and looked at Mowbray out of the corner of her eyes in a way that drove the last vestige of fear out of his mind. This naive woman, the person whose dignity and coldness he had stood aloof from in absolute embarrassment for so long! He could have laughed at the absurdity of it. Why had she never shown him her real self before?

"I think I shall propose to you," he remarked deliberately.

For a second she looked surprised, and then her eyes danced.

"Let it be in your best style," she pleaded. "Remember, it's my first, and I fear it may be my last too!"

He leaned toward her and looked straight into her eyes.

"It will be your last undoubtedly!" His voice was low and tense. For a long moment he looked at her—looked in a way that first made her small ears burn and then troubled her clear gaze, which wavered and fell.

"I love you, dear," he said simply, "and I think you know the rest. Tell me that you do."

Her cheeks were hot and her lips trembled. A strong hand reached out and took hers in a masterful way, and she knew that something which she had never even dreamed was true.

"But I asked you!" she moaned when at last she recovered something of her wonted serenity. "I positively asked you!"

"You encouraged me," he corrected, "and that's what they usually do, only your method was brutally direct."

It was when she began to flush again that he added, "I shall always have something to tease you about, dearest."

And the squirrel, which had been watching them in the lingering hope that they might possibly have brought him nuts, like sensible people, gave up in disgust and scurried away.

PHYSICIANS AND FEES.

A Medical View of the Doctor's Charge For His Services.

Those who discuss the physicians' fee frequently miss the essence of it. As a matter of fact, under present social conditions the charge made to the wealthy and well to do is the normal and proper fee; the lowered charges made to those less fortunate are concessions. The tremendous field of the physician's charity is therefore usually underestimated, for it extends to a great majority of his patients.

In olden times, when medicine was nearly all art and but little science, the fee was unknown. Like other artists, the leech received an honorarium, the weight of which depended naturally upon the resources of the patient.

The popular impression that physicians make the rich pay for the poor is incorrect. They extend their services to all alike, and all are supposed to pay as much as they can afford for services rightly priceless and impossible to represent adequately in money values.

Any attempt made to establish standard fees by law is sure to work injustice to the physician. The "standard" fee would have to be much higher than the average fee at present and there would have to be some method of enforcing its sure payment. Only with the standard fixed, as now, by the ability of the wealthy is it possible for the poor to receive the benefits of the highest professional skill without [illegible]—New York [illegible]

YAWNING

Dr. [illegible] of Vienna, Austria, in speaking of diseases of the throat and remedies, said that yawning had its great value. Yawning has recently been recommended independently as a valuable exercise for the respiratory organs.

"According to Dr. Naegli of the University of Luttich," said Dr. [illegible], "yawning brings all the respiratory muscles of the chest and throat into action and is, therefore, the best and most natural means of strengthening them. He advises everybody to yawn as deeply as possible, with arms outstretched, in order to change completely the air in the lungs and stimulate respiration. In many cases he has found the practice to relieve the difficulty in swallowing and disturbance of the sense of hearing that accompany catarrh of the throat. The patient is induced to yawn through suggestion, imitation of a preliminary exercise in deep breathing.

"Each treatment consists of from six to eight yawns, each followed by the operation of swallowing. It should be added, however, that it is quite possible for deep breathing to be overdone, particularly by persons with weak hearts, and it is at least open to question whether the obstacles to free respiration which the yawning cure is alleged to remove are not useful in preventing the entrance of germs and other foreign bodies."—Washington Herald.

Quaint Sewing Implements.

An interesting find is reported to have been made by Professor Mestorf, director of the Museum Schleswig-Altona Tomer at Kiel. In the grave of a Germanic woman dating from the pre-Christian era was found a stone box containing a set of sewing utensils, a pair of scissors of considerable weight, a horn knife with an iron blade, a stiletto and several thorns, which were used as needles. There was also a stone resembling the so called "Gnidelstein," which was still in use as a flatiron as late as the seventeenth century.

PRINCE EDWARD

Prince Edward, who will probably soon be made Prince of Wales, a title that is given by individual investment and not by birth, is the eldest of the six children of the new king and queen of England. He will be sixteen years old on June 23.

Prince Edward will for the present be styled the Duke of Cornwall and Rothesay. He succeeds forthwith to the duchy of Cornwall, with a clear income of $400,000 yearly, which will accumulate until he becomes of age, giving him an independent fortune of $2,000,000.

The fact that he will some day become king of England if the normal course of events is not interrupted does not seem to weigh heavily upon Prince Edward. He is as merry and light hearted a youngster as can be found anywhere. He has a whole menagerie of his own, to which he is devoted, and he is an ardent advocate of kindness to animals.

In [illegible] he entered Osborne college, following the steps of his father along the paths that lead to the navy. He did not "put on any side," according to the young naval cadets at Osborne, and is exceedingly popular with his associates.

Prince Edward is not a brilliant scholar, but he is a hard worker. He is a healthy, wholesome looking lad of the Hanoverian type, with light hair and a somewhat plain, good natured face.—New York Times.

All Must Help.

A wise man who does not assist with his counsels, a rich man with his charity and a poor man with his labor are perfect nuisances in a commonwealth.—Swift.

"OFFO" OF BOND STREET

Mr. George Graves, who is appearing with much success on the variety stage in London in "Koffo of Bond Street," is an enthusiastic sportsman, and recently had a day's shooting in Norfolk. Missing his train back he endeavored to catch it at Cambridge by motor-car, but failed, owing to the bursting of a tyre. In order to appear at the theatre he was compelled to charter a special train from the university town. Mr. Graves's remark, as he alighted from his expensive conveyance at Liverpool street and handed his man a brace of partridges, was very characteristic of him, "Get these birds stuffed, they come too high to eat."

GOWNS AND OWMENS

"Women who wear fine dresses are as superstitious as the girls who make them," said a dressmaker. "If the little accidents that happen in the workroom were not mercifully concealed from the owners of rich gowns they would be sick with apprehension half the time. I had one customer who refused to accept a very expensive dress because a girl who assisted with the fitting dropped a pair of scissors, which fell point down and stuck in the floor. That meant an order for mourning within six months. The customer hoped that by refusing the hoodoo dress she could avert the calamity, but the precaution was useless. In less than three months her father was dead.

"Girls are especially particular in their work on wedding dresses, for if a tiny drop of blood from a pricked finger should fall on the gown the bride would surely die before the end of the year. Then there is green thread. Whether the customer is there to see it or not, no dressmaker will keep green thread near spools of another color. Green thread used for basting means the return of a dress for alterations, and there is enough trouble of that kind in a dressmaking establishment without deliberately bidding for it.

"Women who are themselves superstitious are never surprised or offended at a sewing girl's untidy coiffure. The girls tumble their hair about on purpose when working on a large order, for it is a sacred belief among dressmakers that a hair inadvertently worked into the garment shows that more work is coming soon from the same customer."—New York Sun.

An Interesting Experiment.

The following is an interesting experiment, which consists in placing five fluids on the top of one another in the order of their density without allowing them to mix. It is best to show this experiment after dinner when coffee is being served. You will then have all the liquids necessary at your command. A tall, thin glass is the first requisite. At the bottom of this glass pour in a little cold sweet coffee. Then make a cone of paper, whose point is turned at a right angle, and cut off the point so as to make an opening no larger than a quarter of a dollar. Pour gently in a little cold water, which will escape by the limb of you funnel, impinge on the side of the glass and take its due place on the surface of the coffee. Cease pouring when the height of the water equals that of the coffee.

Through a second cone you pour a layer of strongly colored wine, port if possible, through a third a layer of salad oil and through a fourth alcohol [illegible] the table for boiling your coffee. If carefully done each layer will swim upon the under fluid, and the whole will present a glass of brown, white, red, yellow and white layers of liquid.

KING GEORGE'S REIGN.

Astrologer Daoud Says It Will Be Short and Stormy.

A short and stormy reign for George V. is predicted by S. Daoud, the Washington astrologer. Two years ago, it is said, Daoud foretold the death of King Edward and described the circumstances accurately. Among the things which he foresees in the new king's horoscope is that his reign will last but six and a half years.

"The first five years," Daoud says, "will be among the stormiest in England's history. The last eighteen months, however, will be comparatively fortunate. The coming reign will be terminated by the king's death, which will be a natural one. He will more than once be the object of attempted assassination, but would be murderers will be powerless to harm him.

"There will be trouble in all the British possessions during the second year, especially in India.

"In the third year of his reign there will be a conflict between England and another European power ruled by a kinsman of King George, which will precipitate a great war. England will on her own part wage war with this European country. The war will be short and decisive and will result in England's being obliged to make concessions which will deprive her of much of her power.

"Egypt will give King George decided trouble, but will not be able to free herself from English rule during his reign."—New York World.

McSwiney's Gun.

Near Horn Head, County Donegal, Ireland, there is a hole in the rocks called McSwiney's gun. It is on the seacoast and is said to have connection with a cavern. When the north wind blows and the sea is at half flood the wind and the waves enter the cavern and send up jets of water from the "gun" to a height of more than 100 feet. The jets of water are accompanied by explosions which may be heard for miles.

So Easy to Induce.

"A man should think before he speaks," said the prudent youth.

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "And he should think still harder before he writes his name at the foot of any sort of document."—Washington Star.

THE SPREADING PLAGUE.

It Has Become, in a Measure, a Worldwide Menace.

The terrible bubonic plague, which appeared in Hongkong in 1894, spread from there to Bombay and in the next twelve years carried off more than 6,000,000 victims, has been almost quiescent for the past few years, but in 1910 it appeared in a virulent form in Harbin, has since spread to other cities and is now a worldwide menace.

More alarming than the reappearance of the disease in Manchuria is the discovery of the disease in the eastern coastwise counties of England, where several deaths have occurred.

Until 1906 little was known regarding the mode of propagation of this terrible disease, although the disease itself is as old as history. In 1906 the Indian plague research commission definitely traced the spread of the epidemic to the fleas on the black rats of the country. The rats themselves have the disease. A flea which sucks the blood of the rat takes the germs into its stomach. If the flea bites a human being within a period of three weeks the germs are transferred and the human being contracts the disease.

Until recently it had been supposed that only the black rat is susceptible to the plague and that only the flea known as Pulex cheopis could transfer it. Later discoveries, however, have shown that the common brown or Norway rat is also liable to the disease and that it may be transferred by the ordinary rat flea.

Still another matter of great interest has been disclosed by the cases in England, which are not the bubonic, but the even more deadly and more dangerous pneumonic plague. The bubonic form, in which the lymphatic glands swell and suppurate, is transferable only through some such medium as the rat and the flea. The pneumonic form, on the other hand, is directly infectious.—Youth's Companion.

HE WON THE HOUSE.

Ned Harrigan's Plea at a Critical Point in a Play.

Edward Harrigan once said that the most trying moment in his theatrical career occurred in New Orleans soon after the civil war. He had gone south with his company and, yielding somewhat to popular request, put on "The Blue and the Gray." The play had been a success up north, but down south, with the air still full of the bitterness of the war, it was a dangerous experiment. Tony Hart was to represent the Confederate gray, so he hunted up a uniform of the Louisiana Tigers, and when he came marching on, young, stalwart, handsome, the typical soldier boy in the beloved uniform, the house, men and women, cheered and shouted and cried for all their heroes embodied in this boy. Harrigan, standing in the wings in his northern blue, waiting to go on, had just one thought—"They'll kill me!" Then he stepped out, the embodiment of the enemy, and a cold, dead silence fell upon the house. Not a hand moved for him. The audience was tense with emotion, and there was only an instant to act if the play was to be saved. Harrigan, big, kindly, good looking, came swiftly down to the front and stepped over the footlight gutter, leaning down to them. "For the love of heaven, won't you give the Yankee a hand?" he entreated. At once the house was caught and all the pentup feeling turned the right way. There was a yell of applause.

A Prosaic Interpretation.

Professor Brander Matthews of Columbia in one of his brilliant addresses on the drama said of an unimaginative and prosaic dramatist:

"He it was, I am sure, who in his youth on being asked in examination what Shakespeare meant by the phrase 'sermons in stones' wrote in reply:

"'When passing by a tombstone you may learn the name and the dates of birth and death of the departed one and also from the inscription a valuable moral lesson from his or her life. Walking along a road you may see from the milestones the number of miles to the nearest towns and thus acquire [illegible] information. Heaps of stones by the roadside indicate that repairs are to take place and so indicate a lesson in [illegible].'"—Detroit Free Press.

An Author's Insight.

There is no surer mark of genius than the intuitive insight into characters and social conditions of which the author has no personal experience. "What does Ben know of dukes?" asked bluntly old Isaac Disraeli when he heard the title of his son's latest novel. Trollope wrote [illegible] of bishops and deans when he had never been in a cathedral close in his life. Young Disraeli wrote so well about the great ones of the earth whom he had never seen that the critics busied themselves in finding "keys" to "Vivian Grey" and "The Young Duke."—London Saturday Review.

A Touch of Family Life.

When the country youth proposed to the city girl he received the conventional assurance that she would be his sister. It happened that the youth had sisters at home and knew exactly his privileges. So he kissed her. At this juncture she availed herself of the sisterly right to call out to father that [illegible] was teasing her. Father [illegible] in good, muscular [illegible]. [illegible]—Judge.

Only That.

"I don't know whether I ought to recognize him here in the city or not. Our acquaintance at the seashore was very slight."

"You promised to marry him, didn't you?"

"Yes, but that [illegible]"—[illegible]

The only failure a man ought to fear is failure in cleaving to the purpose he sees to be best.—George Eliot.

How He Be Sneered.

"Dunno. But he can't [illegible] de fence. I never seen a dorg yet that was a vegetarian."

Alaska's Wealth of Coal.

Alaska contains the only first class bituminous and anthracite coal on the Pacific coast. From the Bering river district railroads can be built to the sea, not more than 110 miles long, over perfectly level country, and, according to a published statement by Alfred H. Brooks, head of the government's geological survey work in Alaska, there are 6,000,000,000 tons of it in both fields—more than one and a half times all the coal that has ever been taken out of Pennsylvania. Two-thirds of this has been filed upon by claimants—that is, as much coal as has so far come from the mines of Pennsylvania. Mr. Brooks estimates it to be worth a dollar a ton as it lies; that is, he estimates the coal in the two fields at $6,000,000,000.—McClure's.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,078,000 bushels, making a new capacity of 2,100,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 28 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 32,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 8,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Port William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

RULE OF THE ROAD.

Decided Abroad by the Sword and Here by the Gun.

Several travelers were seated in the hotel lobby discussing the differences in customs of the various countries they had visited. "What struck me as most peculiar abroad," said one, "is the custom of keeping to the left instead of the right, as we do here. Why is the rule reversed?"

"I think I can explain that," said a reserved looking man in the corner. "In medieval and later periods abroad men were in the custom of wearing swords. The sword was worn, as it is now, on the left side. Consequently in drawing their weapon it was done with the right hand, and to get quickly upon guard a man had to have his right side to his opponent; hence the custom of keeping to the left.

"In America when every man carried his life in his hand on account of savage Indians all men carried guns. The easiest and most natural way to carry a gun, either afoot or mounted, is over the left arm with the muzzle pointed outward, and it takes but a very slight movement to throw the butt against the right shoulder. For that reason the early settlers kept to the right of the road so their weapon could instantly be brought to bear on any mark that was necessary."—Philadelphia Times.

A Machine With Fingers.

Among the exhibits at the Seattle exposition was shown a device for feeding and removing sheets to and from a platen job printing press, which may truly be termed an "uncanny machine." It consists of two arms, which possess a reaching and retracting movement resembling that of a human arm and each of which terminates in five long, crooked fingers, the grasping power of which depends upon an automatic suction [illegible] the finger tips. The arms work alternately. One delivers the blank sheets, and the other removes them as they are printed and deposits them on a platform.—Denver News-Times.

Quite Definite.

Some people find it difficult to determine just what constitutes a man's income for the purpose of taxation, but a justice of the peace in a New Jersey village was intent upon there being no mistake in his case.

He made his return to the tax assessor in the words: "For the last two years my income has been a little under $600 a year, but in the future it will be more precarious, as the man from whom I borrowed that money (my father-in-law) is now dead."—Brooklyn Life.

Looked Suspicious.

"Milk will quench a fire caused by an exploding lamp, water only spreading the oil," said the professor.

"Well, I tried to quench a fire by putting milk on it once," said the milkman, "but it didn't put the fire out."

"Well, next time you try it be sure you haven't put any water in the milk."—Yonkers Statesman.

A Specific Order.

A nice old lady recently called at the cutlery department of a large Market street store and told a salesman that she wished to buy a good razor for her husband. "What kind of razor do you wish, madam?" courteously inquired the salesman as he prepared to show her his wares. "I really don't know," replied the woman. "I suppose I'll have to ask your advice. Tell me what kinds you have." The salesman forthwith told his prospective customer that he had razors suited to every beard, whether his beard was downy or strong, and also that the blades were of various widths and weights. On receiving this information the old lady pondered the matter and then said: "Suppose you give me something for a man sixty-two years old, who weighs 210 pounds."—Philadelphia [illegible]

Makes Up Her Loss.

It is estimated that Ontario loses ten thousand of her population every spring through those who go west on the homeseekers' and settlers' excursions. In the fall nearly twice that number leave for the prairies as harvesters. During the entire year there is a steady drain that would bring the total of those who leave for the west at close to 50,000.

But, while Ontario is losing heavily each year of what might be termed "native born," it is a great gainer from another source — the British Isles. This year the number of British immigrants that has already arrived here reaches 53,936, and when the figures for 1913 are complete the total will be well over 60,000.

Is Your Back Full of Aches All Day Long?

THAT STAB-LIKE PAIN IN THE BACK IS SURE INDICATION OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Mrs. Anna Rodrigues writes as follows from her home in Valencia: "For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky. I was sallow and thin, felt rheumatic pains, dizziness and chills. I unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys and was nearly dead when I discovered the true cause of my sufferings. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me. Such blessings of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. They speedily put me right, and their steady use keeps me active, energetic, strong and happy. I strongly urge others to regulate and tone their system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut."

No greater medicine exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills for the cure of indigestion, constipation, flatulence, liver, bladder and kidney trouble. Refuse substitutes. 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

The next question dealt with was the borrowing of money from the Bank of Ottawa to meet the current expenditure of the coming year.

It was decided to borrow $6000.

The financial statement demonstrated that North Monaghan is in a very satisfactory condition.

HEADACHY, COSTIVE, BILIOUS—"CASCARETS"

Sick Headache, Bad Breath, Sour Stomach, mean Liver and Bowels are clogged—Cheer up!

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

VOL. XLI, NO. 16 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, JAN. 20, 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

PREMIER WHITNEY IS BACK IN TORONTO AT GENERAL HOSPITAL

Sir James is Once More Among His Own People and Under the British Flag He Loves so Well--Arrived About Nine O'clock

Toronto, Jan. 19.—Sir James Whitney is back among his own people. Sick nearly to death for weeks in a strange cityi delirious often, always desiring the return to his own Province, where hundreds of thousands day after day scanned repeated bulletins, anxious for hopeful news, he has won another great victory and triumphed, for the time, at least, over the forces that so nearly claimed the leader of the Province just one week ago.

Always a fighter, fighting with that rugged strength and direct force that has made him loved above other men, he has fought back to Toronto. The splendid new General Hospital now claims the man who lay so ill and so near to death at the Hotel Manhattan.

There are few more surprising pages in the history of medicine than the one that has been written in the past 24 hours. It was hoped at first that Sir James could be removed immediately to Toronto. As the days went by, and he grew weaker with continued illness, the hope almost departed. But the weak heart strengthened. The will that dominates the man and demanded again and again that he should return where many faithful friends as well as the privileged few, might at least be closer to him, and where he would be among his own people, in his own Province, and there is great acknowledgement not only of his splendid courage, but of the great service of Dr. Pyne, who watched and fought with him during all the trying days.

Ten days ago, when those watching at his bedside were almost losing hope, Sir James turned to his nurse after a restless night, during which he had hovered between consciousness and delirium. His first question was "Where am I?"

"In New York," the nurse replied.

"Still in New York?" said the Premier. Then he informed the nurse that much as he admired New York and the United States, it was "a much finer and grander thing to be a citizen of the British Empire."

CHIEF OF POLICE LOCKED IN CELL BY A PRISONER

Then the Man, After Re-Capture, Set Fire to Mattress and Nearly Met a Fiery Death

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Jan. 19.—To be locked up himself in the cell in which he was about to incarcerate a prisoner, was the novel experience of Chief of Police Watt, of this town. Thomas Connelly was remanded to the cells on a drunk and disorderly charge, having not sufficiently recovered from the day he was arrested to optional trial. The Chief turned his back to the prisoner for a moment in the corridor of the police cells, when Connelly seized the officer and thrusting him into the cell, locked the door and decamped.

The racket raised by the imprisoned policeman finally brought assistance and Chief Watt was liberated. Connelly was found in a barroom [illegible] the [illegible] for a drink. [illegible] all the way back to the [illegible] was finally locked up.

When left alone, Connelly set fire to the mattress of his cell cot, and his [illegible] only saved him from a fiery death. He was taken to another cell and locked up after another fight.

ALLEGE THEFT OF ELECTRICITY

Toronto, Jan. 19.—A. N. Smith and J. W. [illegible], electrical engineers at 126 Wellington street west who are charged with fraudulently diverting a quantity of electricity from the Belinda Show Company, Limited, Wellington street, was to-day committed for trial. According to the police the accused installed certain wires from the premises of the shoe firm which adjoins their store, through the cellar to their own store, and by this means were able to procure a supply of electricity.

TWO IMPORTANT APPOINTMENTS

It is rumored that Jas. Kendry, ex-M.P., is in the running to succeed to the vacancy created by the death of Senator Cox. Peterborough is entitled to a Senator, and it is to be hoped will get what it is entitled to.

Two local names are also prominently mentioned for a judgeship: Mr. Ruddy, K.C., is the nominee of the member, who is backed by the official recommendation of the Executive Committee of the next Riding Conservative Association, it is said. Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., has strong backing and hopes, it is rumored, to succeed by reason of the fact that there are fewer Catholic applicants than usual in comparison with number of vacancies formerly held by them. Mr. Hayes has not always been favourable to the party's candidate, it is alleged, and will have a hard time overcoming the Executive Committee's strong request to the member, Mr, Burnham, in favor of Mr. Ruddy.

The Times has been told the above in excellent authority and that is all that can be said about it. The matter is now understood to be wholly in the hands of the Minister representing this district as the appointments is not wholly a local one.

MANY PEOPLE PAID RESPECTS TO THE LATE HON. G. A. COX

Hundreds of Citizens Were in Attendance at the Funeral To-day

Toronto, Jan. 19.—The deep regard in which the late Hon. George A. Cox was held by his fellow citizens was testified this morning when hundreds of Toronto's most prominent citizens attended his funeral, notwithstanding that it was "private" and the hour had not been publicly announced. The sad assemblage at the home on Sherbourne street included the leading figures in the financial and industrial arena, and a number of ladies were in the crowd which packed the halls of the mansion, when Chancellor Burwash paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of the dead Senator.

A Perfect Life.

The Chancellor said he was privileged to look back over a life that had been perfectly fulfilled; a life containing many good characteristics, all of which had been fulfilled to the letter.

Mr. Cox, said the Chancellor, was a strong man, who used his most earnest judgment, and was possessed of excellent moral judgment at all times. His qualifications for financial business and handling men were possibly unexcelled. He was a man who could not be swayed and stood by his convictions truthfully and worthily of the character he bore in his religious life.

A Generous Man.

Dr. Burwash told of the generosity of deceased. Once Mr. Cox had turned away an appeal for help. In after years he had mentioned the circumstances with regret. Mr. Cox, said the Chancellor, had a blameless life and the spirit of Christ was abundantly manifested in him.

Rev. W. T. Brown, of Sherbourne street Methodist church, led prayers and Rev. Dr. Wallace, Dean of the faculty of Theology at Victoria University said in the course of his tribute to the Dean that over 40 years ago he was pastor of the first church that Mr. Cox had joined in Peterborough.

Many Reviewed Remains.

Rev. Dr. Carman pronounced the benediction and those present viewed the remains, which were in a handsome casket, surrounded by flowers in the drawing room. There was a steady stream of callers all morning. It was past noon when the hearse with the remains left the residence for Mount Pleasant Cemetery, where they were placed in the family mausoleum.

Pall-Bearers.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. E. W. and H. C. Cox, sons; Mr. A. E. Ames, son-in-law; Mr. G. A. Ames, grandson; Mr. W. G. Morrow and A. H. Cox, nephews.

(Daddy) White, the former Waltham High University of Vermont and Pentham athlete, who eloped with Miss Catherine [illegible] of Roxbury, Jan. 29, 1912, filed a divorce libel yesterday through his attorney, Nathan A. Tufts of Waltham, in the East Cambridge Court. He alleges unfaithfulness on his wife's part in New York last September and also at other times at various places. Mrs. White was a student at Tilton Seminary in New Hampshire, where she met White.

A PECULIAR SITUATION

"Wet" and "Dry" Portions of the Province Compared.

Toronto, Jan. 19.—Analysis of the statistics regarding the local option situation within the province reveals a rather peculiar situation, brought about by the attitude of the large cities and towns. While three fifths of the municipalities of Ontario are under the "dry" law, more people reside in liquor licensed districts.

There are now 562 municipalities "dry" and 333 "wet." The population in the "wet" territory is 1,622,772, while the population in the "dry" population is only 1,000,082. Even when 17 more municipalities are added to the 562 and substracted from the 333, the situation will remain the same only with a slightly reduced population in the "wet" territory.

ASLEEP, ARMED, AS THIEVES CAME

Montreal Detectives, However, Were on the Watch.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 19.—Detective Tierney received information that Emile Lecuyer and Joseph Gustine were planning to break into the store of Napoleon St. Antoine, at 120 Sanguinet street. He asked the storekeeper to let him watch in the store at night and wait for the expected visit.

";Don't you worry," said St. Antoine, "if they break in here I have a good gun and I will shoot to kill."

Tierney took up his position outside the store and the expected visitors arrived. They broke open the front door of the store and made an entrance before the detective pounced upon them. There was a struggle before the men were overcome and handcuffed.

St. Antoine was keeping watch with his faithful gun which would shoot to kill; but he was fast asleep all through the racket. The detectives awoke him after getting their prisoners.

PARLIAMENT HILL SEES CAR OF STATE BEGIN DISCURSION

Ominous Silence Among Corridors To-day Was Duly Noticed--First Debates to Lend Fine Example

Ottawa, Jan. 19.—The ponderous wheels of the Parliamentary machinery will be set in motion at three o'clock this afternoon.

What was regarded to-day by some as an ominous silence hung over the Hill. There was hardly a rumor to be picked up in the corridors. Hon. H. F. McLeod, the new member for York, who was to move the reply to the address, promised to set a good example for the session by starting the debating ball a rolling with a 30 minute speech, and Mr. Lavalle who was to follow him in French, also promised to condense his observations.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was then to be heard and apart from voicing the Opposition's attitude with regard to the Government's conduct of the people's business, was expected to move an amendment embodying the principle that the Government should take some action in regard to the high cost of living. In so far as the Government was concerned the debate on the address, it was said, would not be unnecessarily prolonged. Chief Whip Stanfield said to-day that he believed the speech making would end this week and that next Monday would see the Government all in readiness to take up the sessional programme.

In Reasonable Mood.

On the other hand the Opposition seemed to be in a reasonable state of mind. Chief Whip Pardee, had not arrived in Ottawa to-day and was not expected until next week, a fact which was responsible for the belief that the Liberals were not entering the fight in an exceptionally militant mood.

LORD STRATHCONA HAS LOST INTEREST SINCE DEATH OF WIFE

No Improvement To-day in The Condition of Canada's High Commissioner

London, Jan. 19.—Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal High Commissioner for Canada, was slowly sinking at half-past five this evening, according to the report of his physicians.

London, Jan. 19.—All Britain is watching with deepest sympathy and concern the hour to hour news from Grosvenor Square where Lord Strathcona lies to-day in grave peril. His splendid constitution has so often pulled him through despite the fact that he is in his 94th year that those who know him best find it difficult to believe the end can be approaching. They know how deeply and increasingly he has felt the death last November of his lifelong companion.

Seems to Have Lost Interest.

As an intimate friend said:

"He seems to have lost some of his old infinite zest for life and has not been quite the same this last two months."

The arrival in London Sunday morning by special midnight train from Edinburgh of Mr. Garson, Lord Strathcona's solicitor, reminded the public that Lord Strathcona's interests in this country are concentrated with Mr. Garson's law firm of Edinburgh.

ALLEGED PRIEST WAS SPITEFUL

Family Say Foreigner Was Buried in Their Plot

Welland, Jan. 19.—Argument will begin to-morrow by counsel for both sides of the famous Regan-Father Murray case before Judge Livingstone here. The case has attracted more than country-wide attention. The charge is that malice and wilfulness prompted Rev. Father Murray of Oshawa, Formerly of Fort Erie, to bury a stranger in the family plot of the Regan family in St. Joseph's cemetery, Fort Erie. A mandate compelling Father Murray to remove the body, and an injunction restraining him from further trespass on the property were asked. A claim for damages was also admitted.

By Orders of the Father.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wick, one of the Regan sisters, testified that the cemetery lot, in which the body of Louis Cotz, a foreigner was buried, by order of the priest, was the property of her mother, intended to be the burying place for members of the family. Mrs. Wick described an Ash Wednesday "humiliation" by Father Murray, who had ignored her in service.

Shovel Against Cane.

Later in the same year she was working on the family burying plot in front of the church when Father Murray came up and asked her who had given her permission to plant the hydrangeas in the plot. He struck one down with his cane, commanding her to leave. She refused, and he told her it would be necessary for him to use violence if she didn't at the same time raising his cane. She put up the shovel to protect herself.

Plenty of Vacant Land.

Another sister said the foreigner had been buried beside the tombstone erected by her father when plenty of vacant land existed nearby. A grave-digger admitted he had dug the grave at the instruction of Father Murray. The priest in the witness stand denied any malice or ill will; he did not raise his cane to Mrs. Wick in the cemetery, but had reprimanded her for taking earth to which she was not entitled.

"FIGHTING MODERN EVILS."

Interesting Book Dealing With Evils Which Have Long Been Ignored.

Unquestionably the live topic of the day is that which deals with present social conditions and unquestionably, up to the publication of Fred S. Miller's new book, this subject has been strangely neglected. Mr. Miller's work bears the striking title of "Fighting Modern Evils that Destroy our Homes" and contains matter highly illuminating on the question which has been so long ignored, and yet a question of the most vital importance to society.

The author, whose life in a great metropolis has made him familiar with the snares which surround the feet of men and women, exposes these untoward conditions vigorously and with a trenchant and fearless pen. He points out the evil tendency towards divorce, and he shows in their true colors the deformities of soul mates and of affinities. Just how the fad for mystic cults leads to breaking of family ties and how tempter's wiles destroy the hope and happiness of men and women, young and old, find full exposure in "Fighting Modern Evils."

There are 416 pages of vivid letter press and 32 pages of strong illustrations in the book, which is a work handsomely printed and artistically bound, worthy of a place in any library. Published by the L. W. Walter Co., Chicago, Ill.

THE DIVER'S DRESS.

Evolution of the Devices Used For Submarine Work.

Among pioneer inventors to whom the diving dress in its present perfected form owes so much was William Hannis Taylor. The previous [illegible] attempts were superseded by the Taylor patent of June 20, 1838, in which the essential feature was the valve allowing the emission of consumed air without an influx of water.

Previous to this time there had been the diving chests and the diving bell, of which the latter, introduced by Smeaton in 1779, was the safest and most practical device for submarine exploration. The diving bell has been developed alongside of the diving dress and is still in use.

The general appearance of Taylor's diving armor was like that of a knight's suit of mail, except for a prominent bulge in the body piece. A large pipe coming down from the surface and penetrating the body piece at the bulge supplied the fresh air, while a short pipe entered the body piece on the other side and was provided with a valve which carried off the exhaust. Although diving armor has now reached its perfected state, this valve has never been materially improved upon.—Scientific American.

A Mistaken Sign of Generosity.

"ROBIN ADAIR."

Famous Love Song Had Its Origin In Eighteenth Century.

"Robin Adair" is one of those old-fashioned love songs which have lived for more than a century, and [illegible] in popularity probably [illegible] by reason of its pretty and plaintive melody than the words written by Lady Caroline Keppell. It is old-fashioned, for it must be confessed that a lady of to-day would scarcely lay aside her modesty to the extent that did Lady Keppell, to tell Robin how much she was enamored of him. In spite of what may be the feeling of a young woman in love at present, she would hardly dare to address the object of her affection in such endearing phrases and then publish that confession to the world. She affirms that the "town was dull without him," the "company stupid," and that she can "ne'er forget him"; she prayed for him, tried to make him jealous by confessing that "many had made love to her," and ended by begging him to "come to her heart again."

It was nearly a century and a half ago since there lived in Dublin a young Irishman named Robin Adair. At the time he was studying for the medical profession in that city, and, getting into some sort of trouble, the exact nature of which is not clear, he was compelled to leave the city. He started for London, but on arriving at Holyhead he found that his purse would not pay for the journey by coach, and so he set out on foot. He had not gone far when he came upon an overturned carriage, the owner of which happened to be a well-known lady of fashion.

The lady had received some slight injury, and our medical student proceeded to exercise his art in having her set right. Presently the journey was resumed, Robin having a place in the carriage bound for London, as that happened to be the lady's destination as well as that of Adair. Arriving at the metropolis, Robin found himself in the possession of a check for a hundred guineas and an invitation to visit his fellow-traveler as often as he pleased. With the money placed at his disposal, he completed his medical studies, and soon acquired an excellent practice.

One night Robin was at a dance given by his benefactress, where he met Lady Caroline Keppell, [illegible] daughter of the Earl of Albemarle. On both sides it was a case of love at first sight; but the course was naturally far from smooth. On the part of the lady's family the idea of such a mesalliance was not to be thought of, and every means was taken to disillusionize her. She came home, and a residence at Bath was tried. It was all to no purpose.

What's this dull town to me?
Robin's not near.

At last the union was reluctantly consented to, and in The Grand Magazine of Universal Intelligence those who are interested may to-day read the following chronicle of the event:—

"February [illegible], 17[illegible].

"Robin Adair, Esq., to the Right Hon. the Lady Caroline Keppell."

Shortly after the marriage Adair was made Inspector-General of Military Hospitals, and later on, the King having taken a fancy to him, he was appointed Royal Surgeon-General and Surgeon of Chelsea Hospital. Adair lived until 1790, but Lady Caroline died many years before in giving birth to her third child. A son of the union, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Adair, died in 1855.

The tune to which "Robin Adair" has always been sung is of Irish origin, having been composed by Carroll O'Daly, one of the native harpers, and first associated with a song entitled "Eileen Aroon." Its popularity in England dates from the second half of the eighteenth century, about which time it was much sung by Tenducci, the Italian vocalist.

Brand Whitlock's Story.

"Civil service reform has given us a splendid army of civil servants. It wasn't always so."

The speaker, Mayor Whitlock of Toledo, smiled.

"When I was writing my first short stories," he resumed, "we had civil servants of a different stamp. An elderly resident of my native Urbana sought out, back in those days, his congressman.

"'Congressman,' he said, 'I supported you at the polls, and now I expect you to get my boy a good civil service job.'

"'All right, friend,' the congressman answered. 'What can your boy do?'

"'Do?' snorted the other. 'What can he do? By crimus, man, if he could do anything do you think I'd be bothering you?'"—New York Tribune.

Didn't Have To.

"Every man in my congregation should pray to be kept humble and poor!" thundered the minister.

"I don't need to," piped up a little man in a front pew.

"And why is it unnecessary for you to pray to be kept humble and poor?" shouted the minister.

"I live with my wife's folks."—Houston Post.

A PLEASING PARTY FROCK FOR A YOUNG GIRL

For young girls, fabrics and designs are chosen with the principal aim towards simplicity. Extreme styles, over-rich materials or old colors should have no place in her wardrobe. The simpler designs and the double and triple tunic with few trimmings are favored.

For the afternoon or dance frock, crepe de Chine is youthful and the printed silks or bordered crepes are smart and becoming.

Number [illegible] is a simple party frock for a girl of sixteen; it has a peasant blouse, a one-piece skirt with a cascade slightly draped tunic. A bordered crepe is used in white with a border design in blue. The guimpe is made of shadow lace.

This dress may be copied in size 16 with 4¾ yards of 36-inch material.

In [illegible] we have an extremely smart little tailored frock. It is suitable for hard finish serge, ratine or one of the popular plaid materials. As illustrated old blue ratine was cleverly combined with a softly colored plaid.

There is a one-piece skirt with a double tunic and an effective blouse with a vest, set-in sleeves and turnback pointed revers.

To make this frock in size 16 it requires 4½ yards of 36-inch material.

DIDN'T KNOW BEETHOVEN.

The Ignorance That Exists in Russian Official Circles.

The following amazing story illustrates how deep is the ignorance of Russian officials on some matters and how bitter is their hatred of even the mere mention of the name of the late Count Tolstoy.

It is required by the Russian law that whenever a concert is to be held the police shall be notified of the fact. Recently a club complying with this injunction also forwarded a copy of the program, wherein appeared the item "Kreutzer Sonata." Across this the chief of police wrote, "Tolstoy prohibited." However, the program was proceeded with unaltered, and, hearing this, an infuriated chief of police summoned the directors of the club before the governor. "How dare you disobey orders!" they were asked. "You were told that Tolstoy was prohibited." Light dawned on the concert promoters, and they quickly explained that the "Kreutzer Sonata" which appeared in their program had no reference to Tolstoy's book of that title, but to a musical work composed by Beethoven. "Everybody knows Tolstoy," snapped the governor, "but who knows your Beethoven?" It was only by a telegraphic appeal to M. Stolypin, who assured the governor that there was such a person as Beethoven and that he had written a "Kreutzer Sonata," that the club officials were able to convince the governor that he had jumped to a hasty and wrong conclusion.

The Sophisticated Maiden.

A young man and a maiden were betrothed.

"Dearest one," said the young man, "I love thee. So great is my devotion that if another should but cast loving glances at thee a fearsome thing would happen."

"What might it be?" quoth the maiden.

"Even that I would kill him. Dost believe me?"

"Nay," quoth the maiden.

"Nay? But I protest to thee, I vow, I swear, that if another should make love to thee his life should pay forfeit. By yonder moon I swear. Dost believe me now?"

"Nay," quoth the maiden.

"Now, what meanest thou? Why believest thou not that I would kill the dastard villain?"

"Because," quoth the maiden, "thou wouldst not know aught about it."—Tit-Bits.

Federal Homestead Laws.

The federal homestead laws begin with the act of 1862, now a part of the United States revised statutes. Their policy is to give portions of the public lands to those who will settle, cultivate and make permanent homes upon them. Any person who is the head of a family or who is twenty-one years of age and is a citizen of the United States or who has filed his declaration of intention to become such may acquire a tract of unappropriated public land, not exceeding 160 acres, on condition of settlement, cultivation and continuous occupancy as a home by him for the period of five years and the payment of certain moderate fees. It is expressly declared that no lands acquired under this statute shall in any event become liable to any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor by the government to the settler.—New York American.

Prof. Malveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of tape shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a tumbler of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, hiding itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes the victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The [illegible] physician are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, [illegible] symptoms of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Malveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, [illegible] [illegible] this remedy [illegible] [illegible]

Our Point of View

If we are to believe the Liberal papers, everybody expects a prosperous year except the ex-ministers of their own party.

—o—

The one-gallon limit placed on liquor by the Illinois law is going to be hard on the average Illinoisan. He will have to get another doctor's prescription every time he need two drinks.

—o—

The price of kerosene has advanced one cent a gallon, which shows that our friend, John D. has decided to recover the $35,000 he spent for his Christmas celebration.

—o—

A fashion note in the Globe says: "Spring hats for women will cover one ear." The other ear will be left free to receive the whispered sweet nothings of the moon-struck lover.

—o—

The day after Christmas the editor of the Milwaukee Free Press announced that the mouth of the Mississippi river is four miles higher than its source and if the earth should stop revolving the water would flow the other way. Now that the holiday festivities are over we hope that the editor's head has stopped revolving and that he is able to take a clearer view of the situation.

SOME CURIOUS STATISTICS

Did you ever realize how many more girls lose their lives from accidental burning than boys, and the reasons for the contrast? Somebody has just compiled the statistics of England's experience.

In the first year of life no difference appears. Between the ages of one and four, girl victims slightly preponderate. Thereafter the discrepancy rapidly increases. In the five year period under review 775 of the victims between four and five were girls, and only 366 were boys. In the next five years of childhood, 1427 girls and 380 boys lost their lives in this way.

The inference is simple. Girls' clothing is largely responsible. In the first year, when both sexes are clothed alike, no difference appears. In the next three years this is nearly as true. But as soon as the differentiation in dress becomes marked, as at five years of age, the preponderance of the fatalities among girls becomes startling.

This difference, of course, holds throughout the rest of life. By far the most frequent victims are the maid who attempts to light the fire by pouring kerosene into the stove, and the elderly woman whose clothes catch from lamp or candle. Little can be done to prevent these mishaps among the elders, except by disseminating more widely the common-sense of the situation.

With the children it is otherwise. The fault is not theirs. As long as parents leave their matches where young children can reach them, calamities will occur. The hot kitchen stove is another menace. And here sanity in children's dresses would go a long way towards lessening the tragic roll.

Flimsy dress goods should be tabooed—except, perhaps, for parties. Too early a differentiation in the attire of the sexes is unwise, for hygienic, moral and other reasons. Rompers and sweaters are just as good for the girls as for the boys. When she begins to assert her desire to dress as elders do it is time enough for the change.

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrhozone, Which are Breathed to the Furthest Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs attacks the trouble at the source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailment thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure, medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and, in fact, have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary but will always cure permanently.

Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolute, permanent cure, use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE POWER QUESTION

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The blunder of trying to substitute municipally owned power for government owned power must by now appeal to every citizen of Peterborough. For the city to buy a big power development would look like an attempt to put a nail in Hydro's coffin. Mr. Beck does not object. If the city wants it he will help us on with it, but why do it? It will never pass when the people get on to it. What was our late council and solicitor thinking of when they fell into it? We want to know?

Reader.

OUR WARD NAMES.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw in your paper a few days ago a letter advocating that the various wards of this city be given distinctive names, instead of calling them south, centre, west, north and east wards. I think this is a move in the right direction and one, that if adopted, would give more "door" to Peterborough. I decidedly object to Ashburnham, that voluntarily entered the city, being dubbed "East City." The good old word Ashburnham is more distinctive and would perpetuate the names of those who have gone before and, in their time, helped Peterborough's advance.

THE DOGS NUISANCE

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—About a year ago several communications appeared in our daily papers, in reference to the great number of dogs that were running at large on our streets. For a time the protest of our citizens appeared to have a beneficial effect by the decrease in number of the half cared for animals that infested every corner.

On Friday morning last I saw five large dogs (the smallest were collies) running after a Jackson's Park car. The conductor was on the rear step of the car, trying to drive them off with a broom. After leaving the car they took after a sleigh.

What are our aldermen doing? Who were so busy during the municipal campaign, making all sorts of promises, as to what they were going to do? Have our wives and children no right on our streets, or have they to take second place with dogs?

Don't you think, Mr. Editor, that it is about time our worthy aldermen should take this matter up and banish these canines from our streets? By doing so, they would make our streets safe for women and children, many of whom are afraid to venture past these half-kept brutes.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulveney Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 8 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color, they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also affected, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy for build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits, destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as B'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. B'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. B'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulveney. Write for further information free.

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,300,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,984
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred ...	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1906 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in du course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the good-will from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $8,[illegible],727.32. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephoned at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

The Iron Cross.

The Iron Cross, an order of knighthood, was established by Frederick William III. of Prussia in March, 1813. The order was founded in order to honor patriotic bravery in the war against France. It was revived by Emperor William I. during the Franco-Prussian war and awarded by him to his son for his great victory at Wissembourg on Aug. 4, 1870. Later on the order was bestowed most generously, some 40,000 persons being decorated between 1870 and 1872.

Expert Advice.

The prison turnkey found the two cellmates deeply engrossed. One pored over the market reports of a newspaper and figured on the margin with a pencil. His cellmate sat expectant. "Bill," said the mathematician at last, "you could make $84 a night stealin' hogs in Iowa."—Success Magazine.

To Smokers.

You know that unpleasant, dry, "throaty" feel after a hard smoke? Peps will remove it. Some smokers try gum, but gum has no effect whatever upon the membranes of the throat. Not only so, but that chewing habit is so disagreeable.

When next you have a sore mouth, "smoker's throat," or a heavy breath, try Peps! One little Pep allowed to dissolve on your tongue will liberate pleasing pine essences which will heal the inflamed throat membranes in a medicinal vapour bath. This will give you instant ease, and at the same time will sweeten the breath.

For a bad cold, sore throat, bronchitis, asthma, or any allied trouble, Peps is the latest and best treatment. They are "the breathing treatment." When throat and lungs are ailing, don't you see how useless it is to swallow medicine into your stomach—an entirely different and unconnected organ. Get to the lungs and throat direct, and Peps alone do that.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

Written by
DR. DAVID H. KEEDER.
Chicago, Ill.

NERVES: (Continuation of articles written for Home Health Club by H. Lindlahr, M.D.) "Basing their theories of disease and cure on the facts described in the last article, osteopaths and chiropractic schools jump to the extreme conclusion that the great majority of all diseases are caused by luxations and dislocations of the spinal vertebrae and of other bony structures. The "Nature Cure" philosophy of disease differs essentially from the teachings of these schools. While it recognizes that bone dislocated by falls, over-lifting, and other mechanical injuries, may create all kinds of diseased conditions, it does not overlook the fact that the diseased conditions in the system caused by food, drink and drug poisoning create acute and chronic inflammation in certain organs. This local inflammation is communicated to the nerves which supply the affected parts, and the inflamed nerves in turn irritate and tense the muscles and ligaments attached to the vertebrae of the spinal column and to other bony structures, and pull these out of their normal positions. As a matter of fact, probably 90 per cent. of all spinal lesions have resulted in that way, from chemical causes, and therefore, in order to produce a perfect cure these primary chemical causes of disease must be corrected as well as the mechanical lesions growing out of them. Manipulative treatment is all right as far as it goes, but in order to give good and perfect results it must be combined with proper attention to diet, with eliminative treatment, and with the right mental and moral attitude.

The trouble with most of the therapeutic schools and systems is that they concentrate all their efforts in diagnosis and in treatment on a single one of the different phases of disease, while ignoring and neglecting other phases, just as important. The conscientious physician, in diagnosis and in treatment, takes into consideration the physical, chemical, mechanical, mental, moral and spiritual causes of disease.

We have already found that food and drink poisons, or irritation and impingement of the nerves by luxated and dislocated bones might cause all sorts of nervous symptoms and serious nervous ailments. Only too often, instead of removing these underlying causes, instead of correcting the diet and the bony lesions, the treatment consists in benumbing the aching nerves with paralyzing drugs, or in stimulating the atrophied nerves and sluggish organs by means of poisonous tonics. The brain, over-irritated by food and drink poisons, is temporarily benumbed by bromides, opiates, hypnotics, antikamnia, phenacetin, or other coal-tar poisons. Feverish and inflammatory conditions are suppressed by anti-pyretics and anodynes.

When the nerves are benumbed or paralyzed through systemic poisons or through the pressure of luxated bones they are artificially stimulated by alcohol, strychnine, arsenic, phosphorus, and other powerful poisonous irritants. Such treatment is symptomatic, not curative.

However, not only do the poisonous drugs fail to remove the underlying causes of nervous ailments and other diseases, but they accumulate in the system in certain parts and organs for which they have a special affinity, and then become themselves the cause of continual irritation, and of actual destruction of tissues. There is no doubt whatever, that the majority of the so-called "incurable" diseases are either created or aggravated by the accumulation of poisonous drugs in the system.

Mercury, for instance, is used as medicine in more than one hundred different forms. It is the specific remedy for venereal diseases. In the form of calomel it is commonly used as a liver stimulant and laxative. In salves, ointment and lotions it is applied to suppress skin eruptions. Bichloride of mercury is a powerful antiseptic. The effect of this poison is insidious and destructive. It accumulates in the system, and in time it works its way into the brain and spinal cord, causes degeneration and disintegration of brain and nerve matter, resulting in neurasthenia, locomotor ataxy, paralysis agitans (shaking palsy), paresis and many other chronic ailments.

Quinine is one of the most popular drugs with the medical profession and with the laity. In many sections of this country, especially in those affected by catarrhal diseases or malaria, this drug is taken as freely as an ordinary condiment. People are surprised when told that it is a powerful poison, and that, when taken continuously, even in small doses, it will accumulate in the system and produce a variety of serious chronic ailments, such as indigestion, constipation, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia, loss of physical and mental energy, irritability, neurasthenia, and even insanity. Every "Materia Medica" describes these chronic after-effects of quinine under the heading "Chronic Cinchonism," or "Chronic quinine poisoning." Just as well known to the medical profession are the symptoms of chronic poisoning by iodine, bromides, arsenic, strychnine, cocaine, morphine, and by other narcotics and opiates; and yet these drugs are prescribed and taken as though they were as innocent as candy and bon-bons.

COSMIC DUST

To an enormous extent the bed of the ocean is covered with lava and pumice stone. Still more remarkable is it to find the floor of the ocean covered in many parts with the dust of meteorites. These bodies whirl through space like miniature comets and are for the most part broken into innumerable fragments. We are all familiar with these heavenly visitants as shooting stars, but it has been only lately discovered that this cosmic dust forms layers at the bottom of the deepest seas. Between Honolulu and Tahiti, at a depth of 2,350 fathoms—over two miles and a half—a vast layer of this material exists. Falling upon land, this impalpable dust is indistinguishable; but, accumulating for centuries in the sea depths, it tells a wonderful story of the continuous bombardment of this planet by cometary bodies.

Carnegie's Millions.

Andrew Carnegie has succeeded not only in making himself the second richest man in the world, but also in enriching several of his fellow countrymen, says the London Chronicle. When the "star spangled Scot" retired from business his fortune was estimated at £75,000,000 ($375,000,000), and he had made about £50,000,000 ($250,000,000) for his friends and partners, a large proportion of whom are of Scottish birth. These include George Lauder, his cousin, who now lives in retirement at Pittsburg with at least £4,000,000 ($20,000,000) to soothe his declining years. Thomas Morrison, also a cousin, and Alexander Peacock, another son of Dunfermline, likewise amassed huge fortunes at Pittsburg.

HIGH PRICED EXPERTS.

Specialists Who Charge Enormous Fees For Their Services.

A great many people cannot understand why professional experts charge such enormous prices for their services—why an eminent surgeon, for example, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine, should charge $1,000 or even $10,000 for a single operation or a great law specialist like [illegible] $5,000 for a few hours' work in cross examining a witness.

They do not take into consideration that the surgeon has spent years in learning how to perform quickly and efficiently the difficult operation which saves a life that might have been lost in less skilled hands.

Much of the training of the specialist is to enable him to meet the unusual, the unexpected demand. The surgeon trains for the rare operation, the possible emergency. He knows that there are times when it is happening what the ordinary surgeon did not think it worth while to learn that may save a life. There are surgeons now living who never had a dozen emergency cases in all their experience which called into play the utmost power and skill of which they are capable, but it was these few extremely dangerous operations which gave them their great reputation and enabled them to get enormous fees.

It is not the good surgeon, but the superb operator, the man who knows a little more about anatomy, who has a little steadier nerve, a more acute touch, a little better education, that is sought to perform the delicate operation in the emergency when life hangs by a thread.

MONTE CARLO'S RULER.

His Subjects Vote Not, Neither Do They Pay Taxes.

In Monaco, as in Russia, the ruler is supreme. It is an absolute hereditary monarchy. Even Russia has its duma, but in the dominions of Prince Albert voting is unknown. Yet the Monegasques cannot raise that historic cry of taxation without representation, for if they are not permitted the one they are not burdened with the other.

Albert I., the reigning prince, has devoted his life to scientific research, so the money which the spendthrifts throw away answers some useful purpose after all. He is one of the foremost authorities on marine zoology. His solutions of the gulf stream problem have been recognized by the Institute of France, and the oceanographic museum which he has founded has no equal. He is sixty-one years old, has been twice married and twice divorced—first to the Lady Mary Douglas-Hamilton, whose story is a romantic and a pathetic one, and twenty years later to the dowager Duchess of Richelieu. He tired of them both. He has one child, the Crown Prince Louis.

Prince Albert divides his time between his yacht, with its remarkable scientific equipment, his Paris residence in the Avenue Trocadero and the pink and white palace perched on a rock above the gaming hall which supports him.—Metropolitan Magazine.

THE VEILED PROPHET.

He Was the Most Noted Impostor of the Middle Ages.

The celebrated "Veiled Prophet" of history was a Moslem fanatic whose real name was Hakem Ibn Hashem. He was born about the middle of the eighth century and became the most noted impostor of the middle ages. He pretended that he was an embodiment of the spirit of the "living God" and, being very proficient in jugglery (which the ignorant mistook for the power to work miracles), soon drew an immense number of followers around him. He always wore a gold mask, claiming that he did so to prevent the mortals of this earth, who, he said, could not look upon his face and live.

At last, after thousands had quitted the city and even left the employ of the Caliph al Mohdi to join the Prophet's movement, an army was sent against the "Veiled Prophet," forcing him to flee for safety to the castle of Keh, north of the Oxus. Finally, when ultimate defeat was certain, the prophet killed and burned his whole family and then threw himself into the flames, being entirely consumed, except his hair, which was kept in a museum at Bagdad until the time of the crusades. He promised his faithful followers that he would reappear to them in the future dressed in white and riding a white horse.

An Accomplished Cow.

According to this advertisement in an English country paper, there is a cow in England which is possessed of rare accomplishments:

A Cumulative Persian Story.

Thereupon the huntsman's dog pounces upon the weasel and kills it. The grocer throws a stone at the dog and kills him. The huntsman draws his sword and cuts off the grocer's arm, after which he is cut down by the infuriated mob of the bazaar. The governor of the town, informed of the fact, sends messengers to disperse the murderers. When the crowd [illegible] sisted troops were dispatched to the scene of the conflict, whereupon the townspeople mixed themselves up in the riot, which lasted three days and three nights, with the result that 70,000 men were slain. All this through a drop of honey.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor at Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a total capacity of 2,100,000 bushels. There are in this new building 35 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides slightly pulled, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 32,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 6,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Port William, with a capacity of 3,750,000 bushels.

Not His.

A tall, nervous looking man entered the department in the railroad station where lost articles are kept.

"Anything turned in here today?" he shouted to the man at the desk.

There was no reply.

"I say has anything been turned in here today?" he repeated in a louder tone of voice.

"Yes, sir," calmly replied the man at the desk without raising his eyes.

"Well, why couldn't you say so? I've lost an umbrella."

There was no reply.

"I say I've lost an umbrella."

"I heard you, sir."

"You heard me? Well, why can't you tell me what was turned in?"

"Well, sir, a man was in here this morning who turned his toes in. They wouldn't happen to be yours, sir, would they?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Expensive Furs.

Andeans who wish to assert victorious power in their toilets have a mania for chinchilla furs. The supply grows scarcer, and the demand rapidly rises. The skin of the Andes rat now costs, first hand, 30 francs. It is this little animal that gives us the beautiful Chile fur now so prized for motor wraps, stoles, muffs and garnitures. A further rise is expected, the Bolivian government having forbidden the export of the pelts of the Andes rats. Furriers have fallen back on the skin of the possum, which costs but 5 francs.—Paris Letter to London Truth.

BASEBALL SCIENCE.

The Use of Signals and the Efficacy of Team Work.

Writing on the efficacy of team work and signals in baseball, Hugh S. Fullerton in the American Magazine says:

"Now watch this play closely. See whether or not you can discover what is going on. Pat Moran stoops behind the batter and hides his right hand back of his mitt. Ed Reulbach, pitcher, shakes his head affirmatively. Johnny Evers stoops, puts his hand in the dust, touches it to his knee and rests it upon his hip. Jimmy Sheckard trots twenty feet across left field, angling in toward the diamond. Steinfeldt creeps slowly to his left, Tinker moves toward second base, and Evers takes [illegible] or five steps back and edges toward Chance, who has backed up five feet. Reulbach pitches a fast ball high and on the out corner of the plate. Mike Mitchell hits it. The crowd yells in sudden apprehension. The ball seems a sure hit, going fast toward right field. Evers runs easily over, stops the ball, tosses it to Chance, and Mitchell is out.

"Now, this is what happened: When Moran knelt down he put the index finger of his right hand straight down, then held it horizontally on the top of his mitt. Evers saw that Moran had signaled Reulbach to pitch a fast ball high and outside the plate. He rubbed his hand in the dirt, signaling Tinker, who patted his right hand upon his glove, replying he understood. Then Evers rested his hand upon his hip, signaling Sheckard, the outfield captain, what ball was to be pitched. Sheckard crept toward the spot where Mitchell would hit that kind of a ball ninety-five out of a hundred times. While Reulbach was 'winding up,' swinging his arm to throw the ball, Evers called sharply to Chance (whose good ear is toward him), and Tinker called to Steinfeldt. While Reulbach's arm was swinging every man in the team was moving automatically toward right field, in full motion before Mitchell hit the ball. The gaps at first base, between first base and second, over second base and between third and short were closed temporarily, while the gap between Steinfeldt and the third base line was opened up twenty-two feet. The ball if hit on the ground had no place to go except into some infielder's hands, while Sheckard and Mitchell [illegible] the ball [illegible]. Every man on the team knew if Reulbach pitched high, fast and outside Mitchell would hit toward right field. The only chance Mitchell had to hit safe was to drive the ball over the heads of the outfielders or hit it on a line over seven feet and less than fifteen feet above the ground. If Reulbach had been ordered to pitch low and over the plate or low and inside or a slow ball the team would have shifted equally in the opposite way."

COMPRESSED ICE.

Sinks in Water and Crumbles Into Powder When Warmed.

All know that ordinary ice will float. This relative lightness of ice with respect to water is due to expansion of the water at the moment of freezing. If water is frozen under immense pressure it seems that this expansion is prevented and ice heavier than water is produced.

G. Tammann has prepared this modification, which he calls Ice III., as follows: He compressed water to 2,000 kilogrammes (4,400 pounds) and cooled it in solid carbon dioxide snow and finally in liquid air. Under these conditions a colorless, transparent ice is formed. It is much denser than ordinary ice and heavier than water; consequently it sinks when placed in water. Ice III. is very unstable, and on slight warming it swells out and breaks up into a dense white powder. The volume of the resulting powder is apparently four to eight times that of the original ice. This powder formed by the breaking up of the dense form is nothing more than ordinary ice in the form of fine crystals, which, of course, on further warming melt at zero degrees centigrade.

Experiments on Ice III. show that it is impossible to obtain it by separation from water at atmospheric pressure and then suddenly cooling. There would seem to be a possibility of this [illegible] form of solid water being formed in nature.—New York Tribune.

A Famous War Fleet.

The battleships of the Atlantic fleet which sailed out of Hampton Roads in December, 1907, on the famous cruise around the world [illegible]—the Alabama, Illinois, Maine, Missouri, Ohio, [illegible], Kentucky, [illegible] and New Jersey—have passed from the first fighting line. Today every one of them is listed "in reserve," and their places in the fleet have been taken by [illegible] more powerful ships.—Argonaut.

A Friendly Tip.

[illegible]—Would you—er—advise me to—er—marry a beautiful girl or a sensible girl? [illegible]—I'm afraid you'll never be able to marry either, old man. [illegible]—Why not? [illegible]—Well, a beautiful girl could do better and a sensible girl would know better.—Exchange.

A SNAKE STORY.

The Wonderful Old Time Serpent That Talked Like a Man.

In John Ashton's "Curious Creatures of Zoology" there is a quotation from "a little Latine booke printed at Vienna in the yeare 1551" which tells a most wonderful story. Ashton quotes as follows: "There was found in a barne or rycke of corn almost as many snakes, adders and other serpents as there was sheaves, so as no one sheaf could be removed but there presently appeared a heape of ougly and fowle serpents. The countrie men determyned to set fire upon the barne and so attempted to do, but in vaine, for the strawe would take no fire, although they laboured with all their witte and policye to burn them up.

"At last there appeared unto them at the top of the heape a huge great serpent, which lifted up his head and spake with a man's voyce to the countrie men, saying, 'Cease to prosecute your device, for you shall not be able to accomplish our burning, for we were not bredde by nature, neither come we here of our owne accord, but were sent by God to take vengeance on the sinnes of men.'"

Ashton leaves us in the dark as to what the "countrie" men did, but it is natural to suppose that they surrendered at once.

Slashed the Tapestry.

The apparently motiveless criminal who delights in damaging ancient works of art is a psychological mystery. The last exploit of this modern form of vandalism was performed recently at the Cluny museum in Paris. The object of attack was an ancient tapestry, dating from the end of the sixteenth century and depicting the battle of Jarnac, when the Duke of Anjou defeated the Huguenots under Condé and Coligny, March 13, 1569. The piece, much deteriorated by time, was to be found in the old chamber of the Order of the Holy Spirit, near the case showing the mantles and insignia of this body. The miscreant, who wished to place his mark on the tapestry, did so by making a downward cut about six inches in length with a sharp knife. He accomplished his design undetected, and the damage was only discovered during the final tour of inspection, after the museum had been closed for the day.—Dundee Advertiser.

Buddhists In Europe.

The Buddhist priest Bikkhu Nyanatiloka, the author of several works and translations in German of the works of Buddha, has founded the first Buddhist colony in Europe at a mountain resort, Novaggio, overlooking Lugano. He has taken a house in the middle of the forest, commanding a view of Lake Maggiore, and will shortly be joined by a Buddhist priest named Bikkhu Silacara from Rangoon and three European converts, an Englishman, a Dutchman and a German. The Swiss authorities on learning that the Buddhists make no active propaganda have placed no obstacles in the way.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Britons Drinking Less.

"The drink bill of 1912," compiled by Mr. [illegible], secretary of the United Kingdom Alliance, appears in a recent number of the London Times. He [illegible] that [illegible] was spent on intoxicants in 1912 as compared with [illegible] in 1911. He [illegible] the increased price of spirits, due to increased taxation, as the chief factor in causing the [illegible] reduction of over 7,000,000 gallons in the quantity of spirits consumed. About two-thirds of the total national drink bill, or about [illegible], is spent by the working classes.

Great Salt Lake.

Five or six years ago it was assumed that Great Salt Lake was drying up and would not last beyond one generation more. Today it is higher than it has been within the memory of white men. There is no exceptional precipitation to account for its mysterious rise, but it is apparently justifying the Indian tradition that it has a sort of tidal rise and fall, extending over a period of thirty or forty years. The causes of this fluctuation are quite unknown.—Youth's Companion.

WISDOM'S COMPROMISE.

Wear Good Clothes and Laugh at the World's Folly.

"O sage," said the young man, "I am surprised, almost grieved, to find that one who has such a reputation for wisdom as you should pay so much attention to his clothes. You are as immaculate and as nobby as a young lover."

"And why not?" asked the elder man.

"Why not, indeed?" rejoined the young man. "I am afraid I cannot explain. Many people have told me it is foolish to pay so much attention to clothes. That's all I know."

"It is a common error," spoke the sage, "but it is nevertheless an error and one which once possessed me. When I was young as you are I was attracted by the external things only, and of these external things clothes were by far the most important. When I was a little older I underwent a reaction. I had a revelation of feeling. Somehow I gained the idea that clothes were an absurdity in toto. I thought that the inner spiritual man was everything. According as my thoughts became introspective I neglected my external appearance and went about unkempt and slovenly."

"The two extremes," suggested the young man discerningly.

"Yes, the two extremes, but with neither alone was I happy. Without clothes I found I could not go among my fellows in comfort, and thus the social side of my [illegible] became atrophied. Without knowledge and an inward appreciation of the important fundamentals of life I could not be happy in my own company."

"Therefore," observed the young man, "you struck a happy medium by compromising on both."

"Yes. Now I pay strict attention to my external appearance, while inwardly I laugh at the folly of the world which makes it necessary."—Life.

A Matter of Choice.

An old darky servant devoted to General Jackson waited on him to the general's last hours. Right after the general's death a preacher asked Rastus if he thought Jackson would go to heaven.

"I dunno', boss, ef 'e'll go fuh sure, but he can ef he wants to," replied the darky.—Independent.

Dizzy Headaches Cured In One Night

If Troubled With Head-Fullness, Ringing Noises, Specks Before the Eyes, the Stomach is at Fault.

Quick Relief and Certain Cure Came From Dr. Hamilton's Pills

"I had terrible pains in my head. My appetite faded away, and when I did eat anything it disagreed and made me very sick for hours after each meal. The pains in my stomach and the dizzy headaches I had to endure almost set me wild. Sometimes attacks came on so severely that I had to go to bed. I would feel so worn, depressed and utterly miserable that for hours I wouldn't speak to my family. My system was poisoned with wastes and nothing helped me till I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Without this grand system-cleaning remedy I would still be sick, but each day brought me better health and spirits. I was cured and made strong, ruddy, and healthy, and will always use and recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

"MRS. B. C. CURRAN, Westport P.O."

Thousands who are in an ailing, low state of health need nothing else but Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

He Got It All.

Yesterday morning as the manager of a George street clothing house was walking with a friend east on Hunter street, about 30 pounds of snow fell from the old temperance house, now being reconstructed by J. R. Bell. The man of suits and shirts who walked on the outside got the whole downfall whilst his friend escaped entirely. The drygoods man remarked "I hate to play hog. I might willingly have shared that dose with you."

He Could Have Done It?

Yesterday afternoon a Times reporter accidentally overheard a conversation on Hunter street between a former merchant of George street and a merchant now doing business on that thoroughfare. The former, who has retired many years ago with an adequate competence remarked to his friend "Its all nonsense saying a man cannot get work in Peterborough. Why in 50 years I never knew a day but what I "could" have gone out and got a day's work.

Douro Men Not Robbed.

Last night, two men from Douro, who ought to have known better, got full. They went to a local hotel and asked for drinks. The proprietor, who happed to be in the bar, realizing their condition refused them. They then proceeded to "make rough house" out of the hotel. The proprietor at once telephoned 190, the police station. When the officer arrived the men had left and were afterwards picked up on Hunter street. One of them claimed to have been robbed of a watch and chain. The jewelry, however, was later found, just where the alleged loser stepped out of his sleigh.

Broke Into Jail at Last.

At yesterday's police court, ex-Mayor Harry Rush occupied the rostrum in place of Magistrate Dumble, who was in Toronto attending the funeral of late Senator Cox. Benjamin Hobson of Madoc, was charged with having been drunk. Ben pleaded guilty and at last broke into jail for 30 days in default of a $5 fine. It will be remembered that on Friday night, Ben, while "pickled," wandered up Brock street hill and took the jail for an hotel. He tried to batter down the door to get in. Ben is now in.

MOTHER! IS CHILD'S STOMACH SOUR, SICK

If tongue is coated or if cross, feverish, constipated give "California Syrup of Figs."

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Notable Offer of the $1.00 D. & A. Corset for 79c

AMONGST WOMEN, one dollar is a popular price to pay for a corset. And scores of women there are, who have proved that the D. & A. model is one of the best corsets on the market for the price. To begin with, it is made of a splendid quality French coutil, and is procurable in low or medium bust styles; which are fitted with the long skirt. And the trimming being of Nottingham Lace, there is a dainty finish to the Corset, each model possessing a hook below the clasp to further insure a perfect fit over the hips. The boning is well placed, and on the whole this D. & A. Corset must be very satisfactory or so many would not be sold. But just here we would lay particular stress upon the very low price that prevails in the Annex. This is the first time they have been sold in this section, and their first appearance will be characterized by the lowest figures ever placed upon this Corset. GOVERNMENT STILL DETERMINED TO GIVE AID TO BRITISH NAVY; PREMIER WARNS THE SENATE

Parliament Hill Sees Heavy Guns in Action as Session Opens; Both Mr. Borden and Sir Wilfrid Make Lengthy Addresses

NEW MEMBER FOR YORK WHO BEGAN DEBATE SHOWS FIGHTING QUALITIES

Opposition Leader Ignores Mention of "Free Food" and as Liberal Policy it is Dead; His Criticism Draw Sharp Reply From Premier

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—The session got off to an auspicious start yesterday. There were two exceptionally able speeches in moving and seconding the address in reply to the speech from the Throne. Premier Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier later outlined the general stand of the two parties, and the back was broken in the first twenty-four hours of what is generally a long drawn-out and tedious debate.

From a Conservative standpoint no session could have opened more favorably. There was an astonishingly meagre attendance of Liberal members. By actual count, when Sir Wilfrid was at the height of his oratory, there were only thirty-four of his followers behind him.

The Conservative benches on the contrary, were crowded; they were in an aggressive mood. They cheered Premier Borden when he arose first for several minutes; they pounded their desks at every opportunity, particularly when the navy was mentioned, and they gave him an ovation when he sat down. Perhaps it was the inspiration of numbers, but Mr. Borden was in exceptionally good form and his followers did not complain, as they do sometimes, of lack of aggressiveness or lack of fight.

Firm For Three Ships.

Premier Borden reiterated the stand on the navy question which he took at the end of last session. "The Government," he declared, "remains firm in its determination that the three ships shall be provided and it is the firm intention at a later date, when circumstances are such that it can be passed, to bring down a bill to that end." The Premier also made clear, in language that could not be misunderstood, that the permanent policy would be submitted to the people at the next election. He has made this pledge, and this pledge would be kept.

Senate Soon to Be Issue.

A ringing challenge to the Liberals on the attitude of the Senate which carried with it a threat that the Senate's position might be made an issue at the next election, brought forth a volley of cheers from the Government side. It was evidently a popular challenge.

"If the Senate," said Mr. Borden, "and its friends are disposed to force upon us the question of the constitution of the Senate and the nature of appointments thereto, we are ready to accept that issue."

If Mr. Borden was in good form, Sir Wilfrid fell far short of his usual Parliamentary deliverances. He was listless, his followers were more so; it was a speech punctuated by little applause, there was no opportunity for his followers to work up enthusiasm, even if they had had the energy.

Unfortunate in Criticisms.

Sir Wilfrid was unfortunate in some of his criticisms. He started by attacking the late opening of Parliament and vigorously defended the fall session. Something which all his following, and particularly his Western representation, strongly opposed. He followed with a back-handed compliment to Hon. Arthur Meighen, the new Solicitor-General, and by long odds one of the most popular men of the House, whom he described as a sophist and dialectician. Finally, he attacked Hon. Geo. E. Foster for his absence from the House. Mr. Foster has already sailed from England for Canada, while his absence has been to attend the Imperial Trade Commission, one of the most important bodies which has ever visited the various overseas Dominions.

Shunned Words "Free Food."

The surprising part of Sir Wilfrid's speech was his tariff references, the words "free food" were actually shunned, not used even once in the course of an hour and a half speech. Free wheat was suggested, but free food as a policy was dropped. His remarks were so guarded as to give strength to the rumors that there is strong opposition to the policy from the agriculturists in his own ranks. His speech as well as his amendment, was delightfully vague. It read as follows:

"We regret to represent to your Royal Highness, that in the gracious speech with which you have met Parliament, while it is admitted that business is in a depressed condition, yet there is no indication on the part of your advisers of determination to take any steps towards relieving such situation."

Retire in Favorite Way.

Premier Borden was not slow to search out the weak points of this, and sarcastically remarked that it was framed so as to permit the Opposition leader to retire within the favorite lines of Torres Vedras.

Toronto, Jan. 20.—Charged with non-support, assault and abuse of his wife, Andrew J. Mercer was summoned to the police court to-day. Mrs. Mercer asked for an order of protection, as she wanted to live alone and support herself.

Mercer objected to the separation as he said the property and furniture belonged to him.

"It's a great pity you people cannot get along together after being married 41 years, and have 10 children," remarked Col. Denison. "Why can't you arrange to live peaceably?"

"I cannot reason with him," said Mrs. Mercer. "He has gone crazy over a waitress."

"The girl has nothing to do with this case, Your Worship, it is liquor," declared Mercer. The case was adjourned for a week when the waitress will appear.

INTERESTING DEBATE ON HIGH COST LIVING

A very interesting and instructive debate took place in the lecture room of St. Andrew's church last night, under the auspices of the Utopia Bible Class. The subject being "Whether the High Cost of Living" is or is not retarding the health and growth of Canada.

The chair was taken at 8.15 p.m. by Ald. J. C. Anderson, owing to the absence of Mayor Buller. The following gentlemen were the speakers for the affirmative and negative:

(a)—N. C. Mills, leader; A. E. Jardine, C. P. Fee, J. L. Allen. (N)—C. P. Joy, leader; W. S. Campbell, T. Bills, F. D. Weir.

Rev. J. Rollins opened the meeting with a short prayer. The chairman then announced that a lecture would be given on Jan. 30, by Dr. Barnes, F.R.S., on "How Ice Bergs are Detected at Sea." The speeches on both sides were well aplauded by the audience, and at the conclusion the judges retired to consider their verdict. During which time a solo was given by J. M. Greene, ex-Ald. G. Gillespie, the foreman of the judges, then rendered his verdict in which he said it was his unpleasant duty to say that the affirmative were the winners. The negative put a good strong argument, but the affirmative were a little stronger. Mr. C. P. Joy then pinned a medal on Mr. N. C. Mill's breast, and a very instructive evening was brought to a close with "God Save the King."

PREMIER IS MUCH WEAKER BUT TOOK SOME NOURISHMENT

Bulletins as to Sir James' Condition Were not Reassuring Patient Continues Slightly Restless

Toronto, Jan. 20.—Sir James Whitney had not derived the benefit from his home-coming that was hoped for, not only by his family and friends, but by all classes in Ontario. This morning's bulletins were far from reassuring. Sir James passed a restless night, and at 10.45 o'clock the following bulletin was issued—"Much weaker; condition unsatisfactory."

At 11.30 o'clock, Dr. McPhedran, who is in attendance upon the Premier, saw the patient and stayed with him for a quarter of an hour. When the doctor left the sick chamber he said, "Sir James is a little better. He has taken a good deal of nourishment, but he is slightly restless."

Asked as to the probable outcome, Dr. McPhedran quoted the old proverb: "While there's life there's hope."

He added that Sir James slept well until 3 o'clock; then he was restless until 9 o'clock. The Premier he said was very weak.

BUTCHERS BLAME TORONTO FOR THE BIG BEEF PRICES

St. Catharines Reports a 3-cent Increase, and May Go On a Beef Strike in Retaliation.

St. Catharines, Jan. 20.—To-day according to announcement by the butchers of the city, the price of beef went up to 25 cents a pound, a raise of three cents a pound. The butchers gave as an excuse the fact the wholesale price of beef was raised in Toronto. Yet on the market here Saturday beef in quarters sold at 11c to 13c pound, and the butchers of the city get a good deal of their supply from that source. In view of this it is likely there will be a beef strike in St. Catharines. It is the second raise in prices since summer and the claim is made that the butchers here have a combine. At any rate the present raise came following a meeting held last week.

MR. JOSEPH JONES UNDERGOES OPERATION

The many friends of Mr. Joseph Jones, 149 London street, will be sorry to learn of his misfortune. Early last fall he was paring the nails on one of his toes, when on account of imperfect sight, he cut into the quick. Nothing was thought of the accident for some days when inflammation set in and the part began to swell. Dr. Neal was summoned, and, notwithstanding his treatment and care, blood poisoning supervened, and a short time ago the toe was amputated. It was thought this operation would be sufficient to allay the progress of the blood poisoning. This did not however, prove correct. It was found necessary to have Mr. Jones removed to Nicholls Hospital, where the leg was amputated yesterday morning below the knee by Drs. Greer and Neal.

Last night the patient was doing as well as could be expected. The Times extends its sincere sympathy to Mrs. Jones and family, and join his many friends in wishing for a speedy convalescence.

SIX MEN KILLED AND THREE SERIOUSLY HURT

Premature Explosion Caught All but Two of Entire Gang on C.N.R., Near Arnprior.

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—Six men were killed and three others seriously injured in a dynamite explosion late Saturday on the C.N.R. construction work at Ross Point, Quebec, opposite Arnprior. The names of the dead so far as known are: Joseph Elliott, aged 22, single, Bristol Mines; Stephen J. Trudeau, aged 32, wife and three children, Bristol Mines; Duncan Herron, aged 55, married, no children, Bristol Mines. The others are foreigners.

The accident occurred on the Pembroke-Ottawa line of the C.N.R. The men were engaged by Brennan and Grant, contractors, in excavating rock for a bridge pier, and had exploded one blast successfully. Another had been put in, but a premature explosion caught the gang before they had time to reach safety.

There were 10 men in the gang, and the two who escaped death are Polish laborers unable to give anything but the barest details.

SPORT EXTRA

PETERBOROUGH JUNIORS 8, VS. PORT HOPE 4

The Port Hope Juniors visited our city last evening and were defeated at Brock street rink by a score of 8—4 by the local juniors. Half-time score 4—2.

The game was fast and some lightning play was indulged in by both teams. The locals show a lot more class than in their first game with the Port Hope seven, and by the form displayed last night will take a lot of beating. They seemed to have more confidence in themselves on home ice and before home crowds, and the fans were surprised at the brand of hockey dished up by the juniors of our city. With Dwyer in goal, they were a different proposition against the Hopers, and the game was seldom in doubt.

The O.H.A. delegated one "Lorrie" of Toronto, to look after the game. Mr. Lorrie is a new face on Peterborough ice, and he made a favorable impression, handling the game to the satisfaction of all.

There is little to pick in the seven representing the Petes. Every one of them played a splendid game, and will be heard from before the season ends. Barrie was a little the best of the forwards, with Richardson also showing grand form. The latter's lone rush for the last counter was a feature of the game.

The line-up:

Rowden Sandycock Darch
Forsythe
Low Hill Bennett
Knapman Rose Barrie
Dwyer
Halpin Long Richardson

THIS REMOVES HAIRS ALMOST LIKE MAGIC (Helps to Beauty)
Much favorable comment is being made upon the new formula for removing disfiguring hairs. One serious objection arises and that is, any woman can employ this treatment in her own home and thus deprive the beauty specialist of her fee. For the benefit of others, the formula is here repeated: Mix some delatone with water; apply to hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and with it comes every hair. The skin should be washed to free it from the remaining delatone.

PEOPLE GENEROUS WITH SMALL JOBS FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

Men From the Civic Bureau Appear to be Giving Satisfaction

WORK IN HASTINGS COUNTY.

To the Editor of The News:

I see by the papers that there are many men idle in Toronto, who cannot get work. There is plenty of employment in this district for men at from $30 to $35 per month and board, in the woods or in the marble quarries. If you could advise them to come send them to Hastings County, on C.P.R. They can get work at nearly all the stations north of Gilmour, to Bancroft. I want four or five good men myself in the woods.

JOHN MUNRO.

Turriff, Jan. 19, 1914.

2,856 Have Registered.

Toronto, Jan. 20.—Up to noon today the total registration at the Civic Labor Employment Bureau was 2,856. A large percentage of these men have been given work of a temporary nature. The most needy cases where others are dependent on the man get first attention. The citizens have responded very generously to the invitation to telephone or write if they want help. As a consequence a lot of cleaning up of yards and cellars and general chores that would have waited until the winter was over it being done now.

Giving Satisfaction.

Mr. Dickie stated to-day that the men being sent out are giving generally good satisfaction. He has letters from several citizens stating that the men he sent them were all right. Some men have already had two and even three different jobs at houses where a man was wanted for the day. Each job they are sent to is endorsed on the application card and provides a record for the man.

More Foreigners.

Another long line of applicants was on Colborne street again to-day and it was noticeable that there were more than the usual number of foreigners amongst the waiters. It is said that construction gangs are coming in from the north and that the first thing they do is to enquire for the Employment Bureau. Preference is, however, being given to our own people and all of the latter who applied this morning got something to do. The workers at the Bureau are spending long hours in classifying the applications which is no simple matter.

EMPLOYER INTERESTS OBJECTS TO THE COMPENSATION BILL

Retailers and Manufacturers Make Representations to The Cabinet

Toronto, Jan. 20.—Hon. I. B. Lucas, Hon. W. J. Hanna, Hon. J. L. Hendrie, Hon. James Duff, Hon. W. H. Hearst faced a large attendance, when they took their seats in the reception hall to-day to hear objections to the proposed Workmen's Compensation Act, based on Sir William Meredith's report.

Representatives of the Retail Merchants' Association, Manufacturers' Association, the Trades and Labor organizations, men of the Insurance Companies were on hand in large numbers and that there is a strong element against the bill was plainly evident.

Retailers Object.

Secretary Trowern, of the Retail Merchants' Association, was first called.

"We want to have nothing whatever to do with it," was the way Mr. Trowern presented the objections of the Association. He went on to take objection to the wording of the draft bill and it took Mr. Lucas fifteen minutes to show Mr. Trowern that the retail merchants were not included and would not be. Mr. Trowern considered that the Board was given power to bring other classes within the scope of the proposed legislation.

LORD STRATHCONA HERO TO HIS OWN FAMILY

London, Jan. 20.—The following bulletin was issued at six o'clock tonight: Lord Strathcona has passed a quiet day with a good deal of sleep and no pain. There is, however, no improvement in his condition.

London, Jan. 20.—One who has been much with Lord Strathcona in recent years gives me the following:

"It is quite touching to see the loving devotion to his grandchildren, who have come to regard him to his infinite pleasure, more as a playmate than as grandfather. This especially noteworthy in recent years, when he has had more leisure to devote to the family circle."

Bound Up in Hudson's Bay Co.

The Hudson's Bay Company gave Lord Strathcona his start in life. So great was his affection for it that its affairs were the subject of the last business he did outside his immediate family concerns. Only last week he was expressing the supreme satisfaction and pleasure he felt in the splendid realization of his early, intense faith in the greatness of Canada. He said nothing brought this home more vividly than his memorable journey from the Atlantic to the Pacific in [illegible].

Feel Out of Sorts?
It's a good idea to look for the cause!

One common, but often unsuspected cause is tea and coffee drinking. Yet some persons seem able to get along with tea or coffee—at least for a time. But when headachy, bilious days come; breakfast or some other meal doesn't taste good; and the day's work goes wrong. (Ever feel that way?)—then it's time to find out for sure if tea and coffee are causing the trouble in your case.

There's a subtle, poisonous drug, "caffeine" in tea and coffee that interferes with the normal functions of body, brain and nerves, and has a lot to do with one's comfort and progress.

Suppose for a test you try the simple expedient of quitting tea and coffee and using well-made —a pure food drink made of choice wheat. It has a delightful, snappy flavour, and is absolutely free from caffeine or any other drug.

POSTUM

After ten days or two weeks you will be able to decide whether to go back to tea and coffee troubles, or stick to Postum and peace and comfort.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water and adding cream and sugar to taste.

Grocers everywhere sell both kinds.

Sure of Water.

Sir Joseph Prestwich had bought in 1864 a small estate near Sevenoaks, on which he built a residence, but it was high up on a dry and treeless chalk down. Where was water to be found? So confident was Prestwich in respect of water supply that he at once engaged an old well digger to sink a well 1[illegible] feet deep. The boring proceeded, but when a depth of 1[illegible] feet was reached the two workmen went to the city and sought an interview with their employer, whom they found at his desk. They explained that there was no sign of water and that in their opinion it was useless to bore to a greater depth. "Go on," was the quiet rejoinder. "You will come upon water tomorrow. You are within two feet of it." Next day it proved exactly as Prestwich had foretold, and ever after, among many of the denizens of the valley, he had the reputation, much to his amusement, of not being quite "canny."—"Life and Letters of Sir Joseph Prestwich."

Origin of the Safety-Pin.

An historian of invention tells us that to the wails of a long-suffering infant we owe the boon of the safety-pin. Here is the story: A little boy, named Harrison, an English blacksmith's son, had to look after his baby brother. The baby often yelled, and its tears were usually traced to pin punctures. The boy [illegible] [illegible] thing to bend the pins [illegible] [illegible] that they could be used with safety to his baby's flesh. In this he failed; but his father, the blacksmith, perceiving the utility of the idea that the lad had been at work on, took it up on his own account and eventually turned out the safety-pin that is in use today all over the world. Whether the safety-pin would have still remained in oblivion but for the [illegible] of one little English baby no one knows, of course.

Speaking at [illegible] recently, Mr. Malan, South Africa's Minister of Education, said that the smooth working of the Union required from everyone restraint and toleration. Otherwise they would be laying up for themselves [illegible] but a hell. The two great principles which must be observed were—firstly, the equality of the two predominant races, and the equality of their languages, and, secondly, the [illegible] of the Union as an integral part of the Empire, [illegible] [illegible]

THE SPIRAL DIP.

Brookins Says It's One of the Most Risky Feats of Aviating.

The spiral dip is undoubtedly one of the most difficult feats of aviating. It is something which requires the utmost confidence and skill on the part of an aviator to perform.

I worked out the stunt myself. For a number of weeks before attempting it I had the spiral idea. I knew what I wanted to do, but I did not know how to go about it. Finally I went to Orville Wright, explained my proposition, or rather my idea, to him and asked his advice. He heard me through and then pronounced the idea an impossibility. Still I was not convinced. I believed it could be done, and I kept puttering around with it until finally I struck upon the solution and made my first spiral.

With all frankness I will admit that it is, to say the least, a bit scary. Before going into it one must tip the machine straight downward, dropping toward the earth to secure momentum enough to make the spiral. Somehow, no matter how often one performs this, you never get used to it. The terrible falling sensation is there, always there. If the first spiral does not go off just as it should I always come out of it instead of attempting the second circle. It is the best plan.—Walter R. Brookins in Los Angeles Herald.

Explosive Chewing Gum.

The British soldier loves to chew gum—not, however, the gum known to America, but the army explosive cordite, which contains 60 per cent of nitroglycerin, a sweet concoction of agreeable taste. Chewers of cordite aver that when taken in little doses it greatly stimulates the nervous system and causes a slight exhilaration. Chewed in larger quantities, it produces an effect like that of hashish and causes ecstatic visions. The habit of chewing cordite has become so common in the British army that the military authorities have taken measures to prevent the misuse of the explosive. Cordite so used does not explode, because nitroglycerin is exploded only by a formidable shock or by an electric spark, but it is not impossible that under certain conditions it might be exploded—by the impact of two exceptionally hard teeth, for instance.—Harper's Weekly.

Where Does the Gold Go?

During the twelve last months the world produced upward of $450,000,000 new gold. Yet in that same period the gold holdings of the world's great banking institutions decreased about $40,000,000. Most of the changes from a year ago were small, but the Bank of France lost $55,000,000 and the Imperial Bank of Russia gained $21,000,000. The United States treasury balance of unpledged gold increased $8,000,000 and the Argentine gold reserve against the currency $12,000,000. Yet even this leaves the problem open, where the rest of the world's new gold has been distributed.—Exchange.

Punctured.

He had been boasting proudly about the quality of his machine, and pretty nearly everybody within earshot had grown excessively weary.

"For speed it's a dandy," he concluded, "but it costs like the dickens to keep it in repair."

"Well," said a stranger who had come into the smoker a trifle late to hear the beginning of the talk, "perhaps you haven't got the best. Now, I've got a machine that's a corker for speed, too, and I don't believe I've spent more than—well, not more than 25 cents in repairs in two years."

"Eighty-five cents!" cried the boastful one. "Nonsense! Why, the mere idea of speed alone involves a greater wear and tear, to say nothing of breakages, than that. Maybe our ideas of speed differ," he added condescendingly. "Just how high can you run?"

"Three hundred words a minute," said the stranger.

"Words?" demanded the boastful one scornfully.

"Why, yes," said the stranger. "You were talking about typewriting machines, weren't you?"

Whereupon the boastful one exploded with a loud report and a sibilant hiss.—Harper's Weekly.

Too Marvelous.

"Dug 'em out of th' ground?" exclaimed the old gentleman from up state, looking at the case of vases from Herculaneum.

"Yes, sir," answered the attendant.

"What, just as they be?"

"Perhaps some little pains have been taken in cleaning them, but in other respects they are the same."

"Pshaw!" muttered the old man, turning away. "He can say what he liked, but, by gum, he can't fool me into believin' ready made vases were ever dug up out of th' ground!"—Metropolitan Magazine.

A Hero of the Charity Bazaar Fire.

Jean Georges, a Parisian cab driver who received the Legion of Honor medal for his heroism at the charity bazaar fire on May 1[illegible], 1897, when he saved the lives of fifteen women, lost his life by drowning recently near Bordeaux. For some years after his exploit he and his carriage were in constant demand in the boulevards of Paris, especially by English and American tourists, but the advent of the automobile ultimately forced him out. He then came to this country to seek his fortune, and failed utterly, his return home being paid for him by private subscription. MARITIME EXPRESSIONS.

Used in a Metaphorical Sense They Are Quite Common.

Maritime expressions used metaphorically are, in fact, very common. We say a couple are "spliced," a young man is the "mainstay" of his family, an intruder "puts his oar in," a man is "laid up," sometimes "taken aback" or has "the wind taken out of his sails," a toper is "stowed," a loafer "spins a yarn," sometimes "tries the other tack," and a ruler "steers the ship of state" through troublesome times.

This last metaphor is extremely ancient, by the way. Horace refers to Rome as a ship at sea, and Plutarch says the Delphic oracle referred to Athens in the same way. A Tamil saying embodies a like metaphor, "The soul is the ship, reason is the helm, the oars are the soul's thoughts, and truth is the port." An old collection of English proverbs contains this one: "The tongue is the rudder of our ship." A Malay maxim says, "The boat which is swamped at sea may be bailed out, but the shipwreck of the affections is final."

Aristophanes, Plautus and others use an expression which comes down to us as an English saw, "To row one way and look another." An old English proverb ([illegible]) was, "It is not good to have an oar in every one's boat."

Bay Rum.

Bay rum is manufactured from the dried leaves of Pimento acris. Bay rum is procured by distillation, and this in a very simple manner. The leaves are plucked from the trees and then dried. In this state they are placed in the retort, which is then filled with water, and the process of distillation is carried on. The vapor is then condensed in the usual way and forms what is known as "bay oil," a very small quantity of which is required for each puncheon of rum.

A Picture of Eternity.

The negro preacher is noted for his enthusiasm and his picturesque, almost poetic, way of expressing things. In "Life In Old Virginia" J. J. McDonald tells about a colored minister who was conducting a revival without much success. At last, however, he awakened his congregation by asking:

"Does yo' know what eternity is? Well, I tell yo'.

"If one of dem lil' sparrows what yo' see 'round yo' garden bushes was to dip his bill in de 'Lantic ocean an' take one hop a day an' hop 'cross dis country an' put dat drop of water into de 'Cific ocean an' den he hop back to de 'Lantic ocean—jes' one hop a day—an' if he keep dat happin' up twell de 'Lantic ocean was dry as a bone, it wouldn't be break o' day in eternity."

"Dar, now," said one of the brethren, "yo' see for yo'se'f how long eternity is."

The Poster.

The poster may be said to date from 1836, when a design by Lalance was used in France to advertise a book, "Comment Meurent les Femmes." His example was very quickly followed, most of the early designs being printed in black on white or tinted paper. The color poster began about 1860 and attained to the dignity of a high art with Jules Cheret, "the father of the pictured placard." The first English theatrical placard to attract widespread attention was one of Fred Walker's advertising a dramatic version of "The Woman In White."—London Chronicle.

Schoolboys and Milton.

I visited a school the other day where a class of boys was engaged on an essay on Milton. One had written the following: "Milton was a splendid poet and wrote that beautiful poem 'Paradise Lost,' and on the death of his wife 'Paradise Regained.'"—Manchester Guardian.

SLEEPING OUT IN WINTER.

It may not be generally known to our readers that there are quite a number of people in Peterborough who "camp out" in winter—that is, sleep in the open air on balconies and on [illegible] verandahs. This mode of life is exhilarating and healthgiving to those who weak lungs. As an instance of this we may refer to the school camp at Deptford, England, where the [illegible] children who are living [illegible] and being taught out of doors and have no more shelter [illegible] weather than that afforded [illegible] were on Xmas [illegible] marching around a [illegible] [illegible] singing carols and furtively eyeing a host of presents and toys to be subsequently distributed. It was the first incident in an exceedingly pleasant Christmas party, held in one of the rooms of the Deptford Central Hall, where the campers, another score of former campers and parents were the guests.

Drawn from the poorest of homes, and formerly physically unfit to attend an ordinary school, the campers, whose ages range from 8 to 14 years, individually presented a wonderful contrast to the typical slum child. Rosy cheeks, alert eyes and unmistakable signs of boisterous health and vitality suggested a recent return from the seaside or country, rather than that "a cure" had been found so near their own homes. "Many of them the doctors said were 'greenhouse plants,' but they have been out of doors for six months and are perfectly well," remarked Miss Margaret MacMillan, the founder of the camp school, to a Daily News representative. "And the cost of the whole thing, giving them two meals a day and educating them, is about £9 per head per annum."

The boys' camp was started two years ago, and that for girls the year previously. This, however, is the first winter the girls have slept out. They are now the picture of health. The camp is carried on in connection with the Deptford Health Centre, and the children chosen by the doctors associated with the clinic are mostly suffering with anaemia. The youngsters are supplied with breakfast and an evening meal, and have their dinners at their parents' homes, all of which are within a short distance of St. Nicholas Church, Deptford, close to which the clinic and camp are situated. As guests of Miss MacMillan, the doctors and the school staff, the campers and their friends were regaled with tea and other good things.

Offensive Breath Caused Usually by Catarrh

A Simple Remedy that Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat Catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs, so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. It's rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs, and effectively, destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a sensible remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedy because it gets sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath, and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months, price $1.00; small size, 50c.; trial size 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

When in a crowd, or while at your work, sudden spells of weakness overcome you. Are you tired, listless? Does your heart beat irregularly? Have you puffy swellings under your eyes? Is your urine dark or cloudy? Do you urinate too frequently, and with great distress? If so, you need a course of Sanol and it will cure you promptly. Sanol also cures gall stones, kidney stones, gravel, etc. At all druggists—Manufactured by The Sanol Mfg. Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, Canada.

PUBLIC OPINION

A Female Policeman.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I was glad to see that the police commissioners took no action towards appointing a woman policeman. Whilst in a large city like Toronto many women are arrested and where women of loose character are common on the streets, such conditions do not exist here. The ladies who spoke in favor of such appointment were evidently actuated by a sincere impulse towards what they considered a good end. Still with the few women arrested here and the generally moral tone of Peterborough such appointment seems to me to involve an unnecessary expense. Should a woman be arrested here she is placed in a cell entirely segregated from the cells used for men. I think the present local force is amply able to maintain the peace.

PRICE 100 and ACCRUED INTEREST

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal. Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs;

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a day, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,200,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,196,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,924
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc., which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1906 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in du course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value being attached to the goodwill from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $6,[illegible],737.32. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephone at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

KRAFCHENKO HAD EYE ON $60,000 RAILWAY PAY ROLL

Regretted That He Was in Hiding and Could Not "Pull Off" a Big Job on Jan. 15.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 20.—With a charge of murder hanging over his head, and the police of the whole continent seeking him, John Krafchenko lamented while in hiding that he would be unable to pull off a "job" on Jan. 15. This was the statement made by John H. Buxton at the closing of yesterday's Royal Commission hearing. Krafchenko, he said, had confided this to him, making arrangements to a payroll—a railway payroll, he thought—in which Krafchenko said there was $60,000 or $80,000 and if he pulled it off he would make it right with the boys. He had intended to "pull off this job" on the 15th, but would have to leave it until the following month.

DAILY SHORT STORY

BULLIED THE CLUB

A London Duelist Who Forced His Way Into Brooks'.

VETOED HIS OWN REJECTION.

After Having Been Balloted For and Unanimously Blackballed He Made Every Member Deny His Vote and Then Declared Himself Elected.

It was a witty bishop who once defined a club as a place "where women cease from troubling and the weary are at rest." Another amusing definition was that given by George Augustus Sala. "A club," said he, "is a weapon used by savages to keep the white woman at a distance." Nowadays, however, as Ralph Nevill remarks in his book, "London Clubs," things are different. "Within the last twenty-five years or so the spirit of London club life has entirely changed. The old fashioned clubman, whose whole life was bound up with one or other of these institutions, is now practically extinct."

Perhaps the most striking story which Mr. Nevill tells regarding Brooks' club is that concerning the famous duelist, George Robert Fitzgerald, who was executed for murder in 1786. No first class London club would admit him. His name does not appear in the club list, though he must in a sort of way be regarded as having belonged to the club. He was, however, in it only once, though it was his boast that he had been unanimously chosen a member.

Owing to Fitzgerald's well known dueling propensities no first class London club would admit him. Nevertheless he got Admiral Keith Stewart, who knew that he must fight Fitzgerald or comply, to propose him for Brooks'.

Accordingly the duelist went with the admiral on the day of the election to the clubhouse and waited downstairs while the ballot was in progress.

The result, a foregone conclusion, was unfavorable to the candidate, not even one white ball being among the black, the admiral having been among the first to deposit his. Mr. Brooks eventually went to tell Fitzgerald, who was waiting in the hall, that there was one black ball and that therefore his candidature had failed.

Thrusting aside Brooks, who protested that nonmembers might not enter the clubrooms, Fitzgerald flew upstairs and entered the room. Walking up to the fireplace, he thus addressed Admiral Stewart:

"So, my dear admiral, Mr. Brooks informs me that I have been elected three times."

"You have been balloted for, Mr. Fitzgerald, but I am sorry to say you have not been chosen," said Stewart.

"Well, then," replied the duelist, "did you blackball me?"

"My good sir," answered the admiral, "how could you suppose such a thing?"

"Oh, I supposed no such thing, my dear fellow. I only want to know who it was that dropped the black ball in by accident, as it were."

Fitzgerald now went up to each individual member and put the same question to all in turn, "Did you blackball me, sir?" until he made the round of the whole club, and in each case he received a reply similar to that of the admiral.

When he had finished his investigations he then addressed the whole body: "You see, gentlemen, that as none of you have blackballed me I must be elected. It is Mr. Brooks who has made the mistake."

After this nothing more was said by the members, who determined to ignore the presence of their dangerous visitor, who drank three bottles of champagne in enforced silence, for no one would answer him when he spoke.

When he had gone it was agreed "that half a dozen stout constables should be in waiting the next evening to bear him off to the watch house if he attempted again to intrude, but Mr. Fitzgerald, aware probably of the reception he might get, never did."

Apropos of blackballing, Mr. Nevill mentions the greatest instance of blackballing probably ever known, which took place some years ago at a ladies' club, where one candidate received three more black balls than the number of members present—a case of excessive zeal indeed!

The practical joker is naturally not unknown in the most solemn of clubs, and "some irresponsible jokers have paid for their love of fun by having to resign their membership. One of them, whose escapades were notorious in London twenty years ago, sitting half asleep in a certain bohemian club, became annoyed at a very red headed waiter who kept buzzing about his chair. The sight of the fiery locks was eventually too much for this wild spirit, and, darting up and seizing the man, he emptied a bottle of black ink over his head before he could escape. The result, of course, was expulsion from the club, besides which very substantial compensation was rightly paid to the waiter."

Conundrums.

What is the difference between a cry-baby and an umbrella? Well, an umbrella you can shut up.

What is the difference between a light in a cave and a dance in an inn? One is a taper in a cavern; the other is a caper in a tavern.

What is the difference between a boy looking upstairs and one going up? One is stepping upstairs; the other is staring up steps.

Why is a lemon stick like a race horse? Because the more you lick it the faster it goes.

MARGARET ANGLIN TO APPEAR HERE IN SHAKESPEAR'S "AS YOU LIKE IT"

The attraction at the Grand Opera House on Monday, Jan. 26, will be Margaret Anglin and her company of Shakespearean actor in a notable revival of "As You Like It." Miss Anglin's re-entry into the Shakespearean field has attracted wide-spread interest and critical attention. For the past few years she has been identified with the modern school of the stage, but it must not be understood that on account of this she is new to Shakespeare. Some years ago Miss Anglin starred at the head of her own organization in a revival of "As You Like It," and three years ago she played Viola, Rosalind, and Katherine during her enormously successful Australian tour. Her success in these characters was so remarkable, and the critical commendations so favorable, that it is not surprising that she has resolved to become her own manager, and will devote her energy and talents in the future entirely to Shakespearean and classic roles. Miss Anglin is an actress with marvellous [illegible] and intellectual grasp, and with these she combines a gentle compulsion which [illegible] but to win allegiance and [illegible] as well as sincere admiration. She has the charm of personality, and above all, the power of humanizing a character without a moment's sacrifice of its ideal aspect. Miss Anglin's repertory is a very extended one, and the play she has selected for presentation here will afford local theatre-goers the opportunity of seeing her in her favorite character.

The reproduction will be lavishly staged in the matter of [illegible], [illegible] illusions, costuming and light effects. Miss Anglin's [illegible] company is a notable [illegible] of Shakespearean artists, and includes [illegible] McDiish, Ian MacLaren, Ruth Holt-Boucicault, Eric Blind, Max Montesole, Allen Thomas, [illegible], [illegible], [illegible], and a score of others.

"The impudence of that young brother of mine!" exclaimed Mrs. Nagger. "He just told me I was no chicken when I married you."

"Well," replied her unsympathetic husband, "that's true enough. You weren't a chicken, were you?"

"No; I was a goose."—Philadelphia Press.

Porto Rico's Pineapples.

Pineapple culture in Porto Rico has given such large returns that many of the insular government officials have bought small plantations, given up their official positions and become independent. Anaemic Mothers Here is Relief!

You Can Enrich Your Worn-out Blood and Quickly Renew Your Health With Dr.

Sufferer of Twenty Years States Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a Real Cure

"I can't remember any time during the past twenty years when my heart wasn't aching. If I bent over, dark specks would come before my eyes, and it seemed as if all the blood in my body wanted to rush to my head." Thus opens the letter of Mrs. Enoch S. Spry, of Putnam P.O., and continuing her interesting statement she says: "Work or exertion made my heart beat terrible, and going upstairs caused such shortness of breath that it fairly frightened me. I tell you how I feel to-day and you can understand what a great cure Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made. I feel strong enough now to work like a man, as for going up stairs on the run, it doesn't bother me at all. I eat and sleep as any well person ought, and as for dizziness which used to frighten me so much, it has entirely disappeared. Dr. Hamilton's Pills helped me, and I know every woman that uses them will have comfort and good health. AUTO-HYPNOTISM CAUSES A CASE OF HYDROPHOBIA

Syracuse, N.Y., Jan. 20.—James R. Hubbell, former clerk of Onondaga county, is in a critical condition from what physicians declare is an attack of hydrophobia, caused by the bite of a dog last November.

The case is regarded as peculiar in that the physicians believe the well defined symptoms of rabies manifested by Hubbell were developed by auto-hypnotism.

Since Hubbell was bitten by a dog his friends have been joking with him. This preyed upon his mind and he read up on the symptoms of the disease.

IF CONSTIPATED OR BILIOUS "CASCARETS"

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Take a Cascaret to-night to cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous, upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache, and feel all worn out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

Browning's Modesty.

The only son of Robert Browning and his illustrious wife was a diligent art student when he grew to manhood. He was believed to have a promising career, but once when the father was showing a friend some of his son's pictures he expressed a fear that he might suffer from the high hope built upon him.

"He is placed at a disadvantage," said Browning. Then he explained further, in a phrase as modest as any ever uttered by a great man:

"People expect much from him, you see, because he has such a clever mother."

GERONIMO IN ACTION.

The Indian Chief's Story of How He Whipped the Mexicans.

About noon we began to hear them [illegible] with [illegible]. In the afternoon the general came on the field, and the fighting became more general. I gave orders to my warriors to try to kill all the Mexican officers. About 3 o'clock the general called all the officers together at the right side of the field. The place where they assembled was not very far from the main stream, and a little ditch ran out close to where the officers stood. Cautiously I crawled out this ditch very close to where the council was being held.

The general was an old warrior. The wind was blowing in my direction, so that I could hear all he said, and I understood most of it. This is about what he told them: "Officers, yonder in those ditches are the red devil Geronimo and his hated band. This must be their last day. Ride on them from both sides of the ditches. Kill men, women and children. Take no prisoners. Dead Indians are what we want. Do not spare your own men; exterminate this band at any cost. I will post the wounded to shoot all deserters. Go back to your companies and advance."

Just as the command to go forward was given I took deliberate aim at the general, and he fell. In an instant the ground around me was riddled with bullets, but I was untouched. The Apaches had seen. From all along the ditches arose the fierce warcry of my people. The columns wavered an instant and then swept on. They did not retreat until our fire had destroyed the front ranks. After this their fighting was not so fierce, yet they continued to rally and readvance until dark. They also continued to speak my name with threats and curses. That night before the firing had ceased a dozen Indians had crawled out of the ditches and set fire to the long prairie grass behind the Mexican troops. During the confusion that followed we escaped to the mountains.—From "Geronimo's Story of His Life," by S. M. Barrett.

Where Abraham Fished.

Mrs. Victoria de Bunsen in "The Soul of a Turk" relates a legend concerning Abraham which will be new to many readers. She learned of it while at Edessa, the traditional Ur of the Chaldees. She was shown there a large oblong tank of water so filled with fishes swimming just below the surface of the water that their fins and backs seemed almost wedged together so as to form "an almost solid layer of silvery life."

"The guardian of the mosque throws some meal into the water, and the fish jump high to catch it, a great living pyramid, of which those which jump the highest form the pinnacle. The tradition is that Abraham as a child fished in the tank; hence the fish were considered sacred. No single one has been caught or killed to this day. Indeed, death would overtake the man who transgressed this law."

HENTY AS AN INVENTOR.

The Author's Reversible Boat That Was a Halfway Success.

George Henty, the author of boys' stories, is described in "Sixty Years in the Wilderness," by Henry W. Lucy, as the sweetest bearded, shortest tempered man in the world.

"Before he found his true vocation in writing boys' books Henty tried various methods of supplementing his salary on the Standard. One was the recovery of tin from broken or discarded utensils. For some months his study was filled with a bad smell and scraps of broken tin. The result was expected by efforts to melt off the tin from the baser metal with the assistance of a chemical compound invented by the operator.

"The next thing that attracted Henty's attention and filled him with hope of fortune was the building of a reversible boat, bound to right itself automatically. He took rooms up the river and, with some assistance from [illegible]

His Inspiration.

"Isn't inspiration a queer thing?"

"I suppose so. What about it?"

"Why, a few weeks ago I had a red-hot squabble with my wife over a dressmaker's bill, and when I came down to the office I was mad enough to chew spikes. Then I sat down at my desk and wrote a little poem on 'Help the Erring Brother with a Single Kindly Word!' And, say, those verses, born of bitterness and nourished by anger, have been copied in the leading newspapers all over the country! How's that?"

"Fine. Why don't you improve on the idea?"

"How?"

"Why, get mad enough to beat up your wife, set fire to the house, shoot a policeman—and then write an epic that will go thundering down the ages."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Kaiser's Palaces.

The number of the kaiser's palaces is largely due to the fact that the Prussian monarchy has absorbed many other German states, including the kingdom of Hanover, the duchy of Nassau and the electorate of Hesse-Cassel. All the palaces and castles of the rulers of these states thus passed into the possession of the reigning house of Prussia, as it was considered injudicious either to destroy or to sell them for fear of impairing the popularity of Hohenzollern rule. Thus it is that the emperor is burdened with the possession of more than [illegible], some of which he has never seen and many of which are totally unsuited for royal habitation. Although their maintenance entails a heavy drain upon his exchequer, they cannot for political reasons be either sold or leased.—Munsey's Magazine.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1909 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,000,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of [illegible] bushels, making a total capacity of 2,[illegible] bushels. There are in this new building [illegible] concrete tanks, [illegible] feet in diameter and [illegible] feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides slightly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped vessel between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately [illegible] bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately [illegible] bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of [illegible] bushels.

THE NEW SENATOR.

He Found Fashionable Washington Life Too Rich For His Blood.

A newly elected senator came on early to Washington to arrange for rooms and had an object lesson furnished him on "the high cost of living." He wanted to start in "with the swim" and be at the center of things, so he priced the "forum" hotel.

"We make it $600 per month, two rooms and bath, to you, senator—without meals," said the clerk dreamily. When the senator caught his breath he was two blocks up the avenue.

He tried another hotel, a moderately exclusive house, whose lobbies were a sort of eddying pool of statesmen and "influential" lobbyists. To him the attendant flunkey of this gilded shrine remarked: "Now, we have a choice of two rooms with bath at $500 per month"—

"Without eating—just for a sleeping place!" broke in the senator. "Why, I'd burn up with fever if I had to sleep at that price!"

The salary of a senator is $7,500, and it is figured on the high level of "simple" living in Washington that he ought to part with that much for assured rest at a good hotel. But the new senator didn't feel that way about it. Finally it was suggested that he might take a room at the simple hotel of the old days, at $1 per twenty-four hours, and save money, using the parcel room for baggage when away over Sunday. Then he could take a peep at Peacock alley and meet friends in the "lobby" which the more wealthy statesmen and tourists support.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

An Old Garret on a Stormy Day.

I know no nobler forage ground for a romantic, venturesome, mischievous boy than the garret of an old family mansion on a day of storm. It is a perfect field of chivalry. The heavy rafters and dashing rain, the piles of spare mattresses to carouse upon, the big trunks to hide in, the old white coats and hats hanging in obscure corners like ghosts, are great! And it is so far away from the old lady who keeps rule in the nursery that there is no possible risk of a scolding for twitching off the fringe of a rug. There is no baby in the garret to wake up. There is no "company" in the garret to be disturbed by the noise. There is no crotchety old uncle or grandma, with their everlasting "Boys, boys!" and then a look of horror.—Donald G. Mitchell.

Jack Sheppard as a Text.

Jack Sheppard had a great hold upon the imagination of the people of his time. The fact that 200,000 people witnessed his execution at Tyburn on Nov. 16, 1724, "upon the tree that bears twelve times a yeare" is some witness to his grim popularity. But one of the strangest tributes ever paid him was the sermon preached upon him in a London church.

"Oh, that ye were all like Jack Sheppard!" began the preacher, to the stupefaction of his congregation. He went on to draw a parallel between things of the flesh and those of the soul and to point out that the genius shown in housebreaking might have been bestowed upon "picking the locks of the heart with the nail of repentance."—London Standard.

WHERE THE WHEAT GOES

ELABORATE MACHINERY THAT RECEIVES IT AT LONDON.

Strange Barge Interviews the Wheat Laden Vessels on Their Arrival and by Means of Ingenious Devices Relieves Them of Their Burden—All the Old System of Lightening Is Done Away With.

Grain flows in a vast stream from Canada to London.

How is it handled on its arrival there?

Five years ago there was towed across the Thames from Milwall to the Surrey Commercial Docks a curious vessel, rather larger than a Thames sailing-barge; the hull low in the water, a great square iron tank at both ends; above her iron decks were no masts and spars, neither had she at all the appearance of an ordinary steamship. But instead two [illegible] towers and three funnels or chimneys reared themselves high into the air.

All other craft drew aside, as slowly and making heavy weather of the running tide, this strangest of all vessels passed from bank to bank and made its first and only voyage in safety.

This was the new pneumatic elevator for grain built by the East Ferry Engineering Works. Arrived in the Surrey Docks, she caused a feeling almost of consternation and alarm, so peculiar was her appearance.

Captains of liners, masters of sailing ships, mates who had visited every clime—none in any port had seen a vessel such as this, even the [illegible] wit for once was silenced. Foreign sailors were given to understand this was the latest torpedo-boat, for, as the engineer said, "You can see all the tubes!"

But very soon speculations were set at rest, as the leviathan was towed alongside one of the grain steamers in dock. Somewhere from the upper part of each tower four six-inch tubes of metal or armadillo hose-pipe were let down into the grain in the steamer's hold, barges were brought up to each side of the elevator at the base of each tower—some with sacks are standing little groups of men assembled on platforms suspended just under the six shoots projecting overhead—smoke was seen to be issuing from the taller and blacker of the three chimneys; and then, a low, deep, regular sound was heard—"Houjh! houjh! houjh!"—like the panting of some enormous animal. With each breath from the top of the other two chimneys came filmy rings, much as rings of smoke are blown by a cigarette-smoker—the four great air-suction cylinders in the hold of the elevator had been set at work. A few seconds later, through one of the six shoots over the heads of the little group of dockers, swish! came the grain, 240lb., equivalent to a sack of four bushels of wheat, weighed and checked automatically up in the tower. "Swish! swish!" as one shot after another delivered the grain, either to be shot in bulk into the barge below, or put into a sack and then tumbled overboard.

The elevator was designed to deal with 120 tons of grain an hour, but on her trial, 211 tons of grain passed through the weighing-machines in one hour. Yet still another surprise was in store. Two tanks, travelling on rails, had lately been put on a gallery high up on the face of an adjacent warehouse, fifty or sixty feet above the ground. None of the onlookers quite knew what these tanks had been placed there for, or why the little gallery with its railway had been built. These tanks were connected by two elevator tubes to points just under the centres of each tower.

No men clustered on the little platforms and the [illegible] were unhitched. No barges [illegible] against the elevator's sides. The steam in the boilers down in the hold of the elevator was under full pressure, two small wheels on the [illegible] of the air-cylinders were turned and the machine [illegible] again set in motion. No filmy rings [illegible] appeared at the top of the two chimneys—what was happening?

The grain, sucked up out of the ship, was being blown, by the exhaust air from the cylinders, up the two pipes into the revolving tanks and then into the warehouse—this at the rate of 150 tons an hour. So fast did the elevators blow the grain that it was found impossible to deal with it in any ordinary warehouse.

The cost of such an elevator is about $110,000, and a crew of twelve men is required. The hull, towers, and vessel generally are made of steel plates, and the following are the principal measurements: Length of hull, 125 feet; breadth, 37 feet; depth, 14 feet 6 inches; draught, 11 feet; height above water-line, [illegible] feet; displacement, 1,600 tons. The suction power is [illegible] to the inch, and the blowing power [illegible].

Below deck are four air-cylinders, worked by a [illegible] compound surface condensing steam-engine, working up to 800 h.p.; 300 h.p. is available for suction only.

The air-cylinders exhaust the air from the canisters. Air then strives to rush up these pipes, whose ends are down in the hold of the vessel, [illegible] to fill the vacuum [illegible] in the canisters. But as the ends of the tubes are in the grain, the grain also gets drawn up with the air.

Arrived in the canisters, the grain is shot downwards by means of [illegible] placed over the entrance of the tubes inside the canisters, while the air, [illegible] free of the grain, rushes out through the pipe at the top of each canister, down through the cylinder and out at the exhaust. The grain meanwhile passed through the [illegible], which are simply air-tight [illegible] revolving at a maximum rate of [illegible] revolutions per minute.

Adulterated Tea.

Tea was commonly adulterated in England seventy-five years ago. The London Times of May 14, 1838, reports the case of a defendant charged with gambling, who stated that he earned from $1.20 to $1.44 a day by picking sloe leaves and black and white thorn leaves in the fields and selling them for a penny (2 cents) a pound to a local cow keeper. The cow keeper was visited, and it was discovered that he disposed of the leaves to tea dealers in London. As the duty on tea was then 36 cents, and the cheapest tea on the market brought 86 cents a pound, huge profits must have been realized by the fraudulent dealers.

Lighting a Tunnel.

An ingenious way of illuminating a tunnel has been devised by a Parisian inventor. Reflectors throw the light from many electric lamps sixteen feet above the rails to the sides of the tunnel, where it is again reflected by burnished tin, giving a soft and agreeable light. The trains automatically turn the current on and off when entering and leaving the tunnel.

Notable Offer of the $1.00 D. & A. Corset for 79c

AMONGST WOMEN, one dollar is a popular price to pay for a corset. And scores of women there are, who have proved that the D. & A. model is one of the best corsets on the market for the price. To begin with, it is made of a splendid quality French coutil, and is procurable in low or medium bust styles; which are fitted with the long skirt. And the trimming being of Nottingham Lace, there is a dainty finish to the Corset, each model possessing a hook below the clasp to further insure a perfect fit over the hips. The boning is well placed, and on the whole this D. & A. Corset must be very satisfactory or so many would not be sold. But just here we would lay particular stress upon the very low price that prevails in the Annex. This is the first time they have been sold in this section, and their first appearance will be characterized by the lowest figures ever placed upon this Corset. Sizes are 18 to 30; and for Wednesday only—the price 79c

In the debate on the speech from the Throne in the House of Commons on Monday, Mr. J. H. He asserted that the Liberal majority in the Senate had been used by the Opposition in the Commons to defeat the Highways Bill and the Naval Bill. The members of the Opposition had realized that the bills would appeal to the people and that they were hopelessly out of power. They had therefore called upon the Senate to act. As to the demand for tariff reductions, he pointed out that the cost of living was lower in France, the most highly protected country in the world.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

WANTS HAPPINESS GETS DECEIVED

New Orleans, Jan. [illegible]—Life was too slow for Ida Bergeron, a pretty 16-year-old Creole girl of Houma, La. She came to the city to see, to learn, to be happy. But life in the city was too much for Ida Bergeron. Friday morning, after what some term a "good time," she was taken out to the Home of the Good Shepherd under the chaperonage of Mrs. [illegible] court, to go through a daily routine of work and—to wait.

The story of Ida Bergeron sobbed out to Superintendent Thomas H. Agnew of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Friday, when she was taken in charge by him while she was working as a waitress in a St. Charles street restaurant, is the old, old story of the innocent country girl and the fascinating well-dressed man about town.

MOTHER MAKES COMPLAINT

The girl had been living with her widowed mother, Mrs. Louise Bergeron. Two or three nights a week she has not come home until daylight. It was always because she had to work late. Mrs. Bergeron saw the color disappearing from her daughter's cheeks, and she called on her employer to see if he could not reduce her working hours.

"The man told me that Ida always got off early in the evening and never did work late," Mrs. Bergeron told Mr. Agnew several days ago when she complained to the society. "I spoke to Ida about it, and she told me to leave her alone, and that she was going to do exactly as she pleased about coming home."

Ida went to Gretna Friday night with the man. No one knows why she was not married.

"He wanted me to go for a little pleasure trip," said the girl. "The man I met because he came to the restaurant frequently and he always treated me well. He was perfectly lovely and when he asked me to go out with him several times, I could not refuse."

"Where did you go in Gretna?"

"Oh, we just went there," said the girl. "I shan't tell where we went."

REFUSES TO TELL HIS NAME

The girl is very defiant and in the juvenile court Friday morning blamed her mother for having reported her to the society.

"I won't tell you the name of the man," she said. "He is a good man and I trust him. He was just as nice lookin' as anyone I have ever seen and he treated me well."

RECOVERING WITH HOLE IN HER HEART

Ten-Year-Old Girl Had Puncture Big as a Dime After an Attack of Illness.

Baltimore, Jan. 20.—Physicians here are interested in the case of 10-year-old Nettie [illegible], who apparently is recovering from an attack of heart trouble in which the heart was left with a puncture the size of a 10-cent piece.

When the X-ray revealed the hole in her heart the girl's case was considered hopeless. However, under medical treatment she began to show improvement and now is permitted to assist her mother in housework.

The case is said to be without a precedent in this part of the country.

SIR JAMES DOES NOT KNOW HE IS BACK IN TORONTO

Premier Appeared Better To-day According to Doctors Bulletin

"Sir James Whitney had a restless night. He is much quieter, and appears better this morning."

Toronto, Jan. 21.—At 11.25 o'clock to-day the above bulletin was issued at the General Hospital by Drs. McPhedran and Clarke, the physicians who are in attendance on the stricken Premier. This announcement followed a previous bulletin that the Premier had spent a restless night, but appeared to be better this morning.

Lady Whitney at Bedside.

Lady Whitney and Dr. Pyne spent most of the morning in the sick chamber while Mr. Horace Wallis remained in the reception room. Gathered from a conversation from Dr. McPhedran that the Premier was in a very critical condition. He was restless throughout the night, his sleep being very fitful. He is not conscious, and it is doubtful if he knows that he is in Toronto. This morning when the doctor entered the room he made a movement of the head which might be taken for a nod of recognition. Sir James is delirious most of the time, but he is now taking nourishment.

Some Improvement.

The most important development, however, lies in the fact that the Premier has shown some slight improvement, though how long this will last is a matter upon which no doctor can venture an opinion.

Boiler of New Howick Hall, Winter Fair Building Explodes Toronto Horseman Lost Thousands

The Dead.

NAP. ST. DENIS, of Hull, aged 40, employed as hog killer at the fat stock show. Leaves a wife and family.

JOS. COSGROVE, of Buckingham, Que., aged 43, driver for Dr. Lawson of that town and in the charge of latter's horse exhibit.

JOS. MARSHALL, laborer, Ottawa.

[illegible] McKEE, of Renmore, Ont.

The Injured.

STEWART ROSS, 166 Catherine street, Ottawa, aged 17, scalp wound, abrasion of the eye, back hurt, will likely recover.

A. F. JAMES, Arlington avenue, left side and left arm hurt, may have internal injuries, not serious.

A. G. McCALLUM, Clarey avenue, city, badly shaken up.

J. FOUTS, 1060 Bank street, carpenter, badly shaken up.

Ottawa, Jan. 21.—Four men and possibly six were blown into eternity without a moment's warning; a score of others were injured; twenty-five horses, a dozen cattle and a hundred sheep were destroyed and the roof of the Howick Hall, the most splendid building of the group owned by the Central Canada Exhibition, was completely wrecked by a terrific explosion of the boilers of the building which occurred here at eight o'clock this morning.

The Ottawa live stock show was being held and the big building was crowded with live stock of all kinds. The force of the explosion was so great that portions of the boiler were blown clean through the roof far into the sky, windows in all the adjoining and neighboring buildings being broken and the noise was plainly heard throughout the city.

Dead Terribly Mangled.

The killed were so terribly mangled that up to noon identification was almost impossible. It was thought that they were all attendants. Had the explosion occurred later in the day when the show would have been in full swing the loss of life would have been terrible.

As a result of the wreck, the live stock show has been demolished.

Evil fate seems to hang over the Howick Building, as this makes the third time that it has been attended with serious wrecks involving loss of life, although the structure was only erected six years ago.

The only identified body was that of Joseph Marshall, laborer, 674 Bronson avenue, Ottawa.

A FINE PICTURE OF LORD STRATHCONA

There is a life-like painting of Lord Strathcona on exhibition in the window of Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, executed by the firm's artist, the work being taken from the cut of the deceased nobleman, which appeared in yesterday's Mail and Empire. It is about four feet square, and is well worth seeing.

On receipt of the news of the death of Lord Strathcona Mr. Turner cabled a message of sympathy to his daughter, Hon. Mrs. Howard, who is personally acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Turner, as was also Lord and Lady Strathcona.

HONORS FOR MR. J. H. GREER

Expert in Magnetite Arc Light Service Says His Work Cannot Be Surpassed.

Peterborough has given many "shining lights" to professional, industrial, scientific, financial and commercial circles, and it is generally conceded that a native of this, the Electrical City of Ontario, excels in whatever his hands finds to do. Home talent, to say the least, is generally forthcoming for our own requirements, and a resolution of the City Council calls for preference to home genius, industry and manufactured goods whenever available. With the introduction of the Hydro-Electric System into this city, Council, true to our civic principle, of Peterborough for Peterboronians, wherever possible, appointed Mr. Johnston H. Greer, a well known Peterborough man, as superintendent of the installation of our new magnetite arc light street service, and publicly speaking, the wisdom of the choice of last year's Council is manifested in the beautiful white-ways on George, Hunter, Charlotte and Simcoe streets, operating night after night without a hitch. Apart from what is apparent to the ordinary eye, it is a real pleasure to record that a travelling expert in the interests of the magnetite arc street lamp service, who covers a large section of the States and Canada, in conversation with a Times representative, remarked that he had never seen a better piece of installation work than that done by Mr. Greer for Peterborough. To use his own words, he said: "For uniformity, the work cannot be surpassed; there is not a difference of half an inch in the alignment of the whole system, and the service is perfect." The magnetite arc system is an intricate one and the [illegible] is [illegible] consequently Mr. Johnston Greer has earned credit for Peterborough in the success of his undertaking, and his electrical skill will undoubtedly be taken advantage of by our civic authorities as occasion demands.

[illegible] Him.

An Irishman was sitting in a depot smoking when a woman came in, and, sitting down beside him, remarked:

"Sir, if you were a gentleman you would not smoke here."

"Mum," he replied, "if you were a lady ye'd sit farther away."

Pretty soon the woman burst out again:

"If you were my husband I'd give you poison."

"Well, mum," returned the Irishman, as he pulled away at his pipe, "if you was my wife (puff, puff) I'd take it."

SUCCESSION DUES UP IN MILLIONS

Holdings of Late Commissioner Is Placed at Eighty Millions.

Quebec, Que., Jan. 21.—The death of Lord Strathcona will have a material effect on the revenue of the Province for the current year. It is understood that the immense holdings of this high Commissioner will fall under the succession law of Quebec and calculations are easily made that the revenue from the estate will amount up to millions of dollars.

It was said it was anticipated that the value of the holdings was about $80,000,000 and if so the succession dues at eight per cent would amount to $6,400,000. This amount will very likely be modified when the value of the estate in Quebec is known, as this very point has arisen over the judgment of the Privy Council in the Cotton case. At all events the Province is expecting to benefit to the extent of several millions by the demise of Lord Strathcona.

BURIED FATHER IN OCEAN, SUES

H. Blair Finley Asks Three Thousand Damages.

New York, Jan. 21.—An unusual suit for damages against a steamship company for burying the body of a passenger at sea was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by H. Blair Finley son of Clement B. Finley a retired mining engineer of Penncasee who died on the steamship Minneapolis on July 2nd last.

The plaintiff says that immediately after his fathers death the employes of the line took charge of his property worth $750 which greatly exceeded the cost of notifying the plaintiff of his fathers death and embalming the body.

The complainant says that the body was embalmed and carried on the vessel until July 6th, when it was cast into the sea within a few hours of this port.

The complainant asks for $3,000 damages.

LORD STRATHCONA DIED WHILE ASLEEP; END WAS PEACEFUL

London, Jan. 21.—As early as nine o'clock this morning a large number of telegrams of condolence were received at Grosvenor Square. All houses in the Square have blinds drawn. Lord Strathcona's death happened too late to enable the majority of the morning papers to comment on the event. The Times was the only exception. In a short editorial it remarked: "A life so free from those periods of eclipse which are a portion of lesser men, justifies some attempt to explore its secret springs. Chief among the qualities of Lord Strathcona must be placed an unerring business instinct; to this was added, as in the case of his younger contemporary, Mr. Cecil Rhodes, that gift of imagination which recognizes noble uses to which great wealth may be applied. Without this he could never have thought of the present which he made to Great Britain during the darkest days of the South African war."

The Times added: "When all else is said, the best tribute that can be paid Lord Strathcona is, he lived to the height of great occasions."

Died in Early Morning.

Lord Strathcona passed away peacefully in his sleep at 2.15 this morning. It was realised from an early hour on Saturday morning that the venerable statesman was passing away. His Lordship on several occasions within the last few years, had been confined to his home an odd day or two, but at such times, despite his heavy burden of years his friends always had confidence in his power to resist illness. Unhappily such confidence could not be entertained on this last occasion. An attack of catarrh which would be a comparatively trifling matter for a man in the prime of life was too severe a strain for one who had passed the four-score and ten mark well over three years ago. The malady completely prostrated Lord Strathcona, eventually inducing heart weakness. The aged patient sank into a state of coma and the end came perfectly peaceful.

NOTED GANG LEADER JAILED WHISPERS THREAT TO OFFICER

"Dopey Benny" Fein, Who Assaulted Sergeant; Was Seen Shifted to Cells

New York, Jan. 21.—"Dopey Benny" Fein, gang leader, was convicted this morning of assaulting a Police Sergeant, Patrick E. Sheridan, who one day last August told Fein to "move on." The gangster instead reviled Sheridan, according to the testimony, and engaged in a rough and tumble fight with the Sergeant whose life was threatened by a mob friendly to Fein.

"I'll Get You Yet," He Said.

The trial was one of the briefest of its kind in New York courts in recent years, lasting two days. Gang members loitered near the court room and an extra guard of policemen was stationed to guard against disorders. When the case went to the jury fifty minutes before the verdict was reached, Fein leaned past the officers who guarded him and whispered sharply to Sheridan: "I'll get you yet." Fein will be sentenced on Friday.

Gangster Shoots Informer.

While Fein's trial was in progress, gang activity in the city did not cease. Last night in a Bowery corner saloon called "The Tub of Blood," a machinist, Thomas Murphy, was shot dead by a man known to the police as "Gyp the Blood," a title given him since the original "Gyp the Blood" was sentenced to be executed as one of the gang which murdered the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, at the bidding of Charles Becker, Police Lieutenant. Murphy is said to have been killed for giving the police information regarding gang members. His assailant escaped.

SPORT EXTRA

PETERBOROUGH LANDS THE DISTRICT CHAMPIONSHIP

Lightning fast hockey, sensational individual rushes, and here and there a dash of combination play that nearly always netted a counter. Were dished up to the fans, who visited the Brock street rink last night, to see the Peterborough Intermediates practically land the District Championship by defeating the Bowmanville septette by the score of 12—4.

Good ice, perfect condition and an enthusiastic crowd of supporters all combined to help the Petes to victory, and they played one of the best games of the season, every man was on his mettle and the way they jumped into the game from the start showed that there was going to be no half-way business about them—They were going all the way.

Park, at centre, was never seen to better advantage than last night, and he had the Bowmanville net guardian guessing all night. Fred Kelly's shots bore in on the goal like bullets—in fact several holes were found in the nets when the "Barbers" and "Orientals" met in an after game. Denison was in the game with bells on, and the rest of the line up showed the real championship form that delights the eye of all good hockey lovers. Peterborough has an intermediate team that is going to take a lot of beating, and are worthy of a top-notch support from all the hockey-lovers of the city. They have won their way into the leading place in the District standing against great odds, and having demonstrated the fact that they are out to do their best to bring the Intermediate O. H. A. honors to our city. The city has put itself behind them and are going to boost the team on to victory. Last night's attendance and the attendance of the games before, puts great confidence in the boys and the management.

The Times wishes them every success in future games, and our hearty support will not be stinted, nor our praises scanty, and with the true sports of Peterborough, we say, "Here's luck to the boys in blue and white, when they enter the semi-finals."

Mr. Peter Spratt handled the bell last night and gave the best of satisfaction. One of the most pleasing features of the game was the absence of rough play of any kind. Not a single man drew a penalty and the boys played the best of hockey in the best way—clean.

In the first half Cryderman collided with the goal post and received a bad smash on the shoulder, Bond was dropped, but the injury soon mended and he returned on the ice. This was the only delay of the game.

The best man on the ice was probably Higginbotham, of Bowmanville. His work pleased the crowd, and he received the applause of the local people time and again for his good work. Bowmanville have a fast bunch, despite the large score piled up against them.

The Line-up.

Peterborough—Goal, Jones; right defence, Bond; left defence, Denison; rover, Giroux; centre, Park; wings, Kelly and Bradshaw.

Bowmanville—Goal, Spry; right defence, Christie; left defence, Robinson; rover, Jones; centre, Cryderman; wings, Higginbotham and Hooper.

Goals Scored.

Peterborough—Kelly 2, Park 3, Giroux 2, Bradshaw 5.

Bowmanville—Cryderman 2, Higginbotham 2.

BUSY SESSION OF BOARD OF WORKS HELD LAST EVENING

Snow Plough Men Came in for Criticism—Some Have Been Fined—Engineers Plans for Outfall Sewer Will be Ready in Three Weeks

The City's Board of Works met in business session last evening, Ald. George Duncan, the new chairman for 1914, presiding. There were also present his worship Mayor Buller, Aldermen A. H. Stratton, Duffus, Anderson, Saunders, Johnston, McIntyre, Green and City Engineer Parsons.

Sundry 1913 accounts from the Water Commissioners for changing levels for water connections to meet changes in grades of sewers, and other incidental work was questioned by Ald. Green as being in reality chargeable against the Board of Works. He stood to be corrected, but doubted if Council's past policy in paying such accounts had been wise and suggested that it might be in order to establish a precedent contrari-wise. Other charges from the Commissioners for use of their boiler in thawing out frozen drains were also to hand. The Board hold that as all incidental accommodation between the Water Commissioners and the Board is now to be charged accordingly to precedent established by the former, as evidenced in accounts presented by the Commissioners covering the year 1913, the Board would be justified in submitting contrary accounts for filling in and levelling off excavations made by the waterworks men. This will be done.

The question of appointing foremen for city work was left in abeyance on motion of Ald. Green and Stratton.

Ratepayers petitioned for a crossing across the north end of the Park at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets, continuing the walk from the south side of Charlotte street across the road to west side of Park street. This was left in abeyance.

To Take Care of Walk.

On motion of the Mayor and Ald. Green, a by-law will be prepared to take care of the concrete walk laid for the East City School, on Concession and Hunter streets.

Sewerage for Waterford-Harvey Sts.

On motion of Ald. Johnston and Green, the Provincial Board of Health will be asked to approve of the Engineer's plans for serving the Waterford-Harvey streets property (Dickson Co's lands) with sewerage, with an outlet on Water street at a cost of $7,000.

More Poles.

The request of the Bell Telephone Co. for permission to erect poles for service to customers was properly granted, poles to be erected under the city engineer's supervision.

One Engineer Head For Civic Work.

Mayor Buller asked City Engineer Parson's opinion in the feasibility of one City Engineer controlling both the water works department and general city demands.

Mr. Parsons contended that it would be in the interests of Peterborough generally were the city's engineer to controll the water works department also. The whole work would be handled conveniently, and more economically and to better advantage than at present—with two engineers, one for the city's engineering department and another at the head of the waterworks department.

On motion of Ald. Johnston and McIntyre, the Water Commissioners will be interviewed on this question, as discussed last year.

Will Move Track.

The Grand Trunk Railway will move their siding on Bethune, between Charlotte and Hunter streets, six feet from the buildings to make the walk safer for pedestrians than at present.

Poor Snow Ploughing.

Complaints were voiced, especially regarding the western and southern districts of very unsatisfactory snow ploughing; the men do not get out early enough to keep walks properly clear according to contract. The chairman offered that the men this year have had practically nothing to do, and the least that can be expected of them when snow does fall, like Tuesday and yesterday, is that they get out early enough to clean the walks in time for people going to work. He supposed that next year they will be asking for more money, as previously under similar easy circumstances.

Ald. Johnston did not think it fair to criticise all for the shortcomings of the few. He thought some of the men had done their best according to circumstances; Tuesday and Wednesday's snow fall was an unusually heavy one to contend with.

It transpired that some of the snow ploughers have already been fined for inefficient work; and others will be similarly dealt with should circumstances call for such treatment. The city will attend to providing necessary crossings through the beautiful.

New Outfall Sewer.

Engineer Parsons advised that his plans, drawn on information secured from the Provincial Board of Health, for the new outfall sewer and separation plant, will be ready in three weeks. He was exceedingly optimistic of his plans being endorsed by the Board, and the work being started at an early date.

Want Concrete Walk.

J. J. Turner & Sons' petition for a concrete sidewalk south side of their premises on King street, was referred to the City Engineer for conference with Mr. J. J. Turner Jr.

Good Policy.

On the Mayor's suggestion, attention will be given to his proposition, that the necessary horses and carts and men be engaged permanently to keep the roads in good state of repair.

On motion of Ald. Green and Duffus, two horses and dump carts with the necessary men will be procured to engage permanently in street repair work this year as a test.

Street Railway Watering of Streets.

On suggestion of his worship, the Street Railway Co. will be asked their terms for running a street watering tank over their system.

MR. W. G. HOWDEN FOR COUNTY WARDEN

The approaching meeting of the County Council takes place next Tuesday, when it is understood, owing to the struggle that is on for the position of Warden of the County, an interesting opening session will take place.

Last year, as our readers are aware, Mr. J. H. Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, filled the chair to satisfaction of everybody.

There is a tacit understanding that the older members of the Council get the call for this high office in something like rotation. This year, Mr. Archie Brault, of Norwood, would no doubt have secured this honor, but, having been defeated at the polls, he is of course out of the running.

It is understood that the aspirants for the Wardenship are Messrs. W. G. Howden, Reeve of North Monaghan; Chris. Darling, Reeve of Dummer; A. A. Wiede, Reeve of Belmont and Methuen, and Robert Shaw, Reeve of Harvey.

Mr. Howden will probably be chosen, as he has every qualification entitling him to the position. Another point that would indicate his election is his proximity to the city and consequent accessibility when wanted for business.

A MAN'S WHISKERS.

They Should Not Be Renovated With the Shoebrush.

If men would devote as much loving care to their whiskers as women do to their hair they would contribute greatly to increasing the dignity of the sex.

A woman wouldn't think of coming downtown without having her hair properly arranged. She combs it, and fusses with it, and pads it out with rats, and puts wire cages under it, and runs ribbons through it, and she is a vision of loveliness when she appears in the busy haunts of men.

But a man gives his whiskers no attention further than to brush the eggshells or clam chowder out of them with the shoebrush. It never seems to occur to him that his whiskers might be made beautiful if he would devote one-half the time to them that a woman gives to her hair. He might easily have made a wire cage to attach to his chin, and then he could weave his whiskers around it in captivating styles and tie the ends together with a pink or blue ribbon.

The [illegible] editor gets tired of seeing the same old fashions in whiskers when it would be so easy to devise new and striking ways of wearing them.

There should be a whiskers club in Emporia. If such an organization were formed and the members held weekly meetings to exchange ideas and compare notes the results would soon be apparent. The town's whiskers would soon become distinctive, and their reputation would cover the country.

Let us have a new deal in spinach.—Emporia Gazette.

A Deadly Weapon.

There is a horrible weapon favored by certain of the hill tribes in the Ghauts of western Asia, which consists of four sharp, curved blades hidden under the fingers and securely held in place by rings passing over two of them. With such a contrivance Shivaji, the Maratha hero, is credited with having disemboweled his Mohammedan overlord when making a pretense of rendering him his humble submission. The vagnaks ("tiger's claws"), as they are called, are distinctly more brutal than their western prototype, the "knuckle duster."—Wide World Magazine.

STIGMA OF RESPECTABILITY.

People Who Continuously Prate About Being Extra Superfine.

Can anything worse be said about any people in these days than that they are respectable? Nothing that we can think of, except to say that they are eminently respectable.

To be respectable implies so much that is utterly undesirable and alien to our ideals that it almost always produces a shudder.

When a man has tried everything else and failed he then becomes respectable.

Respectability is in itself a badge of the commonplace, which, from the standpoint of society, is the unpardonable sin.

To be respectable implies that you may be honest, not necessarily that you are honest, because you may possibly be using your respectability as a cloak. The probability is that you are not doing this, however, as most people would rather be caught dishonest than to have the name of being respectable.

A respectable man is almost always hopeless. He is blind to his own condition.

The chances are that you cannot educate him out of it.

But there is always hope for every human soul.

For example, if, unconsciously, without realizing his danger, he has drifted into being respectable and is thoroughly ashamed of it he may be saved. Helping hands should immediately be extended to him. Life preservers and poker chips and rum bottles should be thrown at him. And the probability is that he will swim ashore.

But if he once admits that he is respectable he is lost.

Jails ought to be used exclusively to harbor respectable people, where they wouldn't be constantly boring us to death.

One reason why so much wickedness is perpetrated is because there are so many respectable people around, maddening others with their presence.—Life.

No Destination.

"Here's a nickel," said a thrifty housewife to a tramp at her door. "Now, what are you going to do with it?"

"Well, mum," replied the hungry man, "if I buy a touring car I shan't have enough left to pay my chauffeur; if I purchase a steam yacht there won't be enough left to defray the cost of manning her, so I guess, mum, I'll get a schooner and handle it myself."—Everybody's Magazine.

Not an Unmixed Evil.

"Poverty has its blessings," said the philosophic friend.

"That's right," replied Mr. Suddengift. "It was annoying to be wiped out in Wall street as I was last week. But it put an immediate stop to two threatened breach of promise suits."—Washington Star.

Definite Instructions.

Telegraphers have their troubles, like the rest of mankind, and the boys who follow the dots and dashes tell stories based upon actual happenings that almost test the credulity of the hearer. A man now in charge of a Postal office is responsible for the following, which occurred to him when he was holding down a key in an obscure place in the suburbs:

"A farmer came in one day and handed me a message to 'Mrs. Smith, New York city.' I asked for the address, and my patron, looking at me with a pitying smile, replied:

"'Sonny, you just send it to Mrs. Smith, who keeps a boarding house in New York. Don't let any one know you don't know where her place is.'"—Philadelphia Times.

Made His Position Clear.

An old Pennsylvania German living in the mountains had a hard three hours' dusty walk to accomplish one morning, and he rose very early to make his start. He had gone but a little way when he was overtaken by an automobile. The driver picked up the old man, and they were at his destination in about twenty minutes.

"Danks so much awfully mit de ride. If I had known myself to be here already two hours in front of de clock yet I vud be at home fast asleep already to start unless I knew you vud not have picked me up since."—Housekeeper.

Scottish Students' Dress.

The Scottish university student has a code of etiquette in clothes as strict as that of Eton or of Harrow. And into it the straw hat enters. On Sept. 15, be the weather ever so bleak, the streets are full of what the small boy knows as "strawbashers." On the 16th you will find never a one—on a student's head, that is. As for the medical student, he seldom wears a straw hat at all or anything in its place. It is his pride to go bareheaded, as it is to wear a fancy waistcoat and turned up trouser ends. The arts and divinity men sedately avoid these last three fashions.—London Chronicle.

The Forgotten Picture.

Mr. Hope Moncrieff recalls in "London" a curious story of Lord [illegible]. The one noble taste he had was for the collection of pictures, which he is said to have bought [illegible] that when [illegible] agent to find him a picture which, [illegible] turned out, he had bought three or four years earlier!

Fossils and Gold.

In Alaska the bones and often the entire bodies of extinct animals, such as the mammoth, the mastodon, the reindeer and the bison, are found most abundantly in layers of soil directly above gold bearing gravels. So intimate is this association between fossil animal remains and auriferous deposits that one scientist who has explored Alaska says fossils serve prospectors as indexes of the metallic richness of the soil. In ancient times both gold and the bones of animals were deposited at the bottoms of valleys by action of rivers and smaller streams, many of which have now disappeared; consequently the appearance of fossils is, it is claimed, an almost certain indication that gold will be found in the neighborhood. The [illegible] of many saloons are ornamented with huge tusks and antlers unearthed in the diggings.—New York Tribune.

Cheering Up Thuse.

James Whitcomb Riley was going up the steps of the statehouse in Indianapolis one day when he met his friend Warren G. Sayre. The two had been close friends for years.

"Good morning, Mr. Riley," said Mr. Sayre in greeting.

"Why, hello, Warren!" Mr. Riley replied. "How are you?"

"Never felt better in my life. You are looking well."

"I don't know," said the poet; "I sometimes feel the weight of years, for you know I am getting old."

"Nonsense! Nonsense!" Mr. Sayre remarked with considerable emphasis. "You don't look old. In fact, you don't look a bit older now than when I first saw you."

"Perhaps that is true, but I feel age coming on. I was just thinking as I came up these steps about old Methuselah. I imagined I could see him driving along the road in his big wagon. He met an old friend who was sitting on a rail fence at the side of the road. 'Why, hello, Thuse!' says the friend. 'How are you?'

"'Oh, pretty fair for an old man,' said the patriarch. 'But I'm getting along in years.'

"'Oh, bosh, Thuse! You don't look old. How old are you, Thuse, anyway?'

"'I'm 969,' he answered.

"'Well, well, I never would 'a' thought it!' said the friend. 'Why, Thuse, you don't look a day over 900.'"—Harper's Weekly.

A Card Sharp's Trick.

A Moscow card sharp has confessed that he has been winning money at the chief clubs for thirty years past by the following trick: On the pretext that his eyes were weak he invariably wore dark spectacles at night. His favorite game was one called "bank," in which the eights and nines are the most important cards. In his waistcoat pocket he kept a preparation of phosphorus and by touching the backs of cards which he wished to mark he made them slightly luminous. His dark spectacles enabled him to see the small phosphorous marks, which were invisible to the other players. After a few deals with a pack he could play with absolute certainty.

Intensive Cultivation.

"Intensive cultivation," so called, has reached its highest state of perfection in the market gardens lying about Paris, where land rent runs to $250 an acre or more a year and four crops are taken from the soil between February and November, and on the island of Guernsey, in the English channel, where farming land is valued at $1,200 an acre—two instances that move all writers upon agricultural topics to wondering awe—and yet in the near vicinity of Boston gardeners growing lettuce, radishes and cucumbers under glass are clearing $3,000 to $4,000 an acre a year without attracting more than passing notice.—National Magazine.

THE SPORTS COAT A POPULAR PLAY MODEL

Many of the more practical of grown up styles are copied for the small girl. The sports coat is one of these. It is ideal for school or play as it is warm without being heavy and the vivid colors in which they are fashioned are particularly becoming to bright eyes and rosy cheeks.

The raglan, the kimono and the yoke are used in these small coats, the brightest of plaids and double faced coatings.

Number 8133 is a design for a child of from six to fourteen. It is developed in a double faced coating in one of the lightweight woolens, dark blue faced with scarlet. The collar, cuffs and belt are of the scarlet and scarlet bone buttons add an attractive finish.

This coat may be copied in size 10 with 2 yards of 54-inch coating material.

One of these smart simple little frocks for the school girl is shown in No. 8150. It is made in a dark blue, hard finished serge, with collar and cuffs of bright green satin.

Features of the dress are the wide armholes, the surplice closing which is strong in favor at the moment and the plain two-piece skirt.

To copy this model for a girl of 16 it requires 4½ yards of 36-inch material with ½ yard of lace for the chemisette.

Number 8133—sizes 6 to 14.
Number 8150—sizes 14 to 18.
Each pattern 15 cents.

"Does it say what happened to the other half."

"No, but there was worse to follow. According to the report, Taylor then fell altogether to pieces."—Word of Golf.

WORMS! YES, THAT'S IT WORMS IS THE TROUBLE—

Many Suffer From Them and Do Not Know It.

Many go to an early grave on account of them and have been pronounced to have had brain fever or some other complaint.

Prof. Mulvenny Comes to the Rescue.

His Wonderful Remedies are saving thousands of lives.

Why not try his remedies, they are sure, certain and harmless.

Stomach worms are round like earth worms, and measure from 6 to 16 inches in length, the large ones being about the size of a lead pencil in thickness. They are white and sometimes pink in color; they infest the stomach and small intestines, and sometimes great numbers are found to exist. One of my customers claim one of his children passed thirty from the use of my remedy. It does not require much thought to come to the conclusion that these worms are very dangerous, as they cause fever, convulsions, fits, etc. Many persons have died from worms, and they have been known to crawl out of their mouth and nose after death. Just imagine the suffering and terrible agony a child or adult must experience with these disgusting and loathsome creatures crawling about in the stomach and bowels. There is no doubt that they are constantly taking the nourishment that should go to make a strong, healthy person. Is it any wonder that your child is cross, irritable and sickly? Adults are also restless, melancholy and miserable from the same cause, and are sometimes treated for dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other complaints. My remedy is in liquid form and is an excellent remedy to build up the system, and can be taken for some time after the worms have been expelled to build up the system, which generally requires it, as the stomach and bowels are generally in a weak and debilitated condition, caused by the ravages of these undesirable pests. My remedy, known as Mother's Friend, is pleasant and agreeable to take and is a life-saver for children, as it not only destroys worms but strengthens and builds up the child, cures wetting of the bed, convulsions and fits; destroys pin worms. The price is $1.00. My remedy known as D'Well is much better for adults, and is the greatest nerve remedy on earth. Cures all nerve troubles, cleanses the system, restores lost energy and is a life saver. D'Well is a microbe killer, also a worm killer; microbes and worms cause all kinds of disease. D'Well kills the cause, also kills blood poison. Sold only by Prof. Mulvenny. Write for further information free.

Our Point of View

If the headaches were to come in advance of the jags there would be no need of New Year's resolutions.

◆

The British government has announced its intention of going after the Mad Mullah again, This is calculated to make him still madder.

◆

We have already seen enough to convince us that one great need of the human familu is a non-skiddable New Year's resolution.

◆

It is said that garlic is a cure for tuberculosis, but if it comes into general use there will be an imperative demand for the isolation of consumption.

◆

The Hon. James Bryce is so democratic in his ideas and ways that we are inclined to believe that he had to be tied to a post while they attached to him the title of vicount.

◆

It is said that in the new tariff which parliament will give the country pumpernickel will come in but not knowing what pumpernickel is this h,f,j, refuses to join in the general applause.

◆

An anti-liquor bill may be introduced in the Ontario Legislature at the ensuing session. It provides that no one in the Province can receive a shipment of liquor in excess to one gallon, and that to do this he must possess a physician's certificate stating that he is physically in need of it. This is going to be a very busy and prosperous year for the doctors.

◆

C. P. R. HELPING AGRICULTURE.

The C.PfR. is co-operating with Macdonald College in the desire of the latter to improve the status of agriculture in the province. Meetings have been arranged at Shawville, Lachute, Huntingdon, Cowansville, Waterloo and Cookshire. The meetings will give an opportunity for free discussion in respect to the important question in which the C.P.R. is deeply interested—how to improve soil management and production. Every farmer in the neighborhood will have an opportunity to discuss his own and his neighbors' problems with a view to find ultimate solutions. Many farmers and farmers' sons have not the time to take a regular course, lasting two years or more; but at this slack time of the year it is expected that many will avail themselves of the opportunity of taking short courses in stock raising, poultry, horticulture and kindred matters.

The course in live stock, dairy cattle and sheep will form the principal attraction. One particular featore is the idea and attempt to get at the younger generation. Special provision is made accordingly at the various points for talks on the creation of school gardens—gardens in which the young people will have a special ownership, with free seeds and prizes lor certain kinds and qualities of growth. The C.P.R. is interested in helping this movement along, as it is in line with the work which it has done and is doing in the Northwest—work which includes betterment in every relation of farm life. This is probably enlightened selfishness, for the better and more intelligent and intensive farming means to the company better business in every way and a degree of efficiency wgich will, in time, give the country a new and influential character for its farming perfection.

New Treatment Now Advocated For Bronchitis

Is Having Wonderful Success, and is Making Most Remarkable Cures.

For bronchitis a different form of treatment is now advocated. It consists of a scientifically devised vapor that penetrates to the uttermost recesses of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Every spot that is sore, every surface that is irritated is at once bathed with soothing balsams and healing essences that make chronic bronchitis an impossibility.

This treatment now so universally employed in bronchitis, throat troubles, colds, etc., is called CATARRHOZONE. It acts just as air of the pine woods act, as a healing antiseptic remedy for all diseases of the breathing organs.

Just think of it—a remedy that can be carried with the very air you breathe to the seat of bronchial or catarrhal inflammation. A remedy powerful enough to kill germ life and yet so healing that disease flees before it. Catarrhozone is truly a wonderful remedy. In many lands it has won its way and is affording grand results to sufferers from colds, catarrh, throat weakness, asthma and bronchitis. There is no sufferer from a grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find a cure in Catarrhozone, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men throughout many foreign lands. Large size lasts two months and costs $1.00 and is guaranteed; small size 50c., sample size 25c., all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

ASSESSMENT ROLLS.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I would suggest that it would be a very popular move if your paper to which I have subscribed for years, publish the assessment rolls. It is, I think, an open secret that there is great injustice done to the working classes and mechanics in the relative assessment of their houses as compared with some of the houses of the rich and store property.

Oriental Barbers vs. Oriental Hotel

After the preliminary game between Peterborough and Bowmanville last night, the big game of the night was pulled off. Scene 2 was a pretty one. We "Donahue" staged the affair, but the "Troop" who performed in the tragedy had some pretty close shaves. Jimmy Lewis' artists can weild a razor pretty good, and a hockey stick, while not a razor, will shave almost as clean when handled by experts The hotel staff say they have quite a few sore spots to-day after the application of wood they received last evening. The game was not all "June Clover" for the Tonsorial Kings however, as they had to contend with as "dry" a bunch of hockey experts as Brock street has ever seen. Most teams carry a mascot of some kind. The hotel staff carrying a "pigeon." It is a sign of good luck. The fair sex like "pigeons," they are the real standing, etc., the Barbers were favorites, and the game was bound to be "on edge." "turtle doves." Of course, notwith- The referee's bell bothered the hotel boys considerably. Instead of stopping play when it rang they moved about three times as fast. The game was plugged full of interesting incidents, and the score was really a tie, but after a recount in the presence of officials, etc., it was found to be—5 for Barbers, 6 for the Hotel staff. We would like to have stayed longer, and would have willingly paid another 15c per, but the boys were jingling in the vicinity of the exit, so we ducked.

HERE AND THERE

Park, at centre, played his usual brilliant game last night, all the time. He receives the passes and shoots like lightning, and his speed last night was the feature of the game

James, the little goaltender of the Petes, has made a great hit with the fair sex. "Why, he has a face like a girl's" said a young lady "on the fence" last night. "Yes; and an eye like a hawk's when someone tries to score," said her friend. Which compliment do you like best, "Janie"?

In Fred Kelly, the fast wing man, the Petes have undoubtedly the most gentlemanly player in the O. H. A. "Kelly" has only drawn one penalty this season, and that was for a very small offence in the Belleville game here.

Harvey Sproule, who refereed the Belleville-Peterborough game last week, picks the locals to land the pennant. Well, you won't be far out, Harvey, take it from us.

The sporting population of Peterborough ought to be thankful for the fact that our city has not yet been touched by professional hockey. The scenes enacted at some of the N.H.A. games are a disgrace, and the brand of hockey dished up by the teams in the Inter. O. H.A. is every bit as good, if not better, than that seen in professionalism, whilst the absence of that rowdyism and "rough house" tactics known only to the "moneyed" ranks is very refreshing. Here's to the amateurs, every time.

The star in a Bank League fixture in Toronto this week was none other than our friend "Reg" Bloomfield, of Marmora fame, who played for the Dominion Bank against the Standard. Score 11-6 for Dominions. "Reg." played rover, and scored four of the eleven goals.

Heffernan, the T.R. and A.A. defence man, and an old Peterborough boy, was removed to the General Hospital, Toronto, in an effort to get him back to health to play this winter.

The Toronto Star has the following to say: "Jerry Coughlin, the Peterborough boy, is playing great hockey for Ingersoll. The soft ice bothered Coughlin in his stick handling."

Captain Giroux played his usual heady game last night. Cyril is a favorite with the Peterborough crowd and always holds his end up well on the team.

Have Been An Untold Benefit

NEW BRUNSWICK WOMAN PRAISES DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

She Suffered for Four Years, and the Doctor Could Not Help Her, But Dodd's Kidney Pills Gave Her a New Lease of Life.

Perton, Carleton Co., N.B., Jan. 21.—(Special).—"I find Dodd's Kidney Pills the best kidney medicine I have ever used. They have been of untold benefit to me."

The speaker is Mrs. John S. Dickinson of this place. She is enthusiastic in her praises of the great Canadian kidney remedy, and not without reason.

"I suffered from kidney trouble that started in a cold," she continues, "and for four years I was never free of it. I was treated by a doctor, but he did not seem to be able to do me much good.

"I had rheumatism and neuralgia, and my joints were stiff; my muscles cramped, and I was always tired and nervous. I perspired freely with the slightest exertion. I was depressed and low spirited, my limbs swelled, and I had a dragging sensation across the loins.

"Nine boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new woman of me."

Are not Mrs. Dickinson's symptoms those of any rundown, wornout woman? They are also the symptoms of kidney disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills give new life to rundown women by curing their kidneys.

THE OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS CO., LIMITED

MESSRS. HANSON BROS.
Montreal.

Montreal, 24th December, 1913.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to your recent purchase of $600,000 Six Per Cent. 1st Mortgage Series "C" bonds of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, I now have pleasure in giving you the following information regarding this Company.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Limited, was incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada in 1902, and succeeded to the business of the late W. W. Ogilvie, which had been in successful operation for many years. Throughout the Company's history, its policy has been to keep its various plants and machinery in the highest and most modern state of efficiency.

PROPERTIES

The Company owns mills with an aggregate capacity of 19,000 barrels a lay, situated at the following points: Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, and Medicine Hat; two barrel factories, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day, at Montreal and Winnipeg; nine terminal elevators, situated at Montreal, Winnipeg, Fort William and Medicine Hat, with a capacity of 4,200,000 bushels; 134 interior elevators, distributed throughout the Canadian North-West, with a storage capacity of 4,195,000 bushels; and warehouses for the storage of flour at various points.

In addition the Company maintains branch offices in 11 of the principal cities, covering the entire Dominion of Canada.

EARNINGS

The net trading profits for the last five years, after making due provision for depreciation and maintenance, but before allowing for bond interest, were as follows:—

Year ending August 31, 1909	$716,054
" " " 31, 1910	541,924
" " " 31, 1911	481,310
" " " 31, 1912	521,431
" " " 31, 1913	576,734
Being an average for the five years of	$567,490

The total bond interest required, including this issue, amounts to $141,000. Bond interest requirements are, therefore, covered four times. These earnings do not include the profits of the new Medicine Hat Mill, as it was only completed in July, 1913. The cost of this new plant, together with that of a number of new interior elevators, is being met partly out of the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds you have purchased the balance being taken from profits.

The Company's good-will, trademarks, patent rights, etc.. which were formerly valued in the Company's books at $1,000,000, are now carried at the nominal figure of one dollar. This does not mean that they have ceased to be a value. On the contrary, we who are connected with the management believe them to be most important assets, convincing proof of which is the fact that the reputation established by the name "Ogilvie" has enabled this business to be carried on with substantial progress year by year for over a century, as the founding of the business dates back to 1801.

The dividend record of the Company has been as follows:

Years	1903	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908	1909	1910	1911	1912	1913
Preferred ...	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.
Common		7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	7 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.	8 p.c.

In addition the Company paid a stock dividend in 1908 to the Common shareholders of 100 per cent.

Application will be made in du course to have these bonds listed on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES R. HOSMER,
President.

The Company's total assets, as shown by their Statement of 31st August, 1913, after writing down the value before attached to the goodwill from $1,000,000 to $1, amounted to $8,880,737.32. After deducting from this amount the entire ordinary or floating liabilities of the Company, there still remained assets almost equal to three times the entire bonded debt of the Company, including this issue.

The bonds are a first mortgage on the new Medicine Hat mill and elevator, and on other properties, including over thirty elevators throughout the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Copy of the Trust Deed describing the mortgage may be seen at our office.

The Trust Deed provides that the Company will pay principal and interest without deduction for any tax imposed or hereafter imposed by the Dominion of Canada, or by any Province or Municipality thereof, which the Company may require to pay or retain therefrom under or by reason of any present or future law.

The legality of this issue has been passed on and approved by A. J. Brown, Esq., K.C., of the firm of Brown, Montgomery and McMichael, Montreal, and a copy of his opinion will be furnished on application.

The bonds will be delivered free of expense, at any point in Canada or the United States, and on the basis of par of exchange in Great Britain. Orders may be telegraphed or telephone at our expense.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a sound and safe investment.

FULL PROSPECTUS OF THIS ISSUE WILL BE FURNISHED ON APPLICATION

BREAK THE NEWS TO MOTHER.

While the shot and shell were screaming upon the battlefield,
The boys in blue were fighting their noble flag to shield;
Came a cry from their brave captain:
"Look, boys! our flag is down;
Who'll volunteer to save it from disgrace?"
"I will, a young voice shouted, "I'll bring it back or die!"
Then sprang into the thickest of the fray;
Saved the flag, but gave his young life, all for his countr-'s sake—
They brought him back and softly heard him say:

Just break the news to mother, she knows how dear I love her,
And tell her not to wait for me, for I'm not coming home;
Just say there is no other can take the place of mother .
Then kiss her dear, sweet lips for me, and break the news to her

From afar a noted general had witnessed this brave deed,
"Who saved our flag? Speak up, lads; 'twas noble, brave, indeed!"
"There he lies, sir," said the Captain; he's sinking very fast—"
Then slowly turned away to hide a tear.
The General, in a moment, knelt down beside the boy,
Then gave a cry that touched all hearts that day;
"It's my son, my brave young hero,
I thought you safe at home!"
"Forgive me, father, for I ran away."

MADE ONE GREAT SPEECH TO SECURE PARDON FOR O'NEIL

His One Great Speech Was Wholly Lost on President Cleveland

Colonel Franklin Pierce Morgan of Washington and New York never made but one great speech, and the story of it is pathetic. His audience was Grover Cleveland, then president of the United States, and his purpose was to secure a pardon for a murderer named O'Neil, in whom the colonel had become interested.

"I'll never forget that day," said the colonel in telling about the incident. "I had told Dan Lamont the day before that I intended to ask Cleveland to pardon O'Neil, who was a creature of the dark places at times, but a pretty good fellow at that. Cleveland had taken the precaution to send to the department of justice and get the papers in the case.

"I got up early the next morning, had a massage and was feeling tiptop. I got in to see Cleveland, and I spoke twenty minutes. Never in my life, before or since, have I been so eloquent as I was pleading for that fellow O'Neil. The end of every sentence I uttered brushed the edges of a cloud. I concluded my argument confident that I had swept the president off his feet.

"'Mr. Morgan,' he said, 'is that all you have to say on behalf of your friend?'

"Mind you, he said 'friend.'

"'Yes, Mr. President,' I said, 'I think that's all.'

"'Mr. Morgan,' he replied, 'never so long as I am in the White House shall that consummate scoundrel—consummate scoundrel, mind you—get out of the penitentiary.'

"What's the use of eloquence, anyhow?" concluded the colonel.—Buffalo Express.

DAILY SHORT STORY

'TWIXT LOVE AND DEATH.

Millie Averted a Tragedy and Brought About Happiness.

By MARTHA McC. WILLIAMS.

If Millie had not worn her blue gown the story might have been different. Whether it was the color or the stuff of it or the way it clung to and molded her slim suppleness nobody could say, but the fact was patent—somehow it transformed her from a very pretty girl into an elfland queen. Millie was, you see, a Spanish blond, with velvet dark eyes and hair of the palest gold. Small wonder in the blue gown she swept John Eustace off his feet and made him forget some things he ought to have remembered—his betrothed, Alice Ellison, for example.

Alice was as good as her plentiful gold, but stubby, dull colored and on the surface dull witted. She was, above all things, dutiful. Duty was, indeed, the early root of her love for John. If she had not happened to be born the Ellison fortune would have gone to John's father, Ellison Eustace. Her father had married in a fit of pique when he was on the edge of seventy. He lived to see his daughter nine years old and to impress upon her that she must marry her second cousin and so keep the money in the Ellison blood.

John, five years older than Alice, had accepted his fate philosophically. Until chance flung Millie across his path he had never repined. An only child and motherless, he had grown up his father's intimate comrade. Thus women, especially young women, had never worn for him the romantic glamour of unschooled youth. Still his father had by no means tried to put an old head upon young shoulders nor to breed in his son contempt for womankind. It was only that love and women were pushed to the background, reckoned mere episodes beside the rush and scurry of truly manly pursuits. Marriage was honorable in all men; marriage with Alice would be thrice honorable, safe and profitable. Thus when she came to eighteen John had a certain satisfaction in putting the ring upon her finger and even chafed a little over the fact that by her father's express desire she was to stay single until she was one and twenty.

He honestly believed himself in love and truly felt for her a tender fondness that had begun when, a sturdy little lad, he had guided her tottering baby steps. He meant always to guide, guard and cherish her as became a gentleman, even though in his swelling visions of the future she was no more than a dumb, submissive shade. If she would never be a brilliant figure, still less would she be one of whom a husband must needs be ashamed. Indeed, he was altogether a little more than content with the ordering of things until six months before his wedding day he came under Millie's spell.

He saw her first upon a spring morning full of hot, shining and languid ruffling airs. Dew still sparkled on the grass, and overhead in the green gold of new leafage robins fluted delicately the joy of life and love. To his enchanted eyes Millie embodied the shining, the bird song, the softness of the south wind, the warmth of the sun. What they said is immaterial. For two hours they walked together over the ragged lawn turf or stood in rapt contemplation of newly open roses. And then in a safe seclusion of greenest shade he drew her within his arms and kissed her, not lightly, but as one who takes what is supremely his own.

Then followed a heavenly fortnight. Eustace masterfully pushed out of his mind all thought that might mar this new bliss. He rarely spoke of his love and after that first kiss was sparing of demonstration. There was no need of it when each understood so perfectly what was in the other's heart. Yet at the end of every day's comradery Eustace had a sense of something impending ever drawing nearer. He refused to let himself look further than the next day's end, but somehow, somewhere, he knew he would be called to pay a bitter cost.

His chiefest care was for Millie. No harm must touch her, however it fared with him. She was so young, so innocently gay, so innocently foolish, he was doubly bound to protect her, even against himself. It was heaven to see her bloom and sparkle at his approach. She left herself so artlessly undefended now and again there came a lump in his throat. A man who could speak, who could even think lightly of her, would deserve death twice over.

So the idyl drifted through hours sunlit and starlit. Perhaps it was some ill star in its course that brought home Joe Cantrell, Millie's brother, who lived out in the big world and knew its ways. He came unannounced just as dusk fell down, making his way through the devious side path all tangled with sweet shrubs. When Millie met him a little later her eyes were starlike, her cheeks of damask bloom. But sight of her could not win him from his anger. He never explained anything. "You will be ready to go back with me two days hence," he said, frowning heavily. Millie got very white, but went silently toward the stair foot. As she was mounting it her brother said, with a taunting laugh: "Next time you choose to kiss and fondle a man take care that I am not in sight or that he is not engaged to marry another woman."

She knelt, shivering, by her bedside until she heard him go out after a hasty supper. And she was still kneeling when he came in, stumping heavily, well toward midnight. He stopped beside her father's high black secretary, flung down the lid with a bang, then after a minute came upstairs, still moving cautiously. But his footsteps did not mask another sound—the clicking of pistol locks. Intuitively she understood—he had strolled over to the Country club, picked a quarrel with Eustace and would have him out at daybreak next morning.

No thought of appeal to him entered to her. Instead there came a firm determination matching his own. She knew her name had not been mentioned in the quarrel quite as well as she knew herself its real root. The men must not fight. She could not have her brother's blood upon her conscience, still less her lover's. There was but one way to stop them, a way bitterer than death. Still, she set her foot toward it unfaltering.

She got up and sat by the window, watching with anxious eyes the wheeling stars, the waning moonlight. But at the first pale dawn light she was tensely alive. Below she heard a stealthy stir, the cautious opening of a door, with muffled voices and cautious steps outside. She got up and crept to her brother's room. Lighted candles still glittered there. Upon the table there was a brief will, the ink not dry in the heavily scrawled signature. Beside it was a briefer statement: "Let it be understood of all men if I die I shall have died in a man's quarrel, founded on no personal grudge, but resenting unjust aspersions upon my native state." She almost smiled over it. The native state counted to Joe for so very little in the ordinary course of life.

Twenty minutes later, just as the sun peeped over flaming trees, she came out in a little clearing upon a wooded hilltop and saw two men standing weapon in hand, face to face, ten yards apart. Three other men a little way off had scared, white faces, but neither combatant had lost wholesome color. Millie sprang between them, white as a dawn wraith, but with eyes like glowing coals. She flung up her arms and said clearly: "Fire, gentlemen! If anybody deserves death I do!"

"Millie, go back!" Joe Cantrell thundered. Eustace dropped his pistol and leaped to the girl's side. In her ear he whispered brokenly: "Darling, let him kill me. It is the best way out of it all."

Millie shrank from him a little. "There is no need for bloodshed," she said. Then, raising her voice so the seconds could hear: "I call all here to witness that I have not been deceived. I knew at the very first of John Eustace's betrothal. We have done no wrong to anybody. We—we love each other because we cannot help it. Oh, it is hard that my own brother brings me to such open shame!"

"Come home," Cantrell said roughly, flinging away his pistol and clutching her arm. Eustace caught the other hand, saying: "Stay with me, Millie! The whole world may go if I have you!"

"Goodby," Millie said, drawing away her hand. "I shall love you always, John, but your wife need not be jealous."

• • • • • • •

By the strange orderings of fate that was a true word. John Eustace went straight to Alice and told her all the truth. She gave him back his freedom and would have given him half her money only he would not have it. But he could not persuade Millie to marry him until Joe, the masterful, had wooed and won Alice Ellison and her fortune.

SUFFERERS FROM PILES!

ZAM-BUK HAS CURED THEM.

Friction on the hemorrhoid veins that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood, is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning. Thousands of persons have proved this. Why not be guided by the experience of others?

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, so I continued it, and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, 183-185 St. Joseph Street, St. Roch, Quebec, P. Q., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to everyone who suffers from piles."

Magistrate Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S., says: "I suffered long from itching piles, but Zam-Buk has now cured me."

Mr. William Keaty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N. S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. Itr LLL LL yyyy LLL vv bearable. I tried various ointments but everything I tried failed to do me the slightest good. I was tired of trying various remedies, when I heard of Zam-Buk, and thought as a last resource I would give this balm a trial. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin injuries and diseases, eczema, ulcers, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, chaps, cold sores, etc. 50c. box from all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

EVERYBODY [illegible]

A MEXICAN MAGNATE.

Don Luis Terrazas Owns the Largest Farm in the World.

The world probably contains nothing anywhere else that can compare with the splendid estate of Don Luis Terrazas, in the state of Chihuahua, Mexico. This fortunate magnate is said to own the greatest farm in the world. It includes 8,000,000 acres of fertile land and extends 150 miles east and west and 200 miles north and south. On its mountains and through its valleys roam over 1,000,000 cattle, 700,000 sheep and 100,000 horses, these being tended by an army of 2,000 horsemen, herdsmen, shepherds and hunters. Each year at least 150,000 head of cattle and 100,000 sheep are slaughtered, dressed and packed, this ranch being the only one in the world which maintains its own slaughtering and packing plant. And this means a very considerable additional profit to its august and fortunate owner.

On this gigantic estate are five reservoirs, which cost $500,000, and 200 wells, which cost over another $500,000. Don Luis Terrazas is a scientific farmer and raises every kind of grain in his great fields. His homestead is declared to be the finest farmhouse in existence in any country. It is capable of accommodating 500 guests at a time and was erected at an expense of $2,000,000. It is a veritable country palace, and the gardens are more carefully laid out and the stables are more costly than those of any emperor. On the homestead alone are employed over a hundred male servants.

Jerusalem.

"On all sides we see the evidences of skepticism, which often reaches the level of ridicule, for things which we and those who have gone before regarded as sacred," says a Palestine letter in a German paper, "but here in Jerusalem the shocks to our reverence are less frequent and less severe. Come hither quickly, then, all ye who would see it before the march of modernity sweeps over the sacred city and before its atmosphere suffers still greater changes. To the tramway and other things modern electric light, power and heating are soon to be added by a French company. The waters of the river Jordan, which fall more than 800 feet near the Lake of Galilee, will furnish the power. Think of a great electrical plant furnishing power for many miles doing business under the name of 'the Galilee Electric company!' Can you fancy it complacently?"

Against Capital Letters.

The Society of Danish Pedagogues and the Danish Literary association in joint session recently discussed the "excessive use of capital letters" and passed a resolution urging the minister of education to issue orders to teachers in public schools through the kingdom "to restrict the use of capital letters to the beginning of sentences and proper names." In explanation it was urged that "in writing our native language the average person halts and is uncertain as to the big letters, and only good could result from using them only as we have indicated."

Palmed the Jewels.

Mary Andre was a palmist in Trieste, Austria. When she examined the hands of well to do women she generally predicted some impending misfortune and explained this was very likely due to their possessing some unlucky jewel. A number of her clients intrusted the palmist with their jewelry in order that she might discover which was the offending stone. Frau Andre must have had a large clientele, for she suddenly disappeared from Trieste with $25,000 worth of this jewelry and has not been heard of since.

What Crete Would Cost.

Present trouble in the east has brought out the sardonic humor of at least one Turkish gentleman.

"Would your highness," said an enterprising Italian journalist to the grand vizier of the time, "consent to the sale of Crete?"

"Certainly," replied the Turk. "Any one can have it for the price we paid—twenty years' war."

The Other Half.

A man owes 4 cents. He pays 2 cents one day, 1 cent the next, one-half cent the next, and so on, one-half each day of the debt. Now although on the fourth day he only owes one-quarter of a cent, if he should be endued with the gift of immortality and he should continue to pay the debt at the same ratio, he could never pay all of it. There would always remain that half of the former day's payment, provided he had coins small enough to make the payment.

Pays Him to Stay Home.

A [illegible] matron proudly exhibited the lock of her front door to the [illegible] caller. It was an intricate looking affair, resembling a gate more than it did a door lock. "[illegible]," explained the woman, pointing to a tiny knob inside the door, "and you have fixed the bolt so it can't be shut back with the key. To release the [illegible] you've got to drop a coin in the slot outside. The only piece of money that will go in is a five dollar gold piece. The idea is my own. A locksmith [illegible] worked out the mechanical part of it for me. Every night at 10:30 I adjust the coin [illegible]. If my husband is out after that hour it costs him $5 to get in. He stays home evenings, as a rule."—New York Sun.

Money No Object.

"I don't care anything about it myself, for I'm no judge of such things," said Mr. [illegible], "but my wife wants me to buy a real old violin, and she says they come high. Got any?"

"We certainly have," responded the dealer. "Here's one in this showcase, genuine Stradivarius, that you can have for $[illegible]."

"She said she thought they came higher than that. Haven't you some that are a little—er—stradivariuser than this one?"—Chicago Tribune.

Another [illegible]

"What did the [illegible] look like to you when you were in the [illegible]?"

"Well," answered the [illegible] thoughtfully, "it resembled an [illegible] gold dollar much magnified."—Washington Star.

POET OF MANY VERSES.

An Anecdote of Pellegrin, an Eighteenth Century Bard.

The impecunious French poets of the middle eighteenth century used to consort at the cafes, where sometimes they would pick up customers. One of the worst and at the same time the most facile of the bards was Pellegrin, of whom a characteristic story is told in "An Eighteenth Century Marquise." One day a newcomer entered the cafe and began complaining that he was going to be married and had no epithalamium for his wedding. Pellegrin hastened to offer one of his own compositions. A deal was soon arranged, and the price agreed upon was 20 sous a verse. The poet disappeared. The bridegroom was presently accosted by a stranger, who began a conversation on various subjects and suddenly said:

"By the by, my friend, what price are you paying Pellegrin?"

"Twenty sous a verse."

"H'm."

"Is that too dear?"

"No"—doubtfully—"not if you fixed the length of the poem."

"I never thought of doing that."

"When is he to bring your epithalamium?"

"Tomorrow morning."

"Tomorrow morning!" cried the stranger. "Why, you must be rolling in money!"

"What do you mean?"

"That you will have to pay for at least a thousand verses."

"Oh, what a fraud!" exclaimed the bridegroom and rushed off to find Pellegrin in his attic. The versifier had just completed his hundredth verse.

WINDMILL POINT ELEVATOR, MONTREAL.

While the Grand Trunk has been looking well to the matter of elevator construction in Western Canada to provide storage capacity for the ever-increasing grain crop, provision has also been made for shipping facilities at Montreal. In the spring of 1906 what is known as the Windmill Point Elevator, located in the busy harbor of Montreal, was completed and put into operation. Its capacity was 1,080,000 bushels. Its situation is so well planned that it is easily accessible to both lake or ocean vessels, with railway tracks alongside. To provide additional accommodation a large annex has just been completed, with a capacity of 1,070,000 bushels, making a net capacity of 2,150,000 bushels. There are in this new building 28 concrete tanks, 25 feet in diameter and 100 feet in height, arranged at right angles in four rows, with seven tanks in each row. The tanks are constructed of reinforced concrete, having their adjacent sides rigidly united, so that the four-pointed, star-shaped spaces between the circular tanks may be used for storage as well as the circular tanks themselves. The large tanks hold approximately 33,000 bushels apiece, and the star-shaped or interstice bins hold approximately 5,000 bushels each. It is the second largest grain bin on the Grand Trunk System, the largest being located at Fort William, with a capacity of 5,700,000 bushels.

CHAMPAGNE BARRELS.

Bismarck Demanded 5,000 From France, but Got Only Five.

Germany's governmental policy is to encourage the exports of brain, labor, sunshine, air and water. There is nothing in sugar, in alcohol, but carbon, gathered from the air, but hydrogen and oxygen gathered from the rainwater, transformed by the sun into beet plants, grown in fields, tilled and weeded by hand, the beet pulp being transformed by other hands and skilled knowledge into sugar and alcohol.

Denmark and Holland export butter, which takes nothing from the soil. The French import Asiatic silk, weave it at Lyons and export the finished product. They export wine by analysis 87 per cent water, 10 per cent alcohol and 0.03 per cent aroma and bouquet. Water and alcohol take nothing from the soil, but the aroma makes the wine worth from $30 a pound down.

In the peace negotiations between Bismarck and the French in 1871 it was not the money indemnity, it was not the loss of territory, that prolonged negotiations. Bismarck bethought himself to demand 5,000 empty old champagne barrels impregnated with the aroma, the bouquet producing ferment, and this the French refused. They had consented to pay $1,000,000,000; they broken heartedly gave up Alsace and Lorraine, but the bouquet of their priceless wines Bismarck should not have, and in the end they compromised on five barrels.

The French were instinctively governed by superual common sense.—Harrington Emerson in Engineering.

Patti at Fifty-two.

Adelina Patti wrote in a letter to Mr. Klein in 1895: "Do you not feel proud of your little friend, who was fifty-two last month and has been singing uninterruptedly every year from the age of seven? I am really beginning to believe what they all tell me—that I am a wonderful little woman!"—Musical Life in London.

TOURISTS IN BERLIN.

They Should Be Careful In Selecting a Boarding House.

A case has occurred in Berlin showing the unpleasant experience which may occur to tourists who engage board in a boarding house not well recommended. Three American women were the victims.

In the new part of the town, the so called American quarter, a neat sign of "Pension" attracted the women, and they engaged board there. According to the German custom, they paid the boarding house charges a month in advance. Two days afterward the landlady went to a hospital, and the next day the domestic girl of all work took her departure. Food and service ceased, and the host, a count, moved into the attic for some reason unknown to the Americans.

The Americans protested that their money should be refunded or they should have food and service. The host told them he could supply neither as he had no money. The women consulted their friends and were advised to make the best of the bargain and camp out for the rest of the month.

Some days later the host appeared in their rooms and proceeded to remove the curtains from the windows. The women appealed to an American who happened to be calling, but the only result of his interference was a scuffle with the landlord, who knocked him out with a bunch of heavy keys.

Two of the women then sought police aid at the nearest station, a mile away. The officials laughed at them, telling them it was a private matter and no concern of theirs.

In the meantime the landlord returned with two men and took down the curtains, informing the women that he would be back at 8 o'clock the next morning to remove the furniture. The women then sought the aid of the American consul general, who advised them to move out quietly and offered them hospitality for the night. They accepted the offer, but did not get their things away before half past 2 in the morning.

Incidents like this are not rare in Berlin's American colony.—New York Sun.

What He Found Out.

An Italian journalist, Signor Tommaso Gilesi, has just had some disagreeable experiences. Desirous of knowing something of the lunatic asylums from within, with the object of ameliorating the lot of the insane, he presented himself at the gates of the Cimarosa asylum and asked for an audience of the king of Italy. The attendants showed him the door, and then he ran foul of the police and in the end found himself interned in the asylum. The doctors examined him and finding him far from tractable, administered an emetic. Then they gave him a shower bath and next vaccinated the enterprising journalist. After that they held a consultation in the presence of the "lunatic," whose bona fides they evidently suspected, and brutally but unanimously agreed that the only treatment in such a case was trepanning for a cancer on the brain. By this time Signor Tommaso Gilesi thought the best he could do was to confess. This he did and found himself at the police station. The magistrate, however, released him, observing that he thought the doctors had administered sufficient punishment.

LAPLAND BABIES.

For Their First Few Months They Live in Wicker Baskets.

Little Laplanders spend the first few months of their existence in baskets of wickerwork provided at the top with a conical framework too close for the baby to fall through and yet giving the infant plenty of light and air.

Before commencing her work for the day the Lapp mother places her child in the basket and hangs it on the limb of some nearby tree, occupation being found for the little one by stringing toys under a cord passed across the top of the basket.

Thus provided the child spends the entire day in the open and yet at the same time is guarded from the troubles and dangers of outdoor child life in other countries.

The basket idea curiously parallels the Indian idea of strapping the papoose into a [illegible] case, but the Lapp baby has the advantage over its Indian fellow in that its limbs are unrestricted and a certain amount of liberty of movement is afforded.

The child is carried from place to place in the same basket, the cord by which it is attached to a tree being slung over the shoulder.

Dogs of Other Times.

Swiss naturalists have recently presented to the Helvetian Society of Natural Science the results of their studies of the remains of dogs found among the ancient lake dwellings of Switzerland, the earliest of which date from the age of stone. It has been found that three different races of dogs existed there at that time, one of which resembled the Siberian sledge dog of today. Later, when the age of bronze dawned upon the Alps, two new species appeared, one being a shepherd dog and the other a hunting dog. All of these dogs were of northern origin, the canine types of the Mediterranean lands not having crossed the Alps.—Philadelphia Record.

WATERING THE STOCK.

Not In Wall Street, but In the Big Cattle Markets.

Water is the only thing in the marketing of live stock that figures clear profit. Feed corn at $1 per bushel, hay $20 a ton, the charges made by stockyards companies for yardage and the charge for selling made by commission companies tend to reduce the shipper's profit, but when he sees his bunch of cattle properly yarded, fed and quietly drinking at the water troughs he knows the amount of water the cattle drink will cost him nothing and will sell at as much per pound as the weight gained by expensive feeding.

If cattle at the big markets were yarded and sold without a chance to get water it would mean a large loss to shippers yearly.

The average steer or cow will drink twenty to fifty pounds of water at the marketing point, according to the distance it has been hauled and the length of time without water. The hog being much smaller and capacity for drink limited, the water fill seldom exceeds five pounds per head. Sheep drink little water at markets, but to get the proper fill due them the big sheepmen who cover several hundred miles with shipments bill their sheep to some feeding station near the market, hold them on feed and water several days and at the proper time resume the journey.

Dealers in live stock at the Kansas City yards say that weight gained by the use of water at the Kansas City stockyards in 1910 amounted to $5,000,000.—Kansas City Star.

THE STOLID BELGIANS.

Aviator Sopwith Thought He'd Startle the Peasants, but He Didn't.

Aviator Sopwith describes in the London Times how he landed in Belgium after flying across the English channel in twenty-two minutes:

"Making an aerial detour to avoid some hills, I endeavored to steer toward Chalons by the aid of a compass I carried with me, but I soon lost my way. Just as I was flying over a village about 800 feet high a very ugly gust caught my machine on one side and tilted it partly over. To my consternation the aeroplane refused to regain its normal position even when I exerted the full pressure of the small balancing planes fixed to the rear ends of the main planes. Just when I thought I should slide helplessly down through the air a field near a village presented itself. I planed down and sat still, quite exhausted.

"A Belgian peasant was working on the road near by. His nonchalance was amazing. He merely stopped his work in a leisurely way and gazed at me stolidly for several minutes. The apathy of the villagers, although they had never seen an aeroplane before, was indeed remarkable. Two old women to whose cottage I went did not appear at all astonished that I should have descended out of the air. All they wanted to know was what the weather was like in England."

Coronation Memoirs.

Perhaps the most calamitous of all coronation days in England was that of William the Conqueror.

After the coronation oath, whereby the new monarch promised to protect the Church and to execute judgment and mercy, the archbishop put the usual question:

"Will you have this Prince to be your King?"

A clamorous shout of assent from the assembled English so startled the Norman soldiers outside that they immediately set out burning and plundering, believing the English had revolted.

Charles Stuart had a most unfortunate day. The royal barge stuck in the mud of the Thames; the sermon sounded like a funeral oration; an earthquake shock was felt during the ceremony; and, finally, the herald announced him the "dubitable heir," instead of the "indubitable" heir.

When George III. was installed on the throne, the master of ceremonies forgot the Sword of State, and the chair and canopy for the banquet.

And as he moved down the Abbey with the great circlet on his head, the large diamond dropped out.

Have You Noticed It?

"Take a couple of coins out of your pocket," remarked the wise man, "one with King Edward's head and the other with Queen Victoria's."

"Right!" said the friend.

"Notice anything peculiar?" asked the wise man.

"Can't say I do," said the friend.

"Well, look again, and you will see that, while Queen Victoria is represented facing to the left, King Edward faces to the right.

"Now," he went on, "procure one of the George V. coins just issued from the British Mint, and you will see that our present King is shown facing to the left."

"What's the explanation?" demanded the friend.

"Oh, it's just the custom to make the head of the new monarch face in the opposite direction to that of his predecessor, on the coinage."

Jews Keep the Best.

The "best" fried-fish shops in London are kept by Jews. These shops charge higher rates than the others, prepared and [illegible] being the [illegible] price. In others, the humble [illegible] will purchase a slice of fish. Many places use grease, but the Jews use oil to fry the fish. Their shops are also said to be cleaner than the others.

The evening is the harvest time of the fried-fish shop. After six o'clock, when the tired and hungry workers are returning home, the seats in these places will all be occupied, and the rest of the shop filled with customers standing up devouring the luscious delicacy. The eel shops are particularly well patronized.

Merely a Hint.

"I can't go calling on you, as I intended," apologized Mrs. [illegible]. "The dentist is going to work on my teeth all this afternoon."

"Couldn't you come anyhow, dear?" cooed Mrs. [illegible]. "You could wear a veil and not talk much."—Chicago Record-Herald.

MENTAL DISCORD.

An Uncompromising Enemy to Happiness and to Health.

It is a law that every state of mind, whether good or bad, affects every cell in the system and is outpictured in the body, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. We are thus the arbiters of our fate through our thoughts, emotions and passions.

The time will come when we shall know how to refresh ourselves by mental chemistry—that is, by holding in our minds the antidotes of the things that have wearied us or vexed us, by holding the mental attitude which will neutralize the thought enemies that have thrown our bodies into confusion.

There is nothing so deadly to happiness as mental discord. It paralyzes the thinking ability and destroys the power of concentration and effectiveness.

All diseases and sickness of whatever kind are the outpicturing of some form of discord. If the mind is kept as happy as possible it is difficult for discord to get a foothold in the body. A happy mind is the best possible health producer, disease killer and discord destroyer.

For centuries man's happiness was looked upon by many earnest, thinking people as a condition largely beyond his control. They seemed to think that it depended mostly upon the temperament one happened to develop and that there were other things of so much more importance that we should not consider it too seriously or take precious time to cultivate it directly.

We are beginning to find, however, that even as an economical investment it pays immensely to make a business of being happy and being just as good to ourselves as possible, although not in a selfish way. We could not be good to ourselves in the higher sense by being selfish.

Bad Selection.

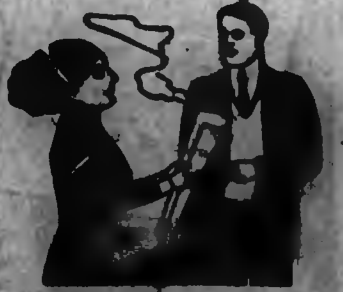
Discounting the News.



"Item in this paper says that the new mayor of a Kansas town has a set of whiskers that harvest more bushels to the acre than ex-Senator Peffer's."

"Great sport for cyclone when it hits town."

Soon to Be.

The old lawn mower has been hauled from the shed
And painted and oiled for the fray.
Ere long at the dawn will go leap from his bed,
And the neighbors will hear with dismay
The whirring of blades that play havoc with grass,
But not without plenty of noise.
And some will exclaim as they listen
"Alas,
Late napping has lost all its joys!"

PERSISTENT BEGGARS.

The More Egyptian Mendicants Get the More They Demand.

In Egypt one should never give baksheesh except for actual services rendered. Resist calmly but firmly every attempt at extortion. Never pay till the stipulated service is finished; then, after you have paid a little more than the bargain called for, turn a deaf ear to the protestations and entreaties that always follow. Bear in mind that the more baksheesh you give the more clamorous becomes the applicant. Real thanks and gratitude must not be expected for gifts.

A friend of mine once broke one of these rules just to see what would happen. As we passed through a little mud village twenty miles from Cairo he gave a sturdy beggar a millieme (half a cent). This beggar, accompanied by others, followed us to the edge of the village, asking for more. My friend then gave him a piaster (5 cents).

They followed us a hundred yards or so and were more persistent than before. When they showed a disposition to go back he gave them 5 piasters. They followed us half a mile and became very clamorous. I was afraid we should get into trouble and wanted him to stop it, but when they began to lag he gave them 20 piasters.

They followed us two miles, and the experiment might have ended seriously had we not met a company of travelers with a dragoman, who sent the beggars about their business. This may help you to understand Egyptian character.—Christian Herald.

Hold Your Breath and Ascend.

Scientists of Europe have lately been conducting experiments in the art of breathing and as a result have discovered some interesting conclusions. The theory is advanced that by abnormal control of the breathing powers, the breath being held for an unusually long time, a person may "ascend into the astral realm" and commune with things higher up. One of the scientists claims to have demonstrated that rapid breathing of pure air acts as an anaesthetic and renders a person immune to pain as long as it is maintained. Of course after the rapid inhalations cease the pain will be felt. By a little training a person may induce sound sleep by deep and rapid breathing for a few minutes.
